PREFACE

1. In the first two chapters of Turkish and Mongolian Studies, Royal Asiatic Society Prize Publication Fund, vol. XX, London, 1962 (hereafter referred to as Studies), I gave a brief sketch of the history of the Turkish peoples and of their languages from the earliest period (the eighth century A.D.) at which they become directly known to us down to the medieval period, and attempted to identify and name the various dialects and languages which evolved during that period.

2. The broad thesis of this sketch was that a unitary Turkish language, which was not genetically connected with any other language known to us, and specifically not connected genetically with the Mongolian and Tungus languages, took shape, almost certainly in the steppe country to the west and north of the Great Wall of China, at some date which we cannot now determine, but certainly long before the start of the Christian era; that this unitary language split into two main branches, 'standard Turkish' and 'l/r Turkish', not later than, and perhaps before, the beginning of the Christian era; and that during the first millennium A.D. standard Turkish slowly broke up into two or three dialects, which soon became independent languages. No substantial early texts of any form of l/r Turkish have survived, but there are in Chinese historical works a few words of Tavğaç, the language of the Turkish tribe called by the Chinese T'o-pa, who were the ruling element in the Chinese Northern, or Yüan, Wei dynasty (A.D. 386–535), and there are some Turkish loan-words in Mongolian and Hungarian which were almost certainly borrowed from an l/r language, by the Mongols probably in the fifth or sixth centuries, and by the Hungarians probably in the ninth. The slight remains of Proto-Bulgar are in a similar language and so too are a few funerary inscriptions of the Volga Bulgars of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. The material is, however, very scanty and I have made only a few references herein to words in l/r Turkish, and those mainly where the only surviving l/r language, Chuvash (Çuv.), throws light on the phonetic structure of individual standard Turkish words. These citations are from N. I. Ashmarin, Thesaurus linguae Tschuvaschorum, 17 vols., Kazan–Cheboksary, 1928–50, cited as Ash. followed by the volume and page.

3. As I pointed out in Studies, p. 53, an essential basis for any scientific study of the comparative etymology of the Turkish languages is a list of all genuine Turkish words which are known to have existed before the various medieval Turkish languages were subjected to a mass invasion of loan-words from the languages of the foreign peoples (mainly Arabs, Iranians, and later Mongols) with whom the Turkish peoples then came into contact. The present work contains just such a list. I have endeavoured to include in it all the words known to have existed in the earliest known standard Turkish languages, that is Türkü, Uyğur, including Uyğur-A, Old Kırğız, Xākāni, Oğuz, Kıpçak, and some minor dialects, prior to the Mongolian invasion at the beginning of the thirteenth century, excluding, except in a few special cases, words borrowed directly or indirectly from the Indian, Iranian, and Semitic languages. All references to 'early Turkish' and 'the early period' relate to the Turkish languages as we know them in the eighth to twelfth centuries inclusive.

4. One of the special characteristics of the Turkish languages is the manner in which derived words are constructed from the basic words of the language by a process of attaching suffixes to them. It is important, therefore, not merely to compile a bare list of these early words and their meanings, but also to indicate what kind of words they are (nouns, verbs, adverbs, etc.), verbs being distinguished from the rest by the attachment of a hyphen, e.g. at (noun) 'a horse', at- (verb) 'to throw', and in addition, in the case of derived words, to analyse their structure and indicate from what basic words they were derived, since this often explains their semantic evolution. This is all the more important since, even at the earliest date at which it becomes known to us, Turkish had already had a long history, in the course of which some basic words had already become obsolete, leaving the words derived from them, so to speak, 'in the air', with no obvious origin; on this point see, for example, Studies, pp. 140 ff. In giving these morphological explanations I have used the grammatical terminology customary among English scholars of Turkish, eschewing the new terminologies which are now taking shape in some academic circles.

5. My second purpose has been to establish the original meanings of all words in the list and trace their subsequent semantic evolution by illustrating each word by a quotation, or series of quotations, of passages in early texts in which they occur. For this purpose I have examined all the surviving texts in the languages enumerated above to which I have been able to obtain access. These texts are enumerated in paras. 20–6 below.

6. The only words which have been included in the list without at least one such quotation are a few which can first be traced in an actual Turkish text only in the medieval period, that is during the thirteenth to sixteenth centuries inclusive, but which demonstrably existed at an earlier period for such reasons as that they exist both in standard Turkish and in Chuvash (in a distinctive form peculiar to that language) so that they must already have existed before the split between standard and l/r Turkish, or that words derived from them are attested in the early period, or that they occur as loan-words in foreign languages in forms which indicate that they must have been borrowed in, or before, the early period. The texts which have survived from the early period are of course only a fraction of those which once existed and there are no doubt other words which existed in the early period but do not happen to occur in the texts which have survived. Some of these words occur in medieval texts or still exist in modern Turkish languages, but I have not attempted to identify and include them in the list, since the evidence that they were really early words is lacking.

7. A surprisingly large number of early words are hapax legomena (Hap. leg.), that is, occur only once, and have not so far been discovered elsewhere; they have, however, been included in the list because they seem to be genuine Turkish words and may later be discovered elsewhere; but the fact that they are Hap. leg. makes it impossible to determine whether they are correctly transcribed. Properly speaking the term implies one single occurrence, but it has been stretched to include verbs listed in Kaş. with an enumeration of the Perf., Aor., and Infin. forms, since experience shows that if a word is mis-spelt in the Perf. it may also be mis-spelt in the Aor. and Infin.

8. When an early word has survived into the medieval period, I have also added a selection of quotations from the texts enumerated in paras. 27–52, and when it still survives in one or more modern languages I have usually recorded this fact also. There are two reasons for doing this: the first is that evidence of this kind is often required to fix the exact meaning and pronunciation of the word in the early period; the second is that, as I understand it, the main purpose of compiling a dictionary of this kind is not only to help students to read and understand the meaning of early texts, but also to provide a solid basis for the etymological dictionaries of medieval and modern Turkish languages which are now being compiled or will be compiled in future. I must, however, make it clear that my quotations from medieval texts and enumerations of modern languages in which a word survives do not profess to be as comprehensive as the quotations from early texts.

THE SYSTEM OF TRANSCRIPTION

9. The problems of transcribing early Turkish texts are discussed at length in Studies, Chap. 3 and elsewhere, and it is unnecessary to cover the whole ground again. There is, of course, no means of discovering exactly how Turkish was pronounced between 900 and 1200 years ago; the alphabets employed are all to a greater or less degree unscientific; the most that can be achieved is a broad system of transcription which will give an approximate idea of the pronunciation of the words concerned in the languages enumerated in para. 3. The transcription alphabet which I suggested in Studies and which is used here can best be described as the official alphabet of the Turkish Republic with one minor modification (regarding the use of ğ and g) and a few extra letters to represent sounds which either do not exist in Republican Turkish (Rep. Turkish) or, if they exist, are not represented by a distinctive letter. This alphabet was selected on the basis that the phonetic structure of early Turkish was probably much the same as that of Rep. Turkish, apart from certain sounds for which special letters have been provided. These sounds can be tabulated as follows:

10. Vowels. There are four back and five front vowels, all of which may be either short or long. The only additional letter is é for close e, a sound which certainly existed in early Turkish and still survives at any rate in some dialects of Rep. Turkish.

Back	short	a i o u
	long	a: ı: o: u:
Front	short	e é i ö ü
	long	e: é: i: ö: ü:

These are arranged, when circumstances demand it, in the following order: a, a:, e, e:, é, é:, ı, ı:, i, i:, o, o:, u, u:, ö, ö:, ü, ü:; note that u, u: precede ö, ö:. The round vowels represent a range of sounds which merge imperceptibly into one another in the various languages.

In most, but not all, modern languages the vowels o and ö occur only in first syllables of words, but there is good evidence, which I assembled in 'Three Notes on Early Turkish', Türk Dili Araştırmaları Yıllığı, 1966, pp. 1 ff., that they were also used in the second and later syllables of many words in early Turkish. This evidence is, however, too fragmentary and imperfect, and in some cases too inconsistent, to justify restoring such spellings at the beginning of all the entries concerned. I have therefore entered all these words in the conventional spelling with u/ü in the second and later syllables. Where there is good evidence in regard to individual words that these vowels were originally o/ö I have entered these spellings in brackets, e.g. törü: (törö:), but I must emphasize that these sounds occurred in far more words than are singled out for this treatment, for example, in all words with the Suffix -uk/-ük (-ok/-ök).

11. Consonants. The conclusion reached in Studies was that the sounds which existed in early Turkish can be tabulated as follows, v. representing voiced and u. unvoiced sounds:

	Plosive		Fricative		Nasal	Affricate		Sibilant		Semi-vowel
	v.	u.	v.	u.	v.	v.	u.	v.	u.	v.
Labial	b	p	v	(f)	m					(w)
Dental	d	t	d̲		n			z	s
Denti-palatal						c	ç
Palatal					ñ			(j)	ş	y
Post-palatal	g̱	k	ʔ		ŋ
Velar	ʔ	k	ğ	x	ŋ

Liquids (v.) l r (Aspirate (u.) h)

The post-palatal sounds occur only in association with front vowels and the velar sounds only in association with back vowels, so only one letter, k, is required to represent both unvoiced plosives. The unvoiced labial fricative f probably did not exist in early Turkish as an independent sound, but seems to have arisen as a secondary form of v in association with some unvoiced sounds. The voiced palatal sibilant probably did not exist as an independent sound in early Turkish, but is noted as a secondary sound in one or two words containing ç, e.g. çöj- probably for çöz-. It also occurred in a few Sogdian loan-words, e.g. a:ju:n, and a few other words, e.g. üjme:, which are probably, but not demonstrably, Sogdian loan-words. The labial semi-vowel w was not a native Turkish sound, but evolved as a secondary form of v in one or two languages like early Oğuz and also occurred in some loan-words. The voiced post-palatal g was normally a plosive, but may in certain positions have been a fricative; conversely the voiced velar ğ was normally a fricative but may in certain positions have been a plosive. The unvoiced velar fricative x probably did not exist as an independent sound in early Turkish, but seems to have arisen as a secondary form of k in association with some sounds, and also occurred in a few loan-words, some of them very old like xağan and xan. Kāşğarī says that the simple aspirate h was not a native Turkish sound but occurred in some 'impure' dialects and in one or two words like ühi: in which it seems to be a secondary form of g.

The consonants are arranged, when the circumstances demand it, in the following order: b, p, v, (f), (w) ; c, ç, j ; d, ḍ, t ; ğ, (velar) k, x ; g, (post-palatal) k, (h) ; l ; m ; n, ŋ, ñ ; r ; s ; ş ; y ; z. Note that the letters are arranged in classes, and not in the normal conventional order, but that the first letters of the classes are arranged in the conventional order.

12. There are some particular difficulties in transcribing some early languages, of which the following are the most important:

(1) In Türkü there was a tendency towards dissimilation, so that when a suffix beginning alternatively with a voiced or unvoiced consonant like the Perf. suffix -dı:/-tı:/-di:/-ti: was attached to a verb ending in a consonant, the unvoiced form was attached to a voiced consonant and vice versa, e.g. erti:, tapdı:. In Xak. the position tended to be exactly the opposite, at any rate to the extent that suffixes with voiced initials were attached to verbs ending with voiced consonants, e.g. erdi:, although cases of suffixes with voiced initials being attached to verbs ending in unvoiced consonants are very common, at any rate in our manuscript of Kaş. Chronologically speaking Uyğ. lay squarely between Türkü and Xak. but nearly all the alphabets in which it is written are so ambiguous that it is quite uncertain whether it was a dissimilating language like the former or an assimilating language like the latter, or whether the change took place at some date between the eighth and eleventh centuries. I cannot therefore claim to have been in the least consistent in transcribing Uyğ. texts, usually following the scriptions in the published texts.

(2) The Runic alphabet (see Studies, pp. 51 ff.) in which nearly all the Türkü texts have survived, the Manichaean Syriac alphabet, and the Brāhmī alphabet had different letters for b and p and for g and post-palatal k, the other early alphabets did not, and the Brāhmī spellings are very erratic; there is indeed some doubt regarding the phonetic value of some of the letters of this alphabet in its Central Asiatic form. It is therefore almost impossible to decide how some words should be transcribed. In some cases assistance can be got from the modern languages, but some of these have undergone quite considerable phonetic changes.

(3) Only one of the alphabets concerned, Brāhmī, had separate letters for o, u, ö and ü, and the spellings of the texts in this alphabet are often inconsistent. In this case, however, the correct form can often be established if the word was a loan-word in Mongolian, or survives in modern languages; but the spellings in modern languages are often inconsistent, particularly as between languages in the Oğuz group and the rest.

13. The alphabet set out above has also been used for transcribing (or perhaps it would be more accurate to say transliterating, since the system adopted is purely mechanical) quotations from Arabic and Persian texts, with the addition of the following letters: ṯ, ḏ, ṭ, ḥ, ṣ, and ẓ, hamza ', 'ayn' and q for the unvoiced velar plosive, which must be distinguished from the unvoiced post-palatal plosive in these languages. In these languages, too, vowel length is indicated in the usual manner by a superscribed line, e.g. ā. The same letters are also used to transcribe Mongolian, but Sanskrit is transcribed in the conventional way.

THE ARRANGEMENT OF WORDS IN THE DICTIONARY

14. As pointed out above, the Turkish texts quoted in this book are written in a variety of alphabets, all more or less ambiguous, and it is often impossible to determine the correct transcription of a number of words; moreover, some words were pronounced slightly differently in different languages. It would, therefore, not be sensible to arrange the words in the strict alphabetical order to which we are accustomed in the dictionaries of European languages, since this would involve a great many double or multiple entries and greatly add to the difficulty of finding individual words. This problem and the means of solving it are discussed in detail in Studies, Chap. 4. The arrangement which emerged from this discussion can be summarized as follows:

(1) The words are broken down into fourteen groups, containing respectively words beginning with the following sounds:

(a)	vowels	(h)	m
(b)	labial plosives (b, (p))	(i)	n
(c)	denti-palatal affricate (ç)	(j)	r
(d)	dental plosives (t, (d))	(k)	s
(e)	velar plosives (k, (x))	(l)	ş
(f)	post-palatal plosives (k, (g))	(m)	y
(g)	l	(n)	z

(2) Each of these fourteen groups is divided into sub-groups; in each case the first sub-group contains monosyllables ending in an open vowel; the order of the remainder is determined in the case of the first group (words beginning with vowels) by the first consonant, and, if there is one, the second consonant or failing that the final vowel, if any, and in the case of other groups by the second consonant, and the third consonant, if any, or failing that the final vowel, if any. For purposes of classification these are the only significant sounds; vowels other than initial and final vowels are disregarded except for purposes of arranging the order of the words in a sub-group.

15. Each sub-group is identified by from one to three code letters representing the significant sounds enumerated above, the code letters being as follows:

A, or if one of the significant sounds is post-palatal g or k, E, representing vowels.
B representing labials, b, p, v, (f), (w) but not m.
C representing denti-palatal affricates c, ç, (j).
D representing dentals d, d̲, t but not n.
Ğ representing velars ğ, k, x but not ŋ.
G representing post-palatals g, k, (h) but not ŋ.
L representing l.
M representing m.
N representing n, ŋ, ñ.
R representing r.
S representing s.
Ş representing ş.
Y representing y.
Z representing z.

Each sub-group is divided into the following parts:

(1) monosyllables, if any, coded as Mon.
(2) monosyllabic verbs, if any, coded as Mon. V.
(3) disyllables, coded as Dis.
(4) disyllabic verbs, coded as Dis. V.
(5) longer words, coded as Tris.
(6) longer verbs, coded as Tris. V.

16. In order to locate a word in the dictionary:

(1) declensional and conjugational suffixes must be removed;
(2) the part in which it appears in the dictionary must be determined by converting the significant sounds in it into the appropriate code letters, account being taken of the fact whether it is either a verb or not a verb, e.g.:

u:	Mon. A
u:-	Mon. V. A-
ak, oğ, u:ğ, ok	Mon. AĞ
eg-, ek-, ög-, ük-	Mon. V. EG-
bu:	Mon. BA

çars	Mon. CRS
tüpi:, töpü:	Dis. DBA
tapın-, tevin-	Dis. V. DBN-
tügü:nük	Tris. DGN
tıltağlığ	Tris. DLD
yarlıka:-	Tris. V. YRL-

17. Within each part of a sub-group the words are arranged in the following order, which is designed to make it as easy as possible to locate a word written in any of the various scripts:

(1) in Mon. and Mon. V. in the alphabetical order of the vowel, and when two or more words have the same vowel (o and u, and ö and ü, respectively being regarded as identical since they are not distinguished in these scripts) in the order of the final consonants; thus in Mon. V. AD- the order is ad̲-, at-, ét-, ı:d̲-, it-, u:d̲-, ut-, üd̲-, öt-, üt-.

(2) in Dis. and Dis. V.,

(a) all words ending in a closed syllable precede those ending in an open vowel, thus in Dis. V. ADL- ütül- precedes atla:-;

(b) if two words contain, in addition to the letters represented in the heading, further consonants belonging to different classes, these determine their order; thus in Dis. V. SCD- sıçtur- precedes saçtaş-;

(c) in other cases, subject to (a) above, the order is determined by the first vowel; thus under Dis. V. SCD- the order is saçıt-, sıçıt-, suçıt-, süçit-, and under Dis. V. ADL- atla:-, eḍle:-, or, if the vowels are identical, by the order of the consonants following, thus under Dis. V. ADL- òḍul, uḍul-, otul-.

(3) in Tris. and Tris. V. the same principles are observed, mutatis mutandis.

18. Most words in the dictionary are preceded by code letters in capitals, only basic words of which the pronunciation is reasonably certain not being preceded by one. These letters have the following meaning:

(1) C compound; used when a word is composed of two shorter words, e.g. C içkur 'belt', composed of iç and kur. Such words are rare.

(2) D Derived; placed before every word other than a compound which is not a basic word, e.g. D evdil-, the Passive form of evdi:-.

(3) F Foreign: placed before words which are known to be loan-words, e.g. F a:ju:n borrowed from Sogdian. Words which are believed to be loan-words are preceded by ?F if definite proof is lacking.

(4) PU Pronunciation uncertain; see (6).

(5) S Secondary; placed before words which are secondary forms of other words in the list; such words are followed by a reference to the words of which they are the secondary forms.

(6) VU Vocalization uncertain. This prefix is used when the vocalization of a word is uncertain but there is no doubt about its consonantal structure, e.g.

VU eteç indicates that this is the most probable pronunciation of the word but that it might be ataç, atıç, atuç, etc. Words are preceded by PU when there is some doubt about the pronunciation of one or more consonants in them whether or not the vocalization is certain.

(7) When a word is known to have existed at an earlier date but was already obsolete by the eighth century so that it is known only from its derivatives the basic word is entered with a preceding asterisk and followed by cross-references to some of the words derived from it, e.g. 1 *aḍ-, see aḍın, aḍır-.

(8) E Erroneous; unfortunately a few completely non-existent words have found their way into sóme medieval and modern dictionaries and word-lists owing to misreadings of ancient texts. A small selection of these is included in the list, preceded by E and followed by an explanation, in order to indicate that such words really did not exist and have not merely been overlooked, e.g. E amuç which arises from an erroneous scription of the Arabic word aṣaḥḥ in the manuscript of Kaş.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED, WITH SHORT TITLES

1. EARLY TEXTS

19. All quotations in the paragraphs about individual words are preceded by the name of the language in which they were written and the date of composition expressed in centuries denoted by roman numerals: VIII = eighth century A.D. and so on. When two or more quotations are taken from the same language they are grouped under a single head, possibly with different chronological indications.

A. Türkü

20. Two periods are distinguished:

(1) VIII. Several major inscriptions in the Runic alphabet fall under this heading; there is a brief note on the best editions of them in Studies, p. 68, but my own quotations are derived, wherever possible, from a personal examination of the photographs and squeezes of the inscriptions. As a result in one or two cases I have, I think, found better readings of some difficult passages than those in any of the editions; examples will be found under olğurt-, berüki, sın-. In addition to the major inscriptions listed separately below there are some shorter inscriptions, but as they are undated and may be later than VIII they are included under the next heading. The major inscriptions are the following:

(a) the funerary inscription of Toñukuk (this is the customary transcription of the name but it is VU) composed probably in the second, but possibly the third decade of VIII; cited as T followed by the number of the line;

(b) the funerary inscription of Kül Tégin, composed in A.D. 732, cited as I followed by the side (E, W, N, S) of the stone and the line on the side;

(c) the funerary inscription of Bilge: Xağan, composed in A.D. 735, cited as II similarly followed;

(d) the funerary inscription of the Küli Çors at Ixe-Xuşotu in central Mongolia, roughly contemporary with the preceding, cited as Ix. followed by the line;

(e) the relatively brief inscription at Ongin, cited as Ongin followed by the line.

(2) VIII ff. Under this heading are included texts which may have been composed in VIII, but were possibly, in some cases probably, composed in IX, or perhaps in one or two cases even later. These fall under the following heads:

(a) a few minor inscriptions from Mongolia, of which the most convenient editions are those in the second volume of H. N. Orkun, Eski Türk Yazıtları, 3 volumes and index, Istanbul, 1936–41, (cited as ETY followed by the volume in roman and the page in arabic figures). These are occasionally cited under the names given in that volume followed by a reference to ETY II;

(b) those of the so-called Yeniseian (Yen.) inscriptions which were found in Khakassia and were probably erected by minor Western Türkü chieftains who escaped to Khakassia after the fall of the Türkü empire in the middle of VIII, see Studies, p. 69. The most convenient edition is that in S. Ye. Malov, Yeniseiskaya pis'mennost' tyurkov, Moscow, 1952; they are cited as Mal. followed by the number of the inscription and the line, but my readings sometimes differ from Malov's;

(c) a few inscriptions found at Ayrtam Oy near the town of Talas on the river of the same name and probably datable to IX or X (see Studies, pp. 72 and 256). The texts are almost illiterate and in a deplorable state, and I have quoted them only occasionally, citing them as Talas followed by the number of the inscription and the line;

(d) paper manuscripts in the Runic alphabet. The only substantial one is a book of divination called Irk Bitig, which I cite as Irk B followed by the number of the paragraph and not, as has usually been done, by the page, since the page numbers used do not correspond to those of the actual manuscript. The most convenient edition of the rest, which are rather miscellaneous in character, is in ETY II, but as Orkun's system of references is rather chaotic I have substituted my own, followed by a reference to the page in ETY II. It is commonly believed that these documents can be dated to about IX;

(e) Manichaean (Man.) texts in the Manichaean Syriac or Uyğur alphabets and what Prof. A. von Gabain in her Alttürkische Grammatik, Leipzig, 1941, p. 5 (cited as v. G. ATG) called 'the N-dialect', but which seems in fact, see Studies, p. 118, to be Türkü written in a non-Runic alphabet. The longest and most important of these texts is the 'Confession of Sins' known as the Chuastuanift (more correctly Xwāstwanēft). The best manuscript, almost complete, is in the British Museum, and there are other fragments, some of the beginning of the text missing in that manuscript, in Germany. The most convenient edition, with a facsimile of the B.M. manuscript, is still that by A. von Le Coq in JRAS 1911, pp. 279 ff., although the translation is not entirely accurate. I cite it as Chuas. followed by the line of the B.M. manuscript or, in the case of the first part, as Chuas. I followed by the line in von Le Coq's numeration. The other Manichaean Türkü texts which I quote have all been published in the Abhandlungen or Sitzungsberichte of the Academy of Sciences in Berlin (originally the Königliche preussische, later Preussische, and later still Deutsche, Akademie der Wissenschaften). As these publications also contain Manichaean texts in Uyğur and Uyğur-A it is more convenient to list all the publications of Manichaean texts here to avoid additional references in subsequent paragraphs. The main bulk of them is in A. von Le Coq's Türkische Manichaica aus Chotscho I (AKPAW, 1912); II (APAW, 1919); III (APAW, 1922), cited as M I, II, and III followed by the page and line, the last followed by (i), (ii), etc. if the same line number appears more than once on the same page. Others were published in a series called Türkische Turfantexte (cited as TT), edited at one time or another by W. Bang, A. von Gabain, and G. R. Rachmati (later R. R. Arat), which also contains Uyğur Buddhist and Civil texts. Those parts which contain Manichaean texts (mostly not in Manichaean Türkü) are TT II (SPAW, 1929) cited by page and line, and TT III (SPAW, 1930) and TT IX (ADAW, 1958) both in Uyğur and cited by line. Other short Manichaean texts are in A. von Le Coq, Ein manichäisch-uigurisches Fragment aus Idiqut-Schachri (SKPAW, 1908) cited as Man.-uig. Frag. followed by page and line, and W. Bang and A. von Gabain, Ein uigurisches Fragment über den manichäischen Windgott (Ungarische Jahrbücher VIII, pp. 247 ff.), cited as Wind. followed by the line.

B. Uyğur and Uyğur-A (Uyğ. and Uyğ.-A)

21. The reasons for supposing that two separate, but closely related, Uyğ. dialects existed are stated in Studies, p. 42. There are obvious traces of Uyğ.-A in some Buddhist texts, e.g. those in TT VI and TM IV (althought it is stated in the introduction to the latter that the Uyğ.-A forms had been 'corrected' in the transcription so that they are no longer apparent), but such texts do not seem to be entirely homogeneous, so that it is only in the Manicheaean texts that it seems possible more or less to isolate the two dialects. Three periods can be distinguished:

(1) VIII. The earliest and most substantial Uyğ. inscription in the Runic alphabet is that situated at Şine-usu in Outer Mongolia, which is the funerary monument of an Uyğur Xağan who ruled from A.D. 746 to 759. It is cited as Şu. followed by the side and line on the side.

(2) IX. The second such inscription, only fragments of the Uyğ. text of which still survive, is the funerary memorial at Kara Balgasun of an Uyğur Xağan who probably ruled from A.D. 808 to 821. It is cited as III followed by a letter and line and a reference to ETY II. The third is the short funerary inscription at Suci in Outer Mongolia, probably datable to the first quarter of IX, and cited as Suci followed by the line.

(3) VIII ff., that is, in this case, texts the earliest of which may go back as far as VIII, although the actual manuscripts are probably later, while the latest, apart from the XVIII manuscript of the Suvarṇaprabhāsa Sūtra, the composition of which was much earlier, is probably a Civil document dated firmly to the second lines 1 to 324, the second lines 1763 to 2160, the rest being unpublished); and the Turkish translation of the Suvarṇaprabhāsasūtra, published by V. V. Radlov and S. Ye. Malov, St. Petersburg, 1913 ff., cited as Suv. followed by the page and line.

(d) Civil (Civ.) texts, that is not religious. These fall into four classes:

(i) Medical texts, probably mere translations of texts in other languages. The main collection is in G. R. Rachmati, Zur Heilkunde der Uiguren I (SPAW, 1930) cited as H I followed by the line, and II (SPAW, 1932) cited as H II followed by the page and line. There are also one or two such texts in TT VII and VIII.

(ii) Astronomical, astrological, magic, and omen texts, published in TT I (SPAW, 1929), cited by the line, TT VII and VIII and USp. Texts of the first two kinds are mainly translated from the Chinese, generally with an Indian background, and are mostly late in the period; the line between unorthodox Buddhist and purely magical texts is indefinite and I may have put some texts the wrong side of it.

(iii) Commercial and legal documents and (iv) miscellaneous texts. The main collection of these is in USp.; there is one in TT VII, No. 42, a very late text apparently transcribed from an original in the Arabic alphabet, and there are one or two published elsewhere. When quoting the last I have indicated where they may be found.

A good many of the Uyğ. texts listed above have been completely or partially indexed; but no index is available for others, including Suv. which is much the longest, and I cannot guarantee that I have listed every word which occurs in these unindexed texts.

C. Old Kırğız (O. Kır.)

22. It is commonly believed that those of the Yeniseian inscriptions which were found not in Khakassia but in Tuva were set up by Kırğız chieftains in that area and are in the Old Kırğız language. It has been suggested that they are the oldest monuments in the Runic alphabet and may date back as far as VI, but L. R. Kyzlasov has recently proved by archaeological methods (see Studies, p. 70) that most of them date from IX and X and that some may be even later. I have classified them as IX ff. The most convenient edition is that of Malov mentioned in para. 20 (2) (b), but A. M. Shcherbak has published revised texts of some of them, and some photographs and squeezes are available. I have therefore not always followed Malov's readings.

D. Xākāni (Xak.)

23. Xak. is a language closely related both to Türkü and to Uyğ., but sufficiently distinct from both to be regarded as a separate language. It was certainly not directly descended from the latter, indeed it existed side by side with Uyğ. for two or three centuries, and was perhaps not quite directly descended from the former, It is first identified in XI, and there are two Xak. XI texts of major quarter of XIV. The actual date of composition of the remainder is quite uncertain; some of the legal and commercial documents are certainly not older than XIII and contain Mongolian, Arabic, and Persian loan-words, but I have taken them into account with suitable precautions, since it is quite impossible to divide these documents neatly into two categories, those anterior and those subsequent to A.D. 1200. These texts can be divided into the following classes:

(a) Christian texts (Chr.). These are likely to be quite early in the period. Only two seem to have survived, the well-known apocryphon about the Magi published in F. W. K. Müller, Uigurica (AKPAW, 1908) pp. 5 ff., cited as U I followed by the page and line, and a fragment published in M III cited by page and line.

(b) Manichaean (Man.) texts in Uyğ. and Uyğ.-A published in the various works listed in para. 20 (2) (e) above. All are fragmentary and vary greatly in length, though none are very long; in the case of the longer texts it is usually possible to determine whether they are in Man. Türkü, Uyğ. or Uyğ.-A; when this is impossible they are cited as Uyğ. The earliest of these texts probably go back to VIII and the latest are unlikely to be much later than IX.

(c) Buddhist (Bud.) texts. These have been published in substantial quantities; the following is a list of those which I have quoted. There are four volumes of Uigurica, the first three edited by F. W. K. Müller, the last by A. von Gabain. U I has already been mentioned under (a); U II (AKPAW, 1911), U III (APAW, 1922), and U IV (APAW, 1931) are cited by page and line. The following volumes of the TT series mentioned in para. 20 (2) (e) contain Buddhist texts: TT IV (SPAW, 1930); TT V (SPAW, 1931); TT VI (SPAW, 1934); TT VII (APAW, 1937); TT VIII (ADAW, 1954, the volume containing the texts in the Brāhmī alphabet), and TT X (ADAW, 1959). Of these VI and X are cited by the line, IV and V by page and line, and VII and VIII by document and line. There is a useful and complete Analytischer Index zu den fünf ersten Stücken der TT (SPAW, 1931) and VI contains a partial and VII, VIII, and X a complete index of words. Another AKPAW volume containing Buddhist texts is F. W. K. Müller, Zwei Pfahlinschriften aus dem Turfanfunden, 1915, cited as Pfahl. followed by the page and line. W. Radloff, Uigurische Sprachdenkmäler, Leningrad, 1928, cited as USp. followed by document number and line, contains inter alia a number of Buddhist texts. Other publications which I have quoted are the following: Paul Pelliot, La Version ouigoure de l'histoire des princes Kalyāṇaṃkara et Pāpaṃkara, T'oung Pao XV. 2, 1914, cited as PP followed by the page and line; W. Bang and G. R. Rachmati, Türlü Cehennemler üzerine Uygurca Parçalar, Türkiyat Mecmuasi IV, Istanbul, 1934, cited as TM IV followed by the line; Şinasi Tekin, Kuanşi İm Pusar, Erzurum, 1960 (superseding Radloff's partial edition, St. Petersburg, 1911) cited as Kuan. followed by the line; W. Radloff, Ṭišastvustik, ein in türkischer Sprache bearbeitetes buddhistisches Sutra, St. Petersburg, 1910, cited as Tiş., followed by the manuscript page and line; A. von Gabain, Die uigurische Übersetzung der Biographie Hüen-tsangs (SPAW, 1935) and Briefe der uigurischen Hüen-tsang-Biographie (SPAW, 1938), both cited as Hüen-ts. followed by the line (the first containing importance. The first is the earliest, and by far the most important, Turkish–Arabic dictionary, the Diwān Luğāti'l-Turk of Maḥmūd al-Kāşğari, dating from the third quarter of XI and cited as Kaş. The quotations in the form Kaş. followed by a roman number and an arabic number and sometimes a second arabic number are from the Turkish translation by B. Atalay, Divanü Lugat-it-türk Tercumesi, 3 volumes and index, Ankara, 1940–3, since this edition is reasonably accessible, and the index is excellent and comprehensive. The principle which I have followed is to cite the volume and page for main entries and the line as well for quotations from other parts of the book. I have, I hope, included every word which it contains. Atalay's translation is not wholly satisfactory and I have in every case consulted the facsimile (the printed text contains many minor inaccuracies) and normally quote the original Arabic in my citations, so that the accuracy of the translation can be checked. In a number of cases I have altered Atalay's readings and spellings. The second major text is the Kutaḍğu: Bilig of Yūsuf Xaşş Ḥācib of Balasagun, the earliest surviving purely literary text in any Turkish language, also dating from the third quarter of XI. My quotations are taken from R. R. Arat's critical edition, Istanbul, 1947, cited as KB followed by the line in that edition. In cases of doubt I have also consulted the facsimiles of the three manuscripts; in some cases my spellings are slightly different from Arat's. As his index has not yet been published, I cannot guarantee that I have listed every word which occurs in this text, but I have searched it fairly thoroughly. I have classified all the words from these two sources as XI since this date is certain. The Verse Preface of KB is not part of the original text and its language is obviously a little later; quotations from it have therefore been entered under the heading of XII (?) KBVP followed by the line. The Prose Preface is later still and perhaps not really Xak. but a few quotations from it have been entered as XIII(?) KBPP followed by the line.

E. Oğuz

24. Kāşğarī lists a certain number of words in a language which he calls 'the language of al-Ğuzziya' and says that owing to long contact between the people who spoke it and Persian-speakers it had acquired a number of Persian loan-words, often in a rather corrupt form (see ören and turma:). It was no doubt the language spoken by the Oğuz tribes, who were then living in the neighbourhood of the Aral Sea and had to some extent lost contact with the other Turkish tribes. They were descendants of the Oğuz (Tokkuz Oğuz etc.) who had played quite an important part in history during VII and VIII and probably even earlier. There is no reason to suppose that during that period they spoke a language markedly different from that of the Türkü; but although even by XI the Oğuz language had undergone some phonetic decay and accepted a number of loan-words, it retained, and its modern descendants still retain, some characteristics more primitive even than those of Türkü, e.g. initial d- in certain words (see para. 14 (1)). Only a few specifically Oğuz words are listed in Kaş. but they are the earliest surviving specimens of the language.

F. Kıpçak (Kıp.)

25. Kāşğarī also cites a number of words in a language which he calls 'the language of Qifcāq', a language which he describes as similar to Oğuz. Several words are mentioned as being common to Kıp. and Oğuz but not known in Xak. In XI the Kıpçak were west of the Oğuz in southern Russia and Kaş. is the earliest authority for their language.

G. Minor eleventh-century dialects

26. Kāşğarī describes a few words as belonging to other contemporary dialects with which he was acquainted; those mentioned most often are the dialects of Arğu:, Çigil, and Gancak (the last probably not really Turkish, see Studies, p. 132 and the remarks on kendük below). I have included these words with Kāşğarī's descriptions of them.

II. MEDIEVAL TEXTS

27. The Uyğ. language lingered on for some centuries in Chinese Turkistan (Sinkiang); indeed the latest surviving Bud. Uyğ. manuscript, that of the Suvarṇaprabhāsasūtra already mentioned, was copied in XVIII, but the only accessible authority for Uyğ. in this latest state is the Chinese–Uyğ. dictionary (Chin.–Uyğ. Dict.) prepared by a committee of Chinese scholars towards the end of XIV. Some words from this work are included in Radloff's Wörterbuch and a complete list from another edition was recently published by Prof. L. Ligeti in Un Vocabulaire sino-ouigoure des Ming, le Kao-tch'ang-kouan Yi-chou du Bureau des Traducteurs, Dissertationes Sodalium Instituti Asiae Interioris II, Budapest, 1966. I have included references to this work as Ligeti, followed by the page.

28. The difficulty about classifying most of the remaining medieval texts, which were, with only one or two exceptions, written by or for Moslem Turks, is that in XI the only literary language in which texts have survived, and probably the only literary language then in use, was Xak., but that towards the end of that century or very soon afterwards literary languages emerged which were written in different areas where the spoken languages were rather different from one another, and so very soon began to pursue different courses. There are interesting discussions of the problem of classifying the texts concerned in Philologiae Turcicae Fundamenta I, Wiesbaden, 1959 (cited as Fundamenta) and more particularly in J. Eckmann's article 'Das Chwarezmtürkische' in that volume, and also in the introduction to A. K. Borovkov, Leksika sredneaziatskogo Tefsira XIII—XV vv., Moscow, 1963 (cited as Tef.).

29. What can perhaps be called the direct line of descent, or southern stream, evolved in the area called in the early medieval period Khorasan and the southern part of Mā warā'u'l-nahr (Transoxiana). By XV the literary language used in that area was what is commonly, if inaccurately, called Çağatay (Çağ.), but at any rate three, and probably four, texts have survived which were written between XI and XV (both excluded) in languages intermediate between Xak. and Çağ. The spoken language in this area during this period seems to have been fairly homogeneous with the literary language, except that there was probably a greater concentration of Arabic and Persian, and perhaps from XIII onwards also Mongolian, loan-words in the literary than in the spoken language.

30. Possibly the earliest of these intermediate texts which, since it contains some Mongolian words, cannot be earlier than XIII, is the didactic poem edited by R. R. Arat under the title Atebetü'l-hakayık, Istanbul, 1951, cited as At. followed by the lines.

31. An even earlier date has been suggested for a few Turkish tafsīrs, that is interlinear translations of the Koran (mostly bilingual, some trilingual with a Persian translation of the Arabic and a Turkish translation of the Persian) with commentaries and other additional matter. The difficulty in determining the date of these texts and the exact language in which they were composed lies in the fact that the surviving manuscripts of them were all written later, perhaps a good deal later, than the date at which they were composed and have been subjected to a good deal of modernizing by the copyists, later phonetic forms, and even actual words, being substituted for the author's own phonetic forms and words. It is not at all clear whether all, or at any rate all the earlier, bilingual manuscripts go back to a single archetype or whether some are independent translations and compilations, but the latter is the more probable. Borovkov in Tef. has indexed the Turkish vocabulary of one such work, the manuscript of which was found in the town of Karshi. The name of the author, the date of composition, the name of the copyist, and the date of copying are all equally unknown, but the manuscript seems to be later than that of a similar tafsīr found in Turkey dated A.D. 1333 (see Tef., p. 4) which is said to have a text close to that of the Karshi manuscript. An examination of the vocabulary shows that it is very heterogeneous. It includes a number of words of great antiquity for some of which, e.g. 2 ap, it is the latest authority. On the other hand, it also includes Arabic, Persian, and even some Mongolian, loan-words, which proves that in its present form it cannot be earlier than XIII, and it even contains different forms of the same word, e.g. aḏrıl-, ayrıl-, ayrul-, which belong to different periods in the history of the language. It has been suggested that these are evidence that the language used, even if basically Xak., has been heavily influenced by Oğuz and Kıp. and that it must therefore have been composed in some northern area and ought to be classified as Xwarazmian (see para. 37). There is not, however, any conclusive evidence that this is so, and there are other possible explanations of the non-Xak. elements in the text. In the circumstances it seems better to regard the language as intermediate between Xak. and Çağ., to date Tef. as XIII(?) and cite it immediately after At.

32. Next in time, and in much the same language, comes the Qiṣaṣu'l-anbiyā of Nāṣiru'l-dīn al-Rabğūzī composed in A.D. 1310. In this case, too, all the surviving manuscripts are later than the work itself and have been subjected to a good deal of modernization. No index of the vocabulary has been compiled, but a number of words from a XIX printed edition are cited in Radloff's Wörterbuch and some of these citations have been included here as XIV Rbğ., followed by a reference to Radloff.

33. One Arabic–Turkish vocabulary, the Ḥilyatu'-insān wa ḥalbatu'l-lisān of Camālu'l-dīn ibnu'l-Muhannā (see Studies, p. 193) is probably of about the same date as Rbğ. It contains an extensive list of Arabic words with the Turkish equivalents. The author in his preface says that they are in two languages 'those of our country and of Turkistan', and enumerates the phonetic differences between the two. The facts given suggest that the first is an early form of Azerbayjani and the second a late form of Xak., but, except in a minimum number of cases, it is impossible to decide whether any given word belongs to one of these languages or both. Very probably the great bulk of them are early Azerbayjani, but as a matter of convenience it is easier to cite this work as XIV Muh. immediately after Rbğ. followed by the page and line of Melioranski's edition (Mel.) and the page of Kilisli Rif'at's edition (Rif.); the two editions are not identical and it is likely that the latter, which is based on a single manuscript, contains a good many words added to the author's text by later copyists.

34. Finally there are many texts in Çağatay, the earliest perhaps late XIV, the great bulk XV or even a little later. The language still survives in a later form as modern Uzbek, and no attempt has ever been made to define the latest date at which Çağ. proper was still in use. Apart from a very extensive literature, three major Çağ.–Persian and Çağ.–Old Osmanli dictionaries have been published which, although they all profess to be primarily dictionaries of the language used by Mīr 'Alī Şīr Nawā'ī, probably give a fairly exhaustive list of the Çağ. vocabulary, excluding the Arabic and Persian, but not the Mongolian, words which it includes. These are, in order of age:

(1) Badā'i'u'l-luğat written in Herat by Tāli'-i Harawī during the reign of the Timurid Sultān Ḥusayn (A.D. 1438–1506), a Çağ.–Persian dictionary of which the only(?) surviving manuscript, dated A.H. 1117 (A.D. 1705–6) was published in facsimile with a comprehensive index by A. K. Borovkov, Moscow, 1961.

(2) The anonymous Çağ.–Old Osmanli dictionary commonly known (after the first entry in it) as the Abuşka, compiled during the first half of XVI and published by V. de Véliaminof-Zernof as Dictionnaire djagatai-turc, St. Petersburg, 1869.

(3) The Sanglax, a Çağ.–Persian dictionary written by Muḥammad Mahdī Xān and finished in A.H. 1172 or 1173 (roughly A.D. 1759). A facsimile of one of the best manuscripts was published with an introduction and comprehensive indices by myself as E. J. W. Gibb Memorial, New Series XX, London, 1960.

Of these the Sanglax, although the latest, is much the most extensive and best, the author correcting a good many mistakes made in previous dictionaries, including the two mentioned above and others which have not survived. I have cited the first occasionally as Bad. followed by the page, the second more frequently as Vel. followed by the page and the last, almost comprehensively, as San. followed by the page and line of the facsimile.

35. Exaggerated importance has been attached by some scholars to Şayx Sulayman Buxarī, Luğat-i Çağatay wa Turki 'Oṭmānī, Istanbul, A.H. 1298 (A.D. 1881); it contains very little original matter, apart from the mistakes which abound in it (see San., p. 31) but I have occasionally cited it as ŞS. followed by the page.

36. There is in Bokhara an important manuscript of the Muqaddimatu'l-Adab of Maḥmūdu'l-Zamaxşarī, a classified Arabic glossary compiled early in XII with an interlinear translation in Turkish (as well as in Persian and Mongolian). The manuscript is dated A.D. 1495 and there is no prima facie reason for supposing that the Turkish translation is much older. The language is therefore likely to be Çağ. and this is confirmed by an examination of the Turkish equivalents in N. Poppe's index to the Mongolian translation in Mongol'skii slovar' Mukaddimat al-Adab, Moscow, 1938. Prof. Borovkov, when he died in 1963, had almost completed an index of the Turkish words in this manuscript, but it is uncertain whether it will now be completed and published. The Turkish entries in Prof. Poppe's work are not in a convenient form for use in preparing a Turkish dictionary, and are not, according to Prof. Borovkov, wholly accurate. I have not, therefore, quoted this work except occasionally (as Zam.).

37. The history of the northern stream of literary languages is a great deal more complicated. There was undoubtedly in XII a second literary focus further north than the area described in para. 28, centred perhaps in the court of the Xwārazmşāhs who first became important early in XII. The most convenient name for texts belonging to this stream is that recently adopted in such works as the Fundamenta, Xwarazmian (Xwar.), although the literary language which evolved there must also have been in use over a much wider area extending into southern Russia. The spoken languages in this area at this period were markedly different from Xak.; the Turks in Xwarazm and the Aral Sea area were Oğuz and those in southern Russia Kıpçak and already in XI Kāşğarī regarded Oğuz and Kıp. as separate languages fairly close to one another but different from Xak. Thus, so far as literary works are concerned, it is safe to assume that Xak. was very quickly modified to bring it closer to the local languages.

38. The oldest text from this area, if its colophon is to be relied on, was in fact composed not in Xwārazm but in the Crimea. It is the Qiṣṣa-i Yūsuf written by a certain 'Alī, of whom nothing further is known, in A.H. 630 (A.D. 1233). As usual the manuscripts are a good deal later and have been more or less modernized. D. Brockelmann listed a number of words from this work in 'Alī's Qissa-i Yūsuf, der älteste Vorläufer der osmanischen Literatur (AKPAW, 1917). It has long been recognized that the language is not Osmanlı and I have cited the words quoted in this paper as Xwar. XIII 'Ali followed by the page, but it may well contain more Oğuz elements than most other Xwar. texts.

39. Another text which can be tentatively identified as coming from the Aral Sea area is the enigmatic text sometimes called Oğuz Nāme (see Studies, pp. 48, etc.) written in the Mongolian Official Alphabet and edited by W. Bang and G. R. Rachmati, Die Legende von Oghuz Qaghan (SPAW, 1932). It contains several Mongolian loan-words and so cannot be earlier than XIII, but can hardly be much later. Considering its subject-matter, the language is likely to be much more specifically Oğuz than most other contemporary texts, but the ambiguity of the alphabet used makes it impossible to determine whether it has such a specifically Oğuz trait as initial d-. It is cited as XIII(?) Oğ., followed by the line in the edition mentioned.

40. Next in order of time come five texts which are all more or less solidly dated. The oldest is the Mu'īnu'l-murīd written in Xwārazm in A.D. 1313 (see Eckmann, op. cit., p. 115), but I have not been in a position to cite any words from it.

41. The next is the Xusraw u Ṣīrīn, written by a certain Quṭb at the court of Tini Beg Xan of the Golden Horde in A.D. 1341–2. It has been admirably edited by A. Zajączkowski, Najstarsza wersja turecka ḫusräv u Šīrīn, 3 vols., Warsaw, 1958–61, with a facsimile of the only manuscript, a transcription, and a full index excluding the Arabic and Persian loan-words. It is cited as XIV Qutb followed by the page in Zajączkowski's index.

42. The third is the Muḥabbat Nāma of Xwarazmi. Two manuscripts of this poem have survived, the second containing a number of verses which did not form part of the original text; see my paper on this poem in CAJ VII. 4, 1962. Unfortunately verses 437 and 440 which state that the poem was composed 'on the banks of the Sir Darya in A.H. 754 (A.D. 1353)', are among the interpolated verses but the date must be approximately correct, since it falls within the reign of Cani Beg Xan of the Golden Horde, during whose reign the poem was composed. It is cited from the recent editions (see Studies, p. 48) as XIV MN followed by the number of the verse.

43. Next there is the Nahcu'l-Farādīs written by Maḥmūd ibn 'Alī in Xwārazm, or perhaps Saray on the Volga, sometime before A.D. 1358, the date of the earliest manuscript, but not necessarily much before, since there is fairly good evidence that the author did not die until A.D. 1360. A reproduction of one of the best manuscripts was published in J. Eckmann, Nehcü'l-Feradis I, Ankara, 1956, but unfortunately his index is not yet published.

44. Finally there is the free translation into Turkish of Sa'dī's Gulistān. Only one manuscript of this work has survived, and a facsimile of it, with a preface by Prof. F. N. Uzluk, was published by the Türk Dil Kurumu in 1954 under the title Seyfi Serâyî Gülistan Tercümesi. The translator was a native of Sarai on the Volga, but made his translation at the Mamluk court in Egypt in A.D. 1391.

45. Quite recently there has appeared the first half of an admirable dictionary by E. Fazylov of Qutb, MN, the Nahcu'l-Farādīs, and the Gulistan, with extensive quotations and references, under the title Starouzbekskii yazik. Khorezmiiskie pamyatniki XIV veka, Tashkent, 1966. I have used this work extensively to provide references to the Nahcu'l-Farādīs, under the title Nahc. followed by the page and line in Eckmann's facsimile for those words contained in this part of the dictionary; for the rest of the vocabulary I have had to rely on a very inadequate list of words published by Kivâmettin in TM IV. I have not thought it necessary to add references to the Gulistan (Gul.) except very occasionally, since its vocabulary is practically identical with that of the other works mentioned.

46. Apart from the texts mentioned above a few other Xwar. texts have survived and one or two short ones have been published, at any rate in facsimile, but are not cited herein.

47. Seven vocabularies of medieval Kıp. have been published, some of them containing some Türkmen (Tkm.) words. The most important, and the only one which is purely Kıp., is the Codex Cumanicus, a handbook of the Koman (Kom.) language, a Kıp. dialect, in Latin, compiled early in XIV (see Studies, p. 48 and Fundamenta). The text is not entirely homogeneous; the earlier part was compiled for Italian merchants, but it also contains later additions by German missionaries. An index to it was published in K. Grønbech, Komanisches Wörterbuch, Copenhagen, 1942, and is cited as XIV Kom. CCI (for the Italian) and CCG (for the German part); Gr. sometimes followed by the page.

48. The remaining six are all in Arabic, one a list of Turkish words in alphabetical order with Arabic equivalents, the others Arabic handbooks with Turkish equivalents. All these vocabularies have a specified or inferable Egyptian Mamluk background, and it seems clear that basically they are handbooks of the languages spoken by Turkish slaves brought to Egypt from southern Russia, some of them spoke Kıp. and others Tkm., an Oğuz dialect. For example, Hou. (see para. 49) seems from internal evidence to have been compiled from oral information collected in the Mamluk possessions in Syria. In some cases an Arabic word is translated by different Kıp. and Tkm. words, in others individual words are described as Kıp. or Tkm., but in the great majority of cases no such indication is given. The presumption in nearly all cases is that the word is Kıp., but there are one or two passages in Id. (see para. 50) which seem to imply the contrary.

49. Until almost today it was generally accepted that the oldest of these vocabularies was the anonymous Arabic–Turkish vocabulary in Leiden manuscript

517, Warner, published in M. T. Houtsma, Ein türkisch-arabisches Glossar, Leiden, 1894, cited herein as XIII Hou. followed by the page and line of the Arabic text. But as this book was actually going to press an article by Barbara Flemming (Hamburg) was published in Der Islam, Band 44, Berlin, June 1968, pp. 226 ff., in which she announced that Houtsma, who purported to publish the exact text of this unique manuscript had converted the date in the colophon into the figures 643, whereas the facsimile published in her article shows quite clearly the words ṯalāṯa wa arba'īn wa sab'umi'ya that is (Ṣa'bān) A.H. 743 equivalent to (January) A.D. 1343. Instead, therefore, of dating back to XIII and being the oldest of these vocabularies, it goes back only to the middle of XIV and comes chronologically between the two vocabularies mentioned in the following paragraphs. This announcement unfortunately appeared too late for it to be possible to correct the numerous references to Hou. in the dictionary.

50. There are two other XIV vocabularies. The Kitābu'l-idrāk li-lisāni'l-atrāk, the only list of Turkish words with Arabic equivalents, was written in Egypt, probably in A.D. 1313, by Aṯīru'l-dīn Abū Ḥayyān Muḥammad ibn Yūsuf, originally a native of Granada. A critical edition was published by A. Caferoğlu, Abu Hayyân, Kitâb al-İdrâk li-lisân al-Atrâk, Istanbul, 1931. It is cited as XIV Id. followed by the page in the Arabic text.

51. The Kitāb Bulġati'l-muṣṭāq fī luġati'l-turk wa'l-qifçāq was written by Camālu'l-dīn Abū Muḥammad 'Abdullah al-Turki probably in the middle of XIV and perhaps also in the Mamluk dominions in Syria. The only manuscript, which is not quite complete, was published with a comprehensive index by A. Zajączkowski, Manuel arabe de la langue des Turks et des Kiptchaks, Warsaw, I, 1938; II (title in Polish), 1954. It is cited as XIV Bul. followed by the page and line of the printed text in I and the page of the manuscript in II (verbs).

52. There are two XV vocabularies, both surviving in unique manuscripts and dating from early in the century, but it is uncertain which is the older. Al-tuḥfatu'l-zakīya fī luġati'l-turkīya, an Arabic–Turkish vocabulary in alphabetical order, mainly Kıp. with a number of Tkm. words, was written almost certainly in Egypt and before A.D. 1426 (the date of a note on the first page). It was edited with a facsimile, translation, and index in B. Atalay, Ettuhfet-üz-zekiyye fil-lûgat-it-türkiyye, Istanbul, 1945. It is cited as Tuh. followed by the page and line of the facsimile.

53. Al-qawānīnu'l-kullīya fī-ḍabṭi'l-luġati'l-turkiya was compiled by an unknown author in Cairo by cross-questioning Turks living there. The book is undated, but a reference in it to Tamerlane makes it certain that it was written in XV, and probably early in the century. The text was published by Köprülüzade Mehmed Fuad (Prof. F. Köprülü), Istanbul, 1928. It is cited as Kav. followed by the page and line.

54. Quite recently Prof. Zajączkowski published an account of a short Arabic–Kıp. vocabulary entitled al-Durratu'l-muḍī'a fi luğati'l-turkīya discovered in Florence, with an extract from the text and an index to the extract, in Rocznik Orientalistyczny XXIX, Pt. i, pp. 39 ff. The work is anonymous and undated but clearly belongs to the first half of XV. It adds little to our knowledge of Kıp. but I have quoted a few words from it as XV Dur. followed by the page.

55. The Oğuz language which is conveniently, but not quite accurately, called 'Old Osmanli' (Osm.), since the earliest texts in it date from before the foundation of the Ottoman Empire, is recorded from mid XIII, but the XIII material is scanty. The earliest is a few verses in the works of Mawlānā Calālu'l-dīn al-Rūmi (A.D. 1207/8–1273/4) and a few verses in those of his son commonly called Sultan Veled. These verses might more properly be classified as Salcuk, but as they are the first stage of a continuous literary tradition it seems more convenient to classify these very early texts and other slightly later texts which are not strictly Osm., like the Kitāb Dede Korkut, which seems to be in a Tkm. language, probably XV., as Osm. so as to avoid an excessively complicated terminology. A good many early works of this kind have been published with partial or complete indices, but it did not seem to me necessary for the purposes of this dictionary to do more than cite under the heading XIV ff. Osm. (since the XIII material is so inconsiderable) those of the words contained in this dictionary which reappear in the Türk Dil Kurumu publication Tanıklariyle Tarama Sözlüğü, 4 vols., Istanbul, 1943–5; Ankara, 1953–7 (TTS I–IV) or as 'Rūmī' words in San. A new edition of TTS is now being published, but is not yet sufficiently far advanced to make citation from it very convenient.

THE MODERN LANGUAGES

56. It would not be possible to include in this book all the evidence which could be assembled regarding the survival in modern languages of the early words listed herein without a much greater delay in its publication and a much greater increase in its bulk than would be regarded as advantageous. In any event it is sufficiently obvious to all students of the Turkish languages that common words like at 'a horse' and al- 'to take' still survive almost everywhere to make a detailed proof of the point unnecessary. Nor is it very important, when a basic word is known to survive in some or all modern languages, to know whether its various derivatives survive also. On the other hand, for the reasons stated in para. 8, the subject cannot be entirely neglected, and it is important to include at any rate some references to modern languages. This immediately raises the question how modern languages should be classified and grouped. A good many systems of classification have already been suggested; there are two quite different ones in Fundamenta; but for present purposes it is hardly necessary to use anything more elaborate than a simple geographical system. Even this is open to some objections, since there are no clear-cut geographical lines between the modern descendants of the early languages, and some modern languages descended from different ancient languages have in the course of time developed characteristics which bring them closer to one another than to languages with which they are genetically related. After a good deal of reflection I finally decided upon a sixfold division: north-eastern (NE), south-eastern (SE), north-central (NC), south-central (SC), north-western (NW), and south-western (SW). Of these the NW languages are, genetically speaking, Kıp. and the SW Oğuz; the SC and probably SE are, broadly speaking, descended from Xak. but by different lines of descent.

57. In the NE group are included the languages spoken, but until recently not written, in eastern Siberia and adjacent areas. Yakut, however, which has been isolated from the rest so long that it has acquired very special characteristics of its own, is seldom cited, the authority used being E. K. Pekarsky, Slovar' yakutskogo yazyka, St. Petersburg, 1907–30, cited as Pek. The most important authority for the vocabulary of these languages is W. Radloff, Versuch eines Wörterbuches der türk-Dialecte (Opyt slovarya tyurkskikh narechii), 4 vols., St. Petersburg, 1888–1911, cited as R followed by the volume in roman, and the column in arabic numerals, individual languages being mentioned in the abbreviated forms used in that work with the minor alterations of spelling shown in the List of Abbreviations. I have also used the Khakassko-russkii slovar', edited by N. A. Baskakov, Moscow, 1953, cited as Khak. sometimes followed by the page, the Tuvinsko-russkii slovar', edited by A. A. Pal'mbakh, Moscow, 1955, cited as Tuv. sometimes followed by the page, and occasionally the modern Russian–Khakas, Russian–Tuvan, and Russian–Altay dictionaries.

58. In the SE group are included the Turkish languages and dialects of Chinese Turkistan and adjacent areas, which have traditionally been called Eastern Türki and are now called Neo-Uyğur by Soviet and Chinese scholars. These fall into two main groups, the literary language written in Arabic script and the spoken dialects. I have called both Türki. For the first, citations are from R. B. Shaw, A Sketch of the Turki Language, Calcutta, 1878, cited as Shaw followed by the page, and Burhan Şehidi, Uyğurça-Xenuça-Rusça Luğat (Uigursko-kitaisko-russkii slovar'), Pekin, 1953, cited as BŞ followed by the page. A good many words in one dialect, Tarançı, spoken in southern Siberia are included in R., and are cited as Tar. followed by a reference to R. For the rest, mainly dialects spoken in southern Sinkiang, I have used G. Jarring, An Eastern Turki-English Dialect Dictionary, Lund, 1964, cited as Jarring followed by the page. One language in this area is in a class by itself, that of the Sarığ Yuğur in Kansu, the only language which can reasonably be regarded as directly descended from early Uyğ. It is recorded in S. Ye. Malov, Yazyk zheltykh uigurov, Alma Ata, 1957, cited occasionally as Sarığ Yuğ. followed by the page.

59. In the NC group are included Kırğız (Kır.) and Kazax (Kzx.), called in R Kara Kırğız and Kırğız respectively. Historically Kır. belongs to the same family as the NE languages and Kzx. seems to be a Kıp. dialect, but the peoples talking them have lived in close propinquity to one another for so long that they now have many common characteristics. The authorities which I have used principally are, for Kır., K. K. Yudakhin's Kirgizsko-russkii slovar', Moscow, 1965, cited as Yud. followed by the page, and for Kzx. Kh. Makhmudov and G. Musabaev, Kazakhsko-russkii slovar', Alma Ata, 1954, and B. N. Shnitnikov's Kazakh–English Dictionary, The Hague 1966, cited as MM and Shnit. respectively followed by the page. I have also occasionally used the equivalent Russian–Kır. and Russian–Kzx. dictionaries, and only occasionally quoted R since the modern authorities seem to be rather fuller and more reliable.

60. There are several modern SC spoken dialects, but the only literary language is Uzbek (Uzb.) for which I have used A. K. Borovkov, Uzbeksko-russkii slovar', Moscow, 1959, cited as Bor. followed by the page, and less often the Russian–Uzb. dictionary of 1954. The vocabulary in H. Vambery's Ćagataische Sprachstudien, Leipzig, 1867, is very heterogeneous in character. The bulk of the words in it are classical Çağ. taken, often with some errors, from various oriental authors; the remainder seem to be colloquial XIX Uzb. words collected by the author himself, and occasionally cited as Vam. followed by the page.

61. The NW group comprises a rather wide range of languages. Those quoted in R include Kazan Tatar (Kaz.) and three Karaim dialects, those of the Crimea, Lutsk, and Troki (Kar., Krm., L., and T.) but he also uses Krm. for the non-Karaim language spoken in the Crimea which is indistinguishable from Osm., so that the only safe indication that a word is Karaim is that it is given in the Hebrew alphabet. The words quoted from these languages are reproduced with the same abbreviations and the reference in R. For Kar. T. I have occasionally used T. Kowalski, Karaimische Texte im Dialekt von Troki, Cracow, 1929, cited as Kow. followed by the page. For (Kazan) Tatar I have used the Tatarsko-russkii slovar', Moscow, 1966, cited as Kaz. or Tat., and for Karakalpak (Kk.) and Nogay (Nog.) I have used the Karakalpaksko-russkii slovar', Moscow, 1958 and the Nogaisko-russkii slovar', Moscow, 1963, both edited by N. A. Baskakov and cited by the page, and occasionally the Russian–Kk. and –Nog. dictionaries. For Kumyk (Kum.) there is at present available only the Russko-kumykskii slovar', Moscow, 1960, edited by Z. Z. Bammatov; Bashkir has diverged so far from the rest of the group that I have not taken it into account. No convenient authorities for minor languages like Karaçay and Balkar are at present available. As regards Chuvash (Çuv.) see para. 2.

62. In the SW group are included only three languages, Azerbayjani (Az.), Osm. (including Rep. Turkish), and Tkm. For Az. I have used various authorities published in the Soviet Union, not citing them individually. There are many authorities for Osm., but those which I have generally used are Sir James Redhouse, A Turkish and English Lexicon, in the Constantinople, 1921, reprint, cited as Red. followed by the page; Şayx Sami, Qāmūs-i Turkī, 2 vols., Istanbul, A.H. 1318 (A.D. 1900–1) cited as Sami followed by the page; and occasionally the

A.H. 1306 (A.D. 1888) edition of the Lehce-i Osmanïya, cited as Leh. followed by the page. In noting the survival of words in modern languages I have not included those words which have recently been re-introduced into Rep. Turkish to replace Arabic and Persian loan-words. Some of these are genuine old words which had become obsolete in Osm., others are old loan-words like acun (for a:ju:n, a word borrowed from Sogdian) and çağ 'period' (a medieval loan-word from Mong.), but they have not had a continuous history in Osm.

63. As pointed out in paras. 2 and 12 it is often important in tracing the history of a Turkish word to know whether it became a loan-word in Mongolian and, if so, when, since this often throws light not only on the age of a word but also on its original pronunciation and meaning. The question of such loan-words is discussed at length in Studies, Chap. 11, and it is there suggested that these words were borrowed in three main periods, the first, probably V and VI, during which words were borrowed by a Mongolian-speaking people, possibly the Kitañ, from an l/r Turkish-speaking tribe, possibly the Tavğaç; the second, probably between VIII and XII; and the third during and after the reign of Chinggis. The earliest substantial remains of Mongolian are not, however, earlier than XIII. In citing Mongolian words borrowed from Turkish I have normally used three authorities:

(1) E. Haenisch, Wörterbuch zu Manghol un Ni'uca Tobca'an, Leipzig, 1939, which contains a list of the words in the well-known Mong. XIII Secret History (SH), cited as Haenisch followed by the page.

(2) The standard, though now somewhat antiquated, dictionary of Classical Mongolian, J. E. Kowalewski, Dictionnaire mongol-russe-français, Kazan, 1841 ff., cited as Kow. followed by the page.

(3) A good dictionary of modern written Mongolian, The Mongol–English Practical Dictionary, compiled by M. Haltod and others and published by the Evangelican Alliance Mission (in the U.S.A.) 1949–53, cited as Haltod followed by the page.

OTHER MODERN AUTHORITIES

64. In addition to the modern authorities quoted above use has been made of the following other modern authorities:

(1) A. Caferoğlu, Uygur Sözlüğü, 3 parts, Istanbul, 1934–8, a useful list of the words contained in the indices to the texts enumerated in paras. 20 (2) (e) and 21 above and one or two others, cited as Caf.

(2) v. G., ATG, see para. 20 (2) (e).

(3) G. Doerfer, Türkische und mongolische Elemente im Neupersischen; I Mongolische Elemente, Wiesbaden, 1963; II Türkische Elemente, alif bis tā, 1965; III ditto jīm bis kāf 1967, cited as Doerfer, followed by the volume and the number of the word.

(4) C. Brockelmann, Osttürkische Grammatik der islamischen Litteratursprachen Mittelasiens, Leiden, 1954, cited as Brockelmann followed by the number of the paragraph.

(5) A. M. Shcherbak, 'Nazvaniya domashnikh i dikikh zhivotnykh v tyurkskikh yazykakh' ('The names of domesticated and wild animals in the Turkish languages'), one of several articles in Istoricheskoe razvitie leksiki tyurkskikh yazykov, Moscow, 1961, cited as Shcherbak, followed by the page.

(6) The reproductions of MS. No. S. J. Kr. 4638, Packet 8 in the manuscript collection of the Leningrad branch of the Institute of the Peoples of Asia, recently published in D. I. Tikhonov, Khozyaistvo i obshchestvennyi stroi uigurskogo gosudarstva X—XIV vv., Leningrad, 1966, and again with transcription and translation by E. R. Tenishev in an article called 'Khozyaistvennye zapisi na drevneuigurskom yazyke' in Issledovaniya po grammatike i leksike tyurkskikh yazykov, Tashkent, 1966. The manuscript is a late Uyğ. family archive, and is cited as Fam. Arch. followed by the line.

THE ARRANGEMENT OF INDIVIDUAL ENTRIES

65. In paragraphs 4, 5, and 8 some account has been given of the kind of information which is supplied about individual words. There is not a single word regarding which the full range of information is available, and it may therefore be useful to set out here what the full range is and how the various items are arranged. The word may be preceded by a code letter (see paragraph 18). If it is a hapax legomenon (see paragraph 7) it is immediately followed by 'Hap. leg.'. From this point the order varies slightly. It is sometimes convenient to enter next the original meaning possibly with some remarks on later developments, but this is superfluous if the word is Hap. leg., since the quotation will supply it, and if the word is derived it is more logical to record the derivation before the meaning. After this it may be desirable to add some other remarks. If the fact that the word is a loan-word in Mongolian is relevant, this is mentioned next. Information regarding the survival of the word then follows. It cannot be given earlier since there are many instances of words surviving in modern languages, usually NE, not because they have existed continuously in those languages but because they have been reborrowed from Mongolian, perhaps quite recently. Finally, cross-references may be given to other words etymologically related or other words with the same or a similar meaning. The quotations then follow in the following order: Türkü VIII; VIII ff.; VIII ff. Man.; VIII ff. Yen.: Uyğ. VIII; IX; VIII ff. Chr.; Man.-A; Man.; Bud.; Civ.; XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict.: O. Kır. IX ff.: Xak. XI (including KB); XII(?) KBVP; XIII(?) KBPP; At.; Tef.; XIV Rbğ., Muh.: Arğu, Çigil, Gancak XI: Çağ. XV ff.: Oğuz XI: Xwar. XIII 'Ali; XIII(?) Oğ.; XIV Quṭb, MN, Nahc.: Kıp. XI: Kom. XIV CCI, CCG; Gr.: Kıp./Tkm. XIII Hou.; XIV Id., Bul.; XV Tuh., Kav., Dur.: Osm. XIV ff.

66. In conclusion may I very humbly submit that this book contains a vast number of quotations, translations, and references, and that it is hard to believe that in such a large flock there are no black sheep? May I plead, as the father of Turkish lexicography did nine centuries ago, that yazma:s atım yağmur yaŋılma:s bilge: yaŋku: 'the only shot that never misses is the rain, the only scholar who never makes a mistake is the echo' Kaş. III 379, 20, and present in advance my apologies for these and other shortcomings.

It would not be proper for me to end this preface without expressing my sincere gratitude to the British Academy for their generous contribution towards the cost of producing this volume.

SUFFIXES

THE importance of Suffixes in the formation of the Turkish vocabulary needs no explanation, and nearly every Turkish grammar contains lists of the Suffs. (excluding declensional and conjugational Suffs.) used to form derived words. There are, for example, extensive lists in v. G., ATG, paras. 44 to 167 and Brockelmann, paras. 20 to 121 and 148 to 176. I included such a list in Studies, pp. 143 ff. and made some corrections and additions to it in Three Notes on Early Turkish, Türk Dili Araştırmaları Yıllığı, 1966, pp. 1 ff. The following is a more complete list of the Suffs. identified in this dictionary. It is divided into five parts, each arranged in a reversed alphabetical order from the last letter backwards. The first two parts contain the Suffs. attached to Nouns (including under this heading all words which are not Verbs) and Verbs respectively to form derived Nouns, and the next two parts the Suffs. attached to Nouns and Verbs respectively to form derived Verbs. The fifth is a list of Noun endings, which are not technically Suffs., since if they are removed what is left is not a recognizable Turkish word, but are found at the end of a sufficient number of Nouns with similar meanings to suggest that they form a class of some sort. Two of these endings are known Iranian Suffs., and the words to which they are attached must be Iranian loan-words. Some other endings are not recognizably, or even probably, foreign and seem to go back to a period far beyond our ken, when the Turkish vocabulary was being built up by methods which have long since been forgotten. Between these two classes are some endings which might be, but are not necessarily, foreign. It is noticeable that there is a high proportion of names of animals, insects, and plants in words with these endings.

It should be noted that, although there is commonly supposed to be a clear distinction between Denominal and Deverbal Suffs., the division is not at all clear cut; several Suffs. which might be regarded as properly Den., like -çı:, -duruk, also occasionally occur as Dev. Suffs., and the Dev. Suff. -ma:k occasionally as a Den. Suff.

Scattered through Kaş. are several remarks on the functions of some of these Suffs.; the relevant references are given in the lists below.

The concept of Active, Passive, Transitive, and Intransitive Verbs is a familiar one in all grammars; in Turkish the same terms must necessarily also be applied to N.s and N./A.s, since, for example, Dev. N.A.s like sınuk (sın- -uk) 'broken', köçürme: (köçür- -me:) 'travelling (stove)', and éşidüt (éşid- -üt) 'hearing' can be translated only by Participles.

The word 'dominant' applied to a Suff. beginning with a vowel means that this vowel is an integral part of the Suff. and if the word to which it is attached ends in a vowel it is the latter that is elided, e.g. tarmut (tarm(a:-) -ut).

When a Suff. consisting of, or beginning with, a vowel is attached to a Dis. or Dis.V. ending in a consonant the second vowel of the V. is usually, but not always, elided, e.g. adrı: (ad(ı)r-ı:), but biriki: (birik-i:).

It should be noted that when a Suff. beginning with -ğ-/-g- is attached to a word ending with -n the two sounds are combined as -ŋ-, e.g. yaŋak (yan-ğak) and that when such a Suff. is attached to a word ending in -ğ/-g or -k in both cases the two sounds are combined as -kk-, which became in practice -k-, e.g. baku: (bak-ğu:), tiken (tik-gen), yaku: (yağ-ğu:).

I. NOMINAL SUFFIXES

(a) DENOMINAL (Den. N.)

-ça: about half a dozen words carry this Suff., which is more in the nature of an Equative Case-ending than a Suff. Most are Advs., like ança:, but at least one, barça: is used as a N./A. The Dim. Suff. -ça:/-çe:, which did not appear till the medieval period, was borrowed from Pe.

-ke: Dim. Suff., only(?) in siŋirke:, yipke:, perhaps a crasis of -kiñe:.

-la:-le: very rare; forms Advs. in ayla:, tünle:, and perhaps birle:, and Adjs. in körkle:/körtle: if these are not l.-w.s.

-kıña:/kiñe: Dim. Suff.; very rare.

-ra:/-re: forms Loc. Advs., e.g. içre: 'inside, within'; very rare.

-ya:/ye: only in bérye:, yırya:, prob. Sec. f. of -ra:/-re:.

-çı:/-çi: forms N.Ag.s; see Kaş. II 48; very common.

-nçı:/-nçi: See -nç.

-tı:/-ti: forms Advs. from Adjs., e.g. eğgü:ti:; very rare; ? also a Dev. Suff.

-nti: forms an Ordinal, only in ékkinti: 'second'; perhaps an earlier form of -nç.

-tirti:/-türti:, etc. forms Loc. Advs., e.g. içtirti: which is practically syn. w. içre:; very rare.

-kı:/-ki: forms N./A.s describing position in time or space, e.g. aşnu:ki: 'former'; üze:ki: 'situated on or above'; fairly common in the early period; later the practice grew up of attaching this Suff. only to words in the Loc., e.g. evdeki: 'in the house'.

-du: dubious; only(?) in kardu: which might be a Dev. N.

-ğu:/-gü very rare as a Den. Suff.; forms A.N.s like énçgü:, Conc. N.s like tuzğu:, and Adj.s like buğra:ğu:; also a Dev. Suff.

-a:ğu:/-e:gü: dominant; forms Collectives, usually fr. Numerals e.g. üçe:gü: 'three together', but see also içe:gü:, yüze:gü:.

-ŋü: only(?) in esriŋü: syn. w. esri: 'dappled'; also a Dev. Suff., but this word can hardly be a Dev. N./A.

-ru:/-rü: Directive Suff. meaning 'towards'; very rare; syn. w. -ğaru:/-gerü:.

-ğaru:/-gerü: Directive Suff. like -ru:/-rü:; hardly to be explained as that Suff. attached to the Dat., since it is attested in dialects earlier than those in which the Dat. Suff. -ka:/-ke: became -ğa:/-ge:; rather rare.

-layu:/-leyü: meaning 'like', e.g. börileyü: 'like a wolf'; properly Ger. in -u:/-ü: fr. a Den. V. in -la:-/-le:-, but usually the only recorded form of the V. concerned.

-ç (after vowels) /-aç/-eç/-ıç/-iç (after consonants) Dim. Suff.; very rare, esp. the last two.

-ğaç, etc. function obscure; only(?) in odğuç, kuşğaç, and perhaps sügiç; also a Dev. Suff.

-leç certainly Turkish in üçleç; otherwise see List III.

-nç/-ınç/-inç/-unç/-ünç the ordinary early Suff. of Ordinals; replaced in the medieval period by -nçı:/-nçi:, etc.; see also -nti:.

(F) -t a Sogdian Plur. Suff. found in tégit, tarxat Plurs. of tégin, tarka:n which are prob. very old l.-w.s.

(-ta:ğ/-teg in words like antağ 'thus' is not a Suff. but the Postposition te:g fused w. the stem of ol.)

-liğ/-lig/-luğ/-lüg forms Poss. N./A.s, see Kaş. I 500; very common.

-sığ/-sig forms N./A.s meaning 'resembling (something)' and the like; properly Dev. N./A.s in -ğ/-g fr. Simulative Den. V.s in -sı:-/-si:-, but the actual V.s are seldom recorded; rare.

-k/ (after vowels and -r) -ak/-ek (the normal forms) /-ık/-ik/-uk/-ük (all rare) usually forms Dim. N.s, but also less restricted words like ortuk; fairly common.

-çak/-çek forms Conc. N.s, usually N.I.s, e.g. ağırçak 'spindle-whorl'; rare.

-çuk/-çük as correctly stated in Kaş. III 226 forms Dim. N.s, but generally w. a metaph. sense; e.g. baka: 'frog', baka:çuk 'muscle'; very rare in the early period, later became the commonest Dim. Suff.

-dak/-dek and also(?) -duk/-dük both very rare w. uncertain functions, see bağırdak, beliŋdek, burunduk; in the last perhaps a crasis of -duruk; beliŋdek might be a Dev. N./A. in -k fr. a Den. V. in -de:- fr. beliŋ.

-ğa:k/-ge:k usually forms Conc. N.s, e.g. eŋek, kiḍizge:k, müŋüzge:k, yaŋak; very rare, but a common Dev. Suff.

-ğuk dubious, only(?) in çamğuk; commoner as a Dev. Suff.

-lık/-lik/-luk/-lük usually forms A.N.s, but quite often Conc. N.s; its various usages are analysed in Kaş. I 505; 510–11.

-mak/-mek forms Conc. N.s, e.g. kögüzmek, but the connection w. the basic N. is sometimes tenuous; very rare, but common as a Dev. Suff.

-muk/-a:muk forms N.s some of which seem to be pejorative, e.g. kara:muk, sola:muk; very rare.

-ñak perhaps Dim.; only(?) in baka:ñak 'the frog in a horse's hoof'.

-rak/-rek forms Comparative Adjs.; common.

-duruk/-dürük usually forms N.s describing pieces of equipment, e.g. boyunduruk 'yoke'; rather rare; also a Dev. Suff.

-sa:k/-se:k properly Dev. N./A. fr. a Den. V. in -sa:-/-se:- but the V. itself is sometimes not recorded; very rare attached to basic N.s, e.g. tavarsa:k, less rare attached to Dev. N.s in -ğ, etc., e.g. barığsa:k; see Kaş. I 24; II 55–6.

-suk/-sük function obscure; forms Conc. N.s, e.g. ilersük, bağırsuk, sıŋarsuk and N.I.s, e.g. taŋsuk; perhaps Dev. Suff. in -uk/-ük fr. Simulative Den. V.s in -sı:-/-si:-.

-çıl/-çil forms N./A.s of addiction, e.g. igçil 'sickly' fr. i:g 'disease'; rare.

-ğıl/-gil (a) attached to Numerals, e.g. üçgil 'triangular'; (b) otherwise forms N./A.s relating to colour or shape, e.g. başğil, tarğıl, kırğıl, yipgil, yalğıl; rare; also Dev. Suff.

-sıl in arsıl, syn. w. a:r, 'auburn'; prob. a Dev. N./A. in -ıl fr. a Simulative Den. V. in -sı:-; the alternative spelling arsal is improbable; both words are Hap. leg.

-ım/-im forms Conc. N.s, only(?) in eḏrim, barım; a common Dev. Suff.

-dam/-dem forms N./A.s meaning 'resembling (something)', e.g. teŋridem 'god-like'; rare.

-a:n/-e:n/-un an obsolete Plur. Suff. (see Kaş. I 76); only(?) in oğla:n, ere:n, boḏun, and perhaps öze:n.

-çın/-çin function obscure; only(?) in balıkçın, kökçin/kökşin.

-tın/-tun/-dın/-dun, etc. a Loc. Suff., e.g. taştın 'outside'; to be distinguished fr. the partially homophonous Abl. Suff.

-ğa:n/-ge:n forms Conc. N.s w. a more restricted meaning than the basic N.; e.g. arpağa:n, temürgen; very rare; also a Dev. Suff. and an Ending.

-ğun/-a:ğun etc. (also -ge:n in yettige:n) forms Collectives, e.g. alkuğun, kaḏna:ğun, keliŋün; very rare; cf. -a:ğu:/-e:gü:.

-ka:n/ke:n forms an Adj. in teŋri:ken 'devout', and Temporal Advs. in amtıkan, ançağınçakan; very rare; also an Ending.

(-man)/-men function obscure in (PU) kükmen, közmen; in Türkmen prob. a corruption of Pe. Suff. -mand 'resembling'; also a Dev. Suff.

-şin. See -çin.

-iŋ/-üŋ Adj. Suff. in yéliŋ 'windy'; Dim. Suff. in kölüŋ 'puddle'; also a Dev. Suff.

-daŋ/-duŋ, etc. forms Conc. N.s only(?) in otuŋ, uldaŋ, and perhaps izdeŋ.

-ar/-er (also -rer in ikkirer)/-şar/-şer (after vowels) forms Distributives after Numerals, e.g. birer 'one each', and Adjs of quantity, e.g. azar 'a few each'; very rare; also a Dev. and Conjugational Suff.

-ş/-ış/-uş, etc. function obscure; see öḏüş, bağış, 2 ba:ş, kökiş; very rare; also a Dev. Suff.

-da:ş/-de:ş forms N.s of Association indicating that two persons have a common possession of some kind, e.g. kada:ş 'kinsman', yérde:ş 'compatriot'; see Kaş. I 406. It has been plausibly suggested that this Suff. is a crasis of the Loc. Suff. -da:/-de: and é:ş 'companion'. Rather rare.

-mış/-miş only in altmış, yétmiş 'sixty, seventy', a common Conjugational Suff.

-gey only(?) in küçgey 'violent' fr. kü:ç 'violence'.

-z demonstrably a Den. N. Suff. only in ékkiz 'twin' fr. ékki:; also a Dev. Suff. and an Ending.

(-tüz in küntüz, q.v., is prob. a separate word not a Suff., cf. -ta:ğ.) -sız/-siz/-suz/-süz forms Priv. N./A.s connoting the non-possession of a thing, quality, etc.; the opposite of -lığ, etc.; cognate to the Den. V. Suff. -sıra:-, etc.; very common.

(b) DEVERBAL (Dev. N.s)

-a:/-e:/-ı:/-i:/-u:/-ü taken together fairly common; there is no discoverable rule prescribing which Suff. should be attached to any given V., all being attached to V.s with unrounded and with rounded vowels; when one is attached to a V. ending in a vowel a euphonic -y- is inserted, e.g. ula:yu:. Usually forms Advs., less often Conjunctions, like ötrü:, Postposns. like tapa:, Conc. N.s like oprı:, aḏrı:, A.N.s like 3 kéce: or Adjs. like egri:, köni:.

-ğa:/-ge: forms Adjs., e.g. kısğa:; N./A.s, usually Active, e.g. öge:, bilge:; and N.s either Intrans., e.g. köli:ge: or Pass., e.g. tilge:; rare and obsolescent; also an Ending.

-ma:/-me: forms Pass. N.s and N./A.s; fairly common; its use as an ordinary Dev. N., N.Ac., etc., prevalent in Osm., did not develop till the medieval period.

-ğma:/-gme: properly a Conjugational Suff.; occasionally forms N.s like tanığma: 'riddle'.

-çı:/-çi: forms N.Ag.s, e.g. ota:cı:, okı:çı:; common Den. Suff., very rare as a Dev. Suff.

-ğu:çı:/-gü:çi: properly a Conjugational Suff., see Kaş. II 49, but occasionally forms N.Ag.s, e.g. ayğu:çı, bitigü:çi:.

-dı:/-di:, etc. a common Conjugational Suff., sometimes used to form Pass. N./A.s, usually attached to Refl. V.s, e.g. üḏründi:, occasionally to basic V.s, e.g. ögdi:, alka:dı:, sökti:.

-tı:/-ti: different fr. the foregoing; used to form Advs., e.g. arıtı:, uza:tı:, tüke:ti:; very rare; also a Den. Suff.

-çu:/-çü: forms Pass. N./As; attached only to Refl. f.s; syn. w. -dı:, etc.; rare.

-du:, etc. in eḏdü:, umdu:, süktü: seems to be a Sec. f. of dı:.

-ğu:/-gü: properly a Conjugational Suff. but forms a good many N.s and N./As; rather more than half are N.I.s, e.g. bile:gü: 'whetstone'; most of the remainder are Conc. N.s, e.g. keḏgü: 'clothing'; the rest are miscellaneous, e.g. oğla:ğu: 'gently nurtured'; it appears in crasis in words like ertiŋü: and yaku:.

(-yu:, etc.; see -a:, etc.)

-ç forms ordinary N.Ac.s, N./A.S.s, etc.; attached only to Refl. f.s (and tin-); prob. a crasis of -iş etc. which seems not to be attached to Refl. f.s in the early period; common.

-ğa:ç/-geç only(?) in bösgeç, a Conc. N., and kısğaç, a N.I. in the early period but commoner later; perhaps merely a Sec. f. of -ğuç.

-ğuç/-güç normally forms N.I.s, e.g. bıçguç; rare; also a Den. Suff.

-maç/-meç forms names of foodstuffs, e.g. tutmaç; rare.

-t (only after -r-)/-ut/-üt dominant; forms N.Ac.s, A.N.s, and Conc. N.s which are usually Active; rare.

-ğut/-güt usually describes persons, e.g. alpa:ğut, uruŋut, baya:ğut, and (etymologically obscure) ura:ğut; also forms A.N.s, etc. in ögüt, çapğut, kızğut, etc.; very rare and obsolescent.

-ğ/-ığ/-iğ/-uğ/-üğ the commonest Dev. Suff.; forms a wide range of Dev. N.s and N./A.s, N.Ac.s, etc.; see Kaş. I 26–7.

-çığ/-çiğ forms Intrans. and Pass. N./A.s; attached only to Refl. f.s; perhaps a crasis of -çsığ/-çsiğ, in which case the words concerned are N./A.s in -ğ fr. Simulative V.s in -sı:-/-si:- fr. Dev. N.s in -ç.

-k (after vowels and -r-)/-ak/-ek/-ık/-ik of these -k is rather common, the rest rather rare. Practically syn. w. -ğ; there does not seem any discoverable rule for deciding which Suff. should be used, but on the whole most words ending in -ğ, etc. are N.s and most words ending in -k, etc. are N./A.s, but it also forms A.N.s, e.g. emge:k, kılık; Conc. N.s, e.g. kesek, and N.I.s, e.g. bıçak. See Kaş. I 27.

-uk/-ük (-ok/-ök) dominant (e.g. in ağruk, esrük); usually forms Intr. or Pass. N./A.s; also a few Pass. N.s, e.g. buyruk, köpük, kölük. Common.

-çak/-çek and -çuk/-çük not direct variants since the first is also attached to V.s containing rounded vowels and the second to V.s containing unrounded vowels; the semantic difference may be the same as that between -ak and -uk. Both form Conc. N.s and N.I.s; rare. Also a Den. Suff.

-dak/-dek it is doubtful whether this is a Dev. as well as a Den. Suff., but ördek looks more like a Dev. N. than a Den. N.

-duk, etc. properly a Conjugational form (Perfect Participle, etc.) but Kaş. I 65 may well be right in defining ağduk as a Dev. N./A. w. this Suff.

-ğa:k/-ge:k usually forms N./A.s connoting habitual or repeated action; also a few Conc. N.s, e.g. içgek, kudurğa:k, and N.I.s, e.g. bıçğa:k, tarğa:k w. the same connotation implied; cf. -ğa:n/-ge:n.

-ğuk/-gük forms Conc. N.s and some N.I.s; rare.

-ma:k/-me:k properly the Infinitive Suff., but also used to form a few Conc. N.s, e.g. çakma:k, and, with vocalic assimilation, üğrümük.

-duruk/-dürük forms N.s describing pieces of equipment, e.g. tizildürük; very rare; also a Den. Suff.

-sık/-sik forms N.Ac.s, usually Intrans.; properly the Suff. -k attached to a Simulative V. in -sı:-/-si:-, but the V.s themselves are not noted; rare.

-yuk/-yük properly a Conjugational Suff., see v. G. ATG, para. 218, but forms some Intrans. N./A.s; note the -n-y- crasis in bulğañuk, etc.; rare.

-l (after vowels)/-ıl/-il forms N./A.s usually Intrans. or Pass.; rare.

-ğıl/-gil in kızğıl relates, like the Den. Suff., to colour; in bıçğıl forms a N.I.; very rare.

-m/-ım/-im/-um/-üm properly describes a single action, e.g. ölüm 'death' (you can only die once) or içim 'a single drink', but sometimes used less precisely as a N.Ac. or Conc. N.; common.

-n/-en-(only in evren, tevren) /-ın/-in/-un/-ün partially dominant, see, e.g. uzun, tütün fr. uza:-, tüte:-, but after vowels -n is more usual; forms N./A.s and Conc. N.s, usually Intrans.; not very common.

-ğa:n/-ge:n properly a Conjugational form, Present Participle, but, at any rate in Kaş., connoting repeated or habitual action, see Kaş. I 24; II 53; fairly common; cf. -ğa:k/-ge:k; also a Den. Suff. and Ending.

-ğın/-gin (after unrounded vowels) /-ğun/-gün (after rounded vowels) forms N.s and N./A.s, usually Intrans. or Pass.; not very common; -ğun/-gün also a Den. Suff.

-ma:n/-me:n forms N.I.s; very rare; also a Den. Suff.

-ŋ/-aŋ (in çalaŋ)/-üŋ (in bürüŋ) very rare; the full phonetic range is prob. wider; forms N.s and N./A.s, exact function obscure.

-çaŋ only(?) in ayançaŋ; perhaps connotes habitual action.

-ar/-er/-ır/-ir/-ur/-ür properly an Aor. Participial Suff.; forms a few N.s and N./A.s.

-mur only(?) in yağmur and perhaps çağmur.

-s only(?) in öles; ? Sec. f. of -z.

-ğas only(?) in bıçğas; perhaps Sec. f. of -ğaç.

-ş/-ış/-iş/-uş/-üş there are perhaps two different series here, cf. -k, etc. and -uk/-ük; in some cases a vowel is followed by -ş but in others the -ış, etc. are dominant, e.g. alkış, ülüş, arviş, busuş, fr. alka:-, üle:-, arva:-, busa:-, and, although these words are N.Ac.s, in some cases, e.g. uruş 'hitting one another', the action is reciprocal, in others, e.g. ağiş 'rising' it is neutral or at most co-operative; cf. the Dev. V. Suff. -ş-, etc. The connotation of 'a way of (doing something)', prevalent in Osm., is unknown in the early period. Common.

-z/-ız/-iz/-uz/-üz forms N.s and N./A.s, usually Intrans. or Pass., but precise function obscure; it is doubtful whether 1 ö:z and uz should be regarded as Dev. N.s fr. ö:- and u:- as Bang suggested; very rare and obsolescent.

-duz forms an Intrans. N./A.; only(?) in munduz.

II. VERBAL SUFFIXES

(a) DENOMINAL (Den. V.s)

-a:-/-e:-/-ı:-/-i:-/-u:-/-ü:- the first two fairly common, the rest rare; attached only to consonants; prob. the oldest Den. V. Suff., forms Intrans. and less often Trans. V.s; see Kaş. I 20.

-da:-/-de:-/-ta:-/te:- rare and attached only to a limited range of consonants, forms only(?) Trans. V.s.

-ka:-/-ke:- very rare; only(?) in ırınçke:- and yarlıka:-, and, in the Refl. f., ağrıkan-; in the last two the -k- is a crasis of -ğk-.

-ırka:-/urka:-, etc. function obscure, very rare; see taŋırka:-, tsoyorka:-, and, in the Refl. f., alpırkan-, özirken-; see the Dev. Suff. -ırkan-.

-la:-/-le:- attached to all vowels and consonants; forms Trans. and Intrans. V.s; when attached to the names of parts of the body means 'to strike on the . . .'; see Kaş. I 22; much the commonest Den. Suff.

-ra:-/-re:- a very rare Sec. f. of -la:-/-le:-, e.g. kekre:-, kökre:-.

-sıra:-/-sire:- forms Priv. Den. V.s meaning 'to be without, or deprived of, something', e.g. öğsire:-; cognate to the Den. N. Suff. -sız, etc.; rare and obsolescent.

-sa:-/-se:- forms Desid. Den. V.s; fairly common; these V.s form two classes: (1) those derived fr. basic N.s, e.g. evse:- 'to long for home'; (2) those derived fr. N.Ac.s, e.g. barığsa:- 'to wish to go'. Also a Dev. Suff., equally common; in Kaş. I 281, 11 it is said that barsa:- is permissible, but barığsa:- the more usual form. See also I 279 ff.

-lı:- (-li:-) very rare Sec. f. of -la:-/-le:-, e.g. tumlı:-.

-sı:-/-si:- forms Simulative Den. V.s, e.g. açığsı:-; very rare in the basic f. but see -sın-/-sin-; see Kaş. I 282; also a Dev. Suff.

-d̲- (after vowels)/a:d̲-/-e:d̲- (after consonants) these V.s are usually Intrans. and mean 'to be, or become (something)', but occasionally Trans., e.g. köze:d̲-; as in the Perf. the -d̲- merged with the Suff. -tı:/-ti: and became -ttı:/-tti:, Kaş. erroneously indexed some of these V.s w. final -t- but it is unlikely that this was the pronunciation except in the Perf.

-it- (? -id̲-) the nature of this Suff. in tönit- and terit- is obscure.

-k- (only after vowels)/-ık-/-ik-/-uk-/-ük- forms Intrans., and occasionally Pass., V.s; see Kaş. I 20; II 118, 165; rather common.

-l- forms Intrans. V.s, e.g. tusul-; very rare; also a Dev. Suff.

-sın-/-sin- the Refl. f. of -sı:-/-si:- forming Intrans. Simulative V.s; rare when attached to basic N.s, e.g. uluğsın-, but fairly common when attached to N.S.A.s in -m, etc., e.g. alımsın- translated in Kaş. I 20 'to pretend to take, without actually taking'; see also II 202, 259; there are several hybrid forms like begimsin- in which -im- is inserted between the basic N. and the Suff.

-r- (after vowels) /-ar-/-er- (the ordinary form after consonants) /-ır-/-ir- (very rare, after Dis. N.s in which the second vowel, -ı-/-i-, is elided, e.g. kurğır- fr. kurığ) forms Intrans. V.s; see Kaş. II 163; fairly common.

-ğar-/-ger-/-kar- (after -) /(-ker-ŋ) normally forms Trans. V.s, occasionally Intrans.; fairly common.

-ğır-/-gir- forms Inchoative V.s meaning 'almost to do (something); to be on the point of doing (something)', (see Kaş. II 200, which relates to Dev. V.s); e.g. tazğır-, tozğır; very rare; also a Dev. Suff.

-ş- identical w. the Dev. Suff. -ş-, etc.; noted only in arkaş-.

(b) DEVERBAL (Dev. V.s)

-sa:-/-se:- forms Desid. V.s; see Kaş. I 21; also a Den. Suff.; fairly common.

-sı:-/-si:- forms Simulative V.s, e.g. emsi:-; very rare; also a Den. Suff.

-d̲- Trans. and prob. Emphatic in to:d̲-, ko:d̲-, yo:d̲-, yüd̲-.

-t- (after vowels and -r-) /-ıt-/-it/-ut-/-üt- the only common Suff. of Caus. V.s fr. basic V.s ending in vowels; the other forms are rather rare. See Kaş. I 20.

-k- (after vowels and -r-)/-ık-/-ik-/-uk-/-ük- when attached to Intrans. V.s intensifies the meaning, e.g. a:ç- 'to be hungry'; açık- 'to be famished', see Kaş. I 20; when attached to Trans. V.s forms either Pass. V.s, e.g. sanç- 'to rout'; sançık- 'to be routed'; or Intrans. V.s, e.g. böl- 'to divide, separate' (Trans.); bölük- 'to separate, part' (Intrans.); rather rare.

-tık-/-duk- forms Emphatic Pass. V.s, only(?) in bulduk-, bastık-.

-sık-/-sik-/-suk-/-sük- forms Emphatic Pass. V.s, e.g. bil- 'to know'; bilsik- 'to be well known, notorious'; see Kaş. I 21; II 138, 237; rare.

-l-/-ıl-/il-/-ul-/-ül- the normal Suff. for Pass. V.s; see Kaş. I 21; II 138, 237; very common.

-n-/-ın-/-in-/-un-/-ün- forms Refl. V.s, which acc. to Kaş. had four shades of meaning 'to do something to oneself, for oneself, or by oneself; or pretend to do something but not actually do it' (the last practically unknown elsewhere); it was also used to form Intrans. and sometime Pass. V.s fr. Trans.; see Kaş. I 21, II 168, 254; very common.

-ırkan-/-irken- in isirken-, kısırkan-; function obscure; see Den. V. Suff. -ırka:-.

-r- (in one or two V.s, ürper-, kurır, yélpir-, etc.)/-çır-/-çir- (in tamçır-külçir-)/-ğır-/-gir- (perhaps occasionally -ğur-/-gür-; rare) /-sir- (in külsir-) all form Inchoative V.s; see the Den. Suff. -ğır-/-gir-.

(ar-)/-er-/-ur-/-ür-, attached only to consonants, the first two very rare, the second two fairly common, form Caus. V.s, see Kaş. II 87, 199.

-dur-/-dür-/-tur-/-tür-, attached only to consonants, the commonest Suff. for forming Caus. V.s; see Kaş. I 20; II 197.

-ğur-/-gür- attached only to a limited range of consonants, forms Caus. V.s; see Kaş. II 198; rather rare.

-şur-/-şür- (occasionally in the Sec. f. -çur-/-çür-) is not a primary Suff. but a combination of -ş- and -ur-, the preceding vowel often being elided, e.g. tap-, tapış-, tapşur-.

-ş- (only after vowels)/-ış-/-iş-/-uş-/-üş- forms Co-operative and Reciprocal V.s which, according to Kaş., meant 'to do (something) together (with a Plur. Subject); to do (something) in every part (with a Sing. Subject); to do (something) to one another (with a Plur. Subject); to help (someone Dat.) to do (something Acc.); to compete with (birle:, someone) in doing (something Acc.). N. See Kaş. I 20; II 113 ff., 225; common.

-uz-/-üz- (dominant, e.g. tüte:-, tütüz-)/-duz-/-düz-/-ğuz-/-güz- form Caus. V.s; obviously cognate to -ur-, etc. (cf. -sız, -sıra:-); acc. to Kaş. II 87 -duz- was an Oğuz Suff.; see also II 164; all rare in the early period; became commoner, and in some languages almost standard, in the later period.

ENDINGS

-ğa:/-ge, which was a rare and obsolescent Dev. N. suffix, also appears at the end of a larger number of words which cannot be so explained. Some are pretty certainly not l.-w.s, others, like sırıçğa: 'crystal, glass' prob. are. The list includes one, perhaps significant, pair. avıçğa: 'old man', kurtğa: 'old woman', and several names of animals and insects çekürge:, (PU) çınçırğa:, torı:ğa:, kumursğa:, karğa:, karınçğa:, kaşğa:, sarıçğa:, etc.

-va:ç/-wa:ç in sanduwa:ç, yala:vaç is the Iranian word (and Suff.) wāç 'voice'.

-dıç occurs in tardıç, savdıç, sağdıç.

-la:ç/-lıç in ıkı:la:ç, iŋliç, toḏlıç, karğıla:ç, sokarlaç, sondıla:ç, three of them names of birds, is prob., but not demonstrably, foreign.

-ğa:n/-ge:n (also Den. and Dev. Suffs.)/-ka:n/-ke:n occurs at the end of several names of animals: tavışğa:n (a very old word), tayğa:n, sıçğa:n, sağızğa:n, sıkırkan, etc., and of plants: çıbıka:n, tuturka:n, kara:kan, kövürgen, etc.

-la:n occurs at the end of the names of several animals arsla:n, bakla:n, bula:n, bursla:n, kapla:n, kula:n, sırtla:n ('hyaena', first noted in the medieval period), yıla:n, and one title çoğla:n.

-va:r in çığılva:r, yala:var is an Iranian Suff. meaning 'carrying'.

-z occurs at the end of three numerals: ottuz, tokkuz, sekkiz; several names of parts of the human or animal body: ağız, boğuz, büñüz, tiz, köküz, köz; and several names of animals and insects: uyaz, toŋuz, kunduz, etc., as well as miscellaneous words like yıltız and yultuz. None of these are likely to be l.-w.s.

Mon. A

Preliminary note. There were never many Turkish words consisting of a single vowel, and all of them except a: became obsolete at a very early date. To Kaş., with his background of Arabic philology, the whole concept was strange, but he did devote a section, headed rather inscrutably ḳawātu'l-arba'a, 'four-letter words', I 39–40, in the chapter containing two-letter words of which the first is hamza to such words. It originally contained one word hamza alif, four hamza wāw, and three hamza yā, but in the surviving MS. some of the second group have had letters added to them. As w is not a genuine Turkish sound, the second group must all have been o:, u:, ö:, or ü:. Of the third group one was almost certainly ay, the others probably ı: or i:. The only common word, ı:, occurs in Kaş. as yı:, its true nature and meaning having already been forgotten.

a: Exclamation, usually vocative in character, occasionally expressing surprise, in the early period usually affixed to the word qualified, later, perhaps under foreign influence, placed before it. The attachment of -a/-e metri gratia at the end of lines in KB and other poems is a Pe. trick, and perhaps not native Turkish. S.i.a.m.l.g., but also in contiguous non-Turkish languages. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. tüzün oğlum-a 'my good son' U III 35, 26; anaçım-a 'my dear mother' U III 9, 2 (ii); baxşı-a 'my teacher' U IV 28, 4; a.o.o.: Xak. XI a: an exclamation (ḥarf) of surprise (al-taḥayyur); hence one says ol meni: a: kıldı: 'he surprised me' Kaş. I 39: KB -a is a common verse-filler, e.g. tuş teŋ-a (or -e?) rhyming with saŋa 7: Çağ. XV ff. a: (sic) 'vocative' (ḥarf-i nidā) San. 27v. 1 (quotn. including a: yigit 'oh youth'; also described as an abbreviation of an in such words as alar for anlar): Kom. XIV e 'vocative exclamation' CCG; Gr. 84 (quotn.): Kıp. XV 'vocative' (al-munādi wa'l-mufriğ) a e.g. a kiçi (for kişi) 'oh man' Tuh. 60b. 2 (also 84b. 3; 85b. 7); ḥarfu'l-nidā a (also é) placed before the name of a person called, e.g. a Altunbuğa Kav. 52, 11.

1 ı: usually translated 'vegetation', but the contexts show that it meant something between a plant and a tree, probably 'bush' (singular or collective); n.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ıda: taşda: kalmışı: 'those of them who remained in the bush and stony desert' T 4; atığ ıka: bayu:r ertimiz 'we tied the horses to bushes' T 27: Uyğ. VIII ıda: kavuşalım 'let us assemble in the bush' Şu. E 10–11; VIII ff. Man.-A béş törlüg ıda ığaçda 'in the five kinds of bushes and trees' M I 8, 19–20; kaltı ığ yaŋı yérden témin örtürürçe 'as one can grow bushes almost immediately on newly planted ground' M I 14, 10; bir narwan(?) atlığ ı a bush called narwan(?) (Persian nārwān 'witch elm, Ulmus montana)' Man.-uig. Frag. 400, 4; ol ı uçında olurdı 'he sat on the top of that bush' do. 401, 1; Man. ne tağları ı ığaç kaya kum barı 'whatever mountains, bushes, trees, rocks, and sand there are' M III 8, 3–4 (ii): Bud. (fruits that grow) ı ığacda U I 27, 5; ı tarığ 'bushes and cultivated land' U I 27, 3; U II 77, 27; TT IV 10, 6; *VIII K.*4; a.o.o.: Xak. XI one says yı: yığa:ç for 'tangled trees' (mā'ltaffa mina'l-şacar), originally yigi: 'bushy' (mutarāşş) but contracted Kaş. III 216 (perhaps a false etymology); a.o. III 25 (yigi:).

PU 2 ı: Hap. leg.; apparently so vocalized in MS. Xak. XI ı: 'a word used to express refusal' (kalimatu'l-inkār) alternative to 2 u: Kaş. I 40.

PU ?F 3 ı: Hap. leg.; like many names of fabrics prob. a l.-w., perhaps Chinese; apparently vocalized ay; if ı: or i: perhaps some Chinese word like i 'variegated, rainbow-coloured (clothing)' (Giles 5,434). Xak. XI ı: 'orange-coloured brocade' (dibāc nāranciyu'l-lawn) Kaş. I 40.

PU 1 o: Hap. leg.; the word, no doubt hamza wāw was inadvertently omitted in the MS. and replaced in the margin by o:ka: presumably taken from the example; it is not clear whether this word is an abbreviation of oğ, which appears as below and elsewhere in the medieval period, or whether the latter is an expanded form, prob. the latter. Xak. XI ⟨o:⟩ al-kafīl, 'surety, security, pledge'; one says men anı: o:ka: aldım 'I took him as security' (kaffaltu bihi) Kaş. I 40; (XIV Muh.(?) ḍamana wa kafala 'to stand surety' o:ğlan- Rif. III (only)): Xwar. XIV man takallafa li 'whoever has guaranteed to me' translated kayu . . . maŋa oğ bolsa Nahc. 346, 7; same phr. 162, 6 and 15.

PU 2 o: Hap. leg.; originally hamza wāw, but later a fatḥa was placed over the hamza and an alif added in both places. Xak. o: 'an exclamation (ḥarf) in reply to a caller'. When yā Muḥammad is called out, the man who answers says o: meaning 'what are your orders?' Kaş. I 40 (see 2 u:).

S 3 o: See ol.

1 u: 'sleep'; the Dev. V. is exceptionally uḍı:-, which suggests that this word may originally have been u:ḍ, but that word is nowhere noted in this sense; not noted later than XI. Türkü VIII uda: basdımız 'we surprised . . . in their sleep' I E 35, 37; II E 27; uka (sic) basdımız T 27; VIII ff. Man usınta oḍunti 'he woke from his sleep' M I 6, 21–1: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (gap) uu (sic) üze uḍıyu 'sleeping a . . . sleep' TT III 160: Bud. uvlarındın (? read uularındın) oḍğurup 'arousing . . . from their sleep' U III 11, 8; u TT VIII A.13 (see uḍık); Civ. uda Usp. 77, 14 (see uḍ-): Xak. XI u: (later altered to uḍu:) 'sleep' (al-nawm); hence one says uḍı:dı:m 'I slept', abbreviated from u:dı:dı:m Kaş. I 40; u:dın (MS. in error u:ḍun) anı: oḍğura: 'arousing him from sleep' II 193, 4; similar phr. I 46, 20; ağır u:nı: uçursa:dım 'I wished to drive away heavy sleep' III 247, 23: KB u teg 'like sleep' 1424; kiterse usı 'let him repel sleep' 2331; o.o. 3952, 4963, 6637.

PU 2 u: (bi-iṣbā'i'l-alif) Hap. leg.; in Kaş. iṣbā' normally means 'back-vowels', e.g. both 1 to:z and tu:z are so described to distinguish them from tö:z and tü:z, but, if some contrast with 2 o: is intended, it might mean, as in San., u not o, since ü: is not a very likely sound for an exclamation; see 2 ı:. Xak. XI u: 'an exclamation of refusal (ḥarf inkār) to obey an order' (Kaş. I. 40).

Mon. V. A-

Preliminary note. The only two basic verbs of this shape are u:- and ö:-; in various medieval and modern languages more such verbs appeared as the result of the elision of final consonants, e.g. e-/i- (< 1 er-) 'to be'.

u:- there are a few early occurrences of this verb as an ordinary finite verb meaning 'to be capable' and the like, but it is normally used as an Aux. verb following a verb in the Ger. f. -u:/-ü:, or less often -ğalı:/-geli:, meaning 'to be able'. Even in this sense the word is rare after XI except in the Neg. f. The Pres. Particip. uğa:n, however, used as a N./A. meaning 'God; Almighty' survived rather longer. The later history of the Neg. f. is discussed by Mal. in USp., pp. 224–5. Briefly the Ger. suff. -u:/-ü: and u:- coalesced to produce -uma-/-üme- the 'Impossible' f. of the verb. This stage was reached in Osm. in the early medieval period, but later, probably as the result of a general tendency to 'unround' round vowels, this became -ama-/-eme-, producing such forms as Osm. seveme- 'to be unable to love'. It has been suggested that in such forms the -a-/-e- is a reduced form of al- which is used as an Aux. verb in the same sense in some modern languages, but this is improbable. It is more plausible that the Osm. Continuous Pres. Suff. -uyor (not subject to phonetic harmony) is a survival of the positive form of u:-. Türkü VIII étinu: yaratu:nu: umaduk 'because they could not organize themselves (Hend.)' I E 10, II E 9; usar 'if possible' T 11: VIII ff. kamışayu: uma:tı:n 'without being able to move' IrkB 16 (and four o.o. of Neg. f.); eḍgüsi: uyu:rı: 'his good and capable men' do. 28: otsu:z suvsu:z kaltı: uyı:n 'how can I (get on) without fodder or water?' do. 45; (the fat horse's mouth became hard) iḍi:si: uma:z 'its master cannot (control it)' do. 65; aḍa:rtu: uma:z 'cannot endanger him' Toyok 25, 29 (ETY II 59): Uyğ. VIII ff. 1 ap/ep, etc. Reduplicative intensifying prefix, usually placed before N./A.s connoting colour or physical shape. Occasionally at later periods the two words are fused, and the compound thus formed entered in dicts.; in such cases the final consonant of the prefix is sometimes doubled. Other such prefixes are listed below. C.i.a.p.a.l. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. for a possible occurrence see 2 ap: Xak. XI ap/ep 'a strengthening and intensifying particle' (ḥarf ta'kid wa mubālağa); to describe something 'particularly good' one says ep edgü:, and in Oğuz for 'intensely white' ap ak . . . up/üp 'a strengthening particle for [words connoting] colours'; hence one says, in Çigil, üp ürüŋ 'intensely white' Kaş. I 34: XIV Muh. şadidu'l--bayāḍ 'intensely white' ap ak Mel. 68, 5; Rif. 168: Çağ. XV ff. San. 16v. 8 ff. contains a short note on prefixes of this nature, enumerating several of them, ap (ağ), sap (sarığ), etc.; some of these reappear in the lexicon, e.g. ap ('with p') ağ/ak 'very white' 27v. 7: Xwar. XIII(?) ap ak Oğ. 231: Kıp. XIII Hou. 31, 4 ff. has a note on such prefixes and lists several, ap (ak), kap (kara:), etc.: XIV appak şadidu'l-bayāḍ, followed by a note and another example Id. 7: XV Kav. 5, 4 ff. and Tuh. 85a. 6 ff. have similar notes with examples appak, etc.: Osm. XIV ff. e:v basically 'dwelling place', with the particular connotation of a separate dwelling place, the exact meaning, 'tent, house', etc. depending on local circumstances. In some literary texts it also has the same metaph. meanings as Ar. bayt, e.g. 'celestial mansion'. C.i.a.p.a.l. The phonetic history is unusual; the original form was e:v, but this had become ew in some languages by XI and from this followed the development ew > üw > üwi > üy; üy, less often öy, is the normal form in all modern language groups except NE, where it has undergone further distortions, and SW where ev still survives, as it does sporadically elsewhere. The phr. ev bark 'dwelling and movable property' is common, particularly in the early period. Türkü VIII ev 'dwelling place', presumably 'tent' is very common and ev bark occurs 3 or 4 times, see ETY Index and bark: VIII ff. ev occurs in IrkB 5, 9 and 55, but not 8 (see evin): Uyğ. VIII ff. aba:/1 apa:/ebe:/epe: words of this form, connoting various terms of relationship abound in modern Turkish languages with meanings as various as (1) 'ancestor'; (2) 'grandfather'; (3) 'grandmother'; (4) 'father'; (5) 'mother'; (6) 'paternal uncle'; (7) 'paternal aunt'; (8) 'elder brother'; (9) 'elder sister'; (10) (presumably metaph.) 'midwife'. Some, e.g. aba: 'paternal uncle', an abbreviation of Mong. abaga, and other words beginning ab . . ., etc. are certainly foreign; others, often occurring in only one language group, are of unknown origin. The only early forms seem to be Türkü, etc. apa: 'ancestor' and Oğuz ebe: 'mother'. Kaş. does not record the former, but it occurs in KB. In this early period it is often impossible to be sure whether the vowels are back or front and the consonant voiced or unvoiced; the following are the likeliest transcriptions. Türkü VIII eçü:m apa:m 'my ancestors' I E 1, II E 3; I E 13, II E 12; eçü:miz apa:mız I E 19; Ongin 1; apa: also occurs as an element in P.N.s, possibly as a title, e.g. apa: tarxan T 34; this phr. occurs in Chinese refces. to the Türkü and seems to be interpreted as 'commander-in-chief', see Liu Mau-tsai, Die chinesischen Nachrichten zur Geschichte der Ost-Türken, T'u-küe, index, s.v. A-po-ta-kan: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. 'my mother has collected her goats') Id. 7; Bul. 3, 1: XV cadda (dede in margin) ebe Tuh. 11a. 11: Osm. XIV ff. ebe; in XIV and XV ebe seems to mean 'grandmother' TTS I 252; II 357, by XVIII it meant 'midwife' (see Çağ.); it is also noted in one or two phr. including ebem gömeçi II 358; IV 274.

PU 2 apa: 'bear' (animal); 'bear' is normally 1 aḍığ, but there is a good deal of folklore, mixed up with an ancestor-cult, about bears in Siberia, and this word is prob. merely 1 apa: used metaph.; survives in NE Kaç., Koib., Sag. R I 620 and Khak. aba, same meaning. Kıp. XI (PU) apa: 'with back vowels' al-dubb 'bear': . . . apa: başı: al-tannūm 'Cannabis sativa'; it is a plant which grows like al-qiṭṭā 'Cucumis sativus' and has a thorny stem, it is eaten in the mountains I 86 (this is the normal meaning of al-tannūm but the description hardly agrees with it).

ava: an exclamation; as such Hap. leg.(?), but of a class common in Turkish. Xak. XI ava: ḥarf ta'allum 'exclamation of pain, equivalent to Ar. wāwayli'; a man who is in pain says ava: ava: Kaş. I 89.

oba:, etc. Preliminary note. There are three early words of this general form; the only one certainly Turkish is uva:; oba: 'clan' is Oğuz and may well be a l.-w., though not demonstrably so; PU opo: 'white cosmetic' is prob. a Chinese l.-w. Ova 'plain' is peculiar to Osm. and seems to be quite a modern word. Oba: 'heap of stones, grave mound' and the like, noted from Kom. XIV CCI onwards is a l.-w. fr. Mong. obo (Kow. 370, Haltod 78).

oba: name of a small social unit, possibly 'clan', but prob. even smaller, 'extended family' and the like; from this the word came to mean 'the dwelling place of such a unit; small encampment or large tent', and thence more generally 'tent, hut', and the like; survives in these later senses in Osm., including Rep. Turkish and Anat. (SDD 1081, 1411), and Tkm. (o:ba) only(?). Oğuz XI oba: al qabila 'clan' (?, an imprecise word) *Kaş. somewhere; and metaph. the place where they stop' San. 58r. 22: Osm. XIV ff. oba c.i.a.p., in XIV to XVI it seems to mean 'a small encampment', in a XIV text an ev qawmı 'the family living in one tent' is more important than one man, and an oba qawmı 'the families living in a small encampment' are more important than an ev qawmı; from XVI onwards it seems to mean 'a tent or hut', particularly a large one occupied by more than one family TTS I 533; II 713; III 530; IV 596.

D uva: Dev. PU evük- hitherto transcribed bük-; occurs only in Türkü VIII ff. Yen. and O. Kır, IX ff. where it is very common. With one dubious exception the only known form is evükmedim in a standard formula in funerary inscriptions. It takes the Dat. and is used in contrast to adrıl- 'to be separated from', e.g. (xanımka:) élimke: evükmedim kuyda: kunçuyımka: adrıltım Mal. 8, 1–2, which must mean something like 'I could not stay with my xan and realms; I have been separated from my wife in the women's quarters'. The object of adrıl- is nearly always a person, wife, son, etc., that of evük- more often an institution, ruler, realm, and the like. Radloff (R IV 1876) is prob. right in suggesting that it should be transcribed evük-; if so it can be taken as a Den. V. in -ük- (Intrans.) from e:v meaning 'to reside, stay'.

D uvul- Pass. f. of uv-; 'to be crushed, broken into small pieces'; s.i.a.m.l.g., usually as uval-/uwal-/ufal-, but Osm., as well as ufal-, has oğul- (pronounced ovul-, ovul-) 'to be rubbed, kneaded', which seems to be a survival of this word. The rare Türkü word hitherto transcribed opul- might be a Pass. f. of o:p-, but the meaning 'to be swallowed' is awkward, and it is perhaps likelier that it should be transcribed uful- and taken as a Sec. f. of this word. Türkü VIII (gap) binip oplayu: tegip sança: ıdıp at ufulu:(?) ünti: yana: ağıtıp (gap) 'he mounted . . . and attacked, panting with fury and plying his lance; his horse was crushed(?); he got up, making it stand up again' Ix. 19; (gap) ülügi: ança: ermiş erinç yağı:ka: yalŋu:s oplayu: tegip ufulu: kirip özi: kişğa: kergek bulti: 'his fate was, it seems, this; panting with fury and attacking the enemy all alone, entering (the battle) and being crushed, he met his end at an early age' Ix. 23: Xak. XI uvuldı: ne:ŋ 'the thing was crushed' (futta) *Kaş. PU apam/apaŋ 'if', used with the Conditional mood. The earlier form is fairly common in Uyğ., the later is not traceable after XIV. In the early period the -sar form was not always strictly Conditional, and this word perhaps became superfluous and fell into disuse when its usage became more restricted; the word was sometimes used by itself and sometimes followed by birök. Von Le Coq in Turan, 1918, p. 457 stated, without giving a reference, that F. W. K. iç 'the interior, or inside (of something)'; originally, and often still, in a concrete sense. The word early acquired a number of specific connotations, esp. in its derivatives :- (1) 'the interior of the human body' (cf. içe:gü:); (2) 'inner', as opposed to outer, clothing (cf. içton); (3) 'the interior of a household, esp. a royal household' (cf. içre:ki:); (4) secret, or mental processes, as opposed to physical. With the 3rd Pers. Suffix in the Dat., Abl., and Loc. it serves as a Postposition meaning 'into, from within, within'. Dis. ACA eçe: etc. Preliminary note. There are in some modern languages, esp. NE and SW XX Anat., a good many words of the form ACA which are terms of relationship or respect. Some are certainly Mong. loan-words, e.g. ece 'master' and various forms of eçige 'father', and others may be. The only certain old Turkish words of this form are eçe:, éçi:, and eçü:.

eçe: both this word and eke:, q.v., seem to have meanings straddling the generations (see éçi:), this word meaning both 'one's mother's younger sister' and 'one's own elder sister' and eke: both 'one's father's younger sister' and 'one's own elder sister'; this would explain why this word survives in residual form in NW and SW attached to tay (tağa:y, q.v.) to give the meaning 'maternal aunt' (Osm. teyze). As an independent word survives only(?) in SW XX Anat. ace, ece, ede, ici SDD 67, 503–5, 780 which all mean, inter alia, 'elder sister'. Xak. XI eçe: syn. w. eke:, that is al-uxtu'l-kubrā 'elder sister'; the -ç- was changed from -k- as in Ar. carm from garm and cunbad from gunbad Kaş. I 86 (this phonology is absurd; both words with initial g- (so marked in the text) are Pe. l.-w. and the sound change is normal in such cases): Çağ. eçe('with -ç-') zan-i musinna'anelderly woman' San. 32v. 4.

1 éçi: as pointed out in K. Grønbech, 'The Turkish System of Kinship', in Studia Orientalia . . . Johanni Pedersen dicata, Munksgaard, 1953, this word means 'a close male relative younger than one's father and older than oneself', i.e. both '(junior) paternal uncle and 'elder brother'. It soon lost its first meaning, and in the medieval period was displaced almost everywhere by the synonymous Mong. l.-w. ağa (aka); it survives, however, in SW XX Anat. in forms like those quoted under eçe:. Türkü VIII eçi:m xağan olurtı: 'my (junior) paternal uncle ascended the throne' I E 16, II E 14, o.o. in this sense; ini:li: eçi:li: kikşü:rtüki:n üçü:n 'because (the Chinese) aroused mutual enmity between younger brothers (and nephews) and elder brothers (and uncles)' I E 6, II E 6; a.o.o. of eçi: and ini: in apposition: VIII ff. Yen. inim eçimiz Mal. 29, 4; üç eçime: 32, 1 and 13: Man. inili éçili Chuas. I 31; ini éçi M III 6, 6 (iii); in/l/ éçilerin do. 22, 10 (ii): Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. éçi specifically 'elder brother' is common in PP; a.o. U III 82, 13 (in U II 19, 18; 20, 21 éçi is a misreading of evçi): Civ. ini éçi TT I 137; éçi is common in USp., prob. only 'elder brother': O. Kır. IX ff. eçi:/éçi: is fairly common, and might have either meaning Mal. 6, 2 etc.: Xak. XI éçi: al-axu'l-akbar sinna(n) 'elder brother' Kaş. I 87; III 7 (yurç): KB ata bardi éş tuş éçi yā ini 'your father has gone and your comrades and elder and younger brothers' 3784 (prob. spurious): XIII(?) Tef. éçi synonymous with Ar. 'amm 'paternal uncle' 86: Kıp. XIV éçi: al-'amm Id. 9; al-'amm eççi: Bul. 9, 3 (cim in both).

VU 2 eçi: Hap. leg.; prob. a Sec. f. of eçü:. Barsğa:n XI eçi: al-şahla 'an old man (or woman)' Kaş. I 87.

eçü: seems to mean rather vaguely 'ancestor'; very rare; perhaps survives in SW XX Anat. acu 'grandfather' (also 'elder brother') SDD 69. Türkü VIII eçü:m apa:m, etc. see 1 apa:: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. eçesi (sic) do.: Xak. XI KB (in an invocation of God) ay mengü eçü 'oh everlasting ancestor' 10.

uça: (?uca:) an anatomical term used both for men and animals, 'the loins, haunches, rump', and the like; s.i.m.m.l.g., with voiced consonant in some NE languages and SW Osm., perhaps the original pronunciation. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. tört yanıda uçada 'on the fourth day of the month (the soul is) in the loins' TT VII 20, 6–7: XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict. 'the back' uça R I 1734; Ligeti 273: Xak. XI uça: al-zahr 'the back' *Kaş. D 2 açığ, although the semantic connection is tenuous, presumably a Dev. N. fr. 1 aç- cf. açın-; 'a gift' and more specifically 'a gift from a ruler'; Kaş.'s second meaning is not noted elsewhere. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Chr. yüklerin açtılar ertütin açuğın ötündiler (the Magi) 'opened their packages and presented their gifts (Hend.)' U I 6, 12–13 (mistranscribed and mistranslated): Civ. (if the base of his ear twitches) beglerdin açığ ayağ alır 'he will receive gifts and honours from the beg's' TT VII 34, 10–11: Xak. XI açığ the word for 'a gift from the Sultan' (cā'izatu'l-sulṭān); hence xa:n maŋa: açığ bé:rdi: acāzani'l-malik 'the king gave me a gift': açığ al-tana''um 'contentment, well-being', hence ö:zü:ŋni: açığlığ tut 'make yourself comfortable (na''im) with good food' Kaş. I 63: KB (the king speaks) meniŋdin açığ bolsu séndin tapuğ 'let there be gifts from me and service from you' 596; él(l)iğme açığ birle açtı kapuğ 'and the king opened the door with a gift' 616; o.o. 1035, 2399, 2495, 5218.

D açuk N./A.S. (Pass.) fr. 1 aç-; lit. 'open' with metaph. extensions, esp. (1) 'clear' (sky); (2) 'frank, friendly' (disposition); (3) 'obvious, manifest'; (4) in recent Osm. 'an open financial account, deficiency, bankruptcy'. S.i.a.m.l.g. usually as açık and the like. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. açuk aḍırtlığ 'clearly distinguishable' TT VI 383 (v.l.); açuk (gap) U III 35, 16: Xak. XI açuk 'anything open' (maftūḥ); hence açuk kapuğ 'an open door'; açuk kö:k 'a cloudless (muṣḥiya) sky'; and anything obvious (bayyin) is called açuk ı:ş Kaş. I 64: KB açuk tutti yüz 'he maintained a friendly attitude' 500; açuk 'friendly' 691, 2122; XIII(?) Tef. açuk 'obvious, clear' 65: XIV Muh. al-maftūḥ açuk (cim) Mel. 56, 4; 82, 16; Rif. 154, 188: Çağ. XV ff. açuk ('with -ç-') kuṣāda 'open' San. 32v. 2 (quotn.): Xwar. XIV açuk 'open, clear' Qutb 3; Nahc. 2, 16; 23, 6 etc.: Kıp. XIV açuk (cim) al-maftūḥ İd. 8: XV maftūḥ açık Tuh. 48b. 7: Osm. XIV ff. açuğ/açuk 'open, clear', fr. XVI onwards açık TTS II 3, 5; III 2.

oçok/oçak (?ocok) originally 'hearth, fireplace', and the like; hence esp. in SC, SW 'a building of which the hearth is the centre', and hence 'a group of persons assembling in such a building', that is 'family, guild, regiment of Janissaries', etc. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in some NE and NC languages oçok and the like; in the SW (Oğuz) languages ocak. The evidence points to ocok as the original form. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (in a list of parts of the house) oçok taş 'hearthstone' TT VI 86: Xak. XI oçak al-kānūn 'fireplace' Kaş. I 64; köçürme: oçok (sic) 'a fireplace which is transported from place to place' I 490, 26: XIV Muh. al-micmara o:ca:ğ (cim) Mel. 68, 15; Rif. 169: Çağ. XV ff. ocağ/ocak (1) ātaşdān-i matbax 'a kitchen fireplace' on which they put cooking-pots; hence metaph. dūdmān wa xānadān-i buzurg a large family or clan'; (2) 'an iron ring' (ṭawq) which they put on a prisoner or criminal San. 65r. 19 (quotn.; there is no other trace of the last meaning): Kom. XIV 'fireplace' oçak CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIII al-kānūn o:ca:k (misspelt woca:k) Hou. 6, 15: XV kānūn ocak Tuh. 31a. 5; Kav. 64, 6: Osm. XV ff. ocak is recorded for 'fireplace' fr. XV and with metaph. meaning fr. XVII TTS I 534; III 530; IV 596.

VU ?D uçuk assuming, as seems reasonable, that it is not oçok, there is one early occurrence of this word, which might, in the context be taken as a Dev. N. fr. uç-. There is one certain survival of such a word, Kom. XIV uçux 'chaff' CCG; Gr., no doubt so called because it flies about. This meaning survives in NW Kaz., R I 1327. It is difficult, if not impossible, to connect uç- with Çağ. XV ff. uçuğ/uçuk ('with -ç-') (1) tabxāl 'fever spots';

(2) metaph., xāl 'a mole (or stye?) which grows in the eye' San. 65v. 18, or Osm. XIV ff. uçuk 'epilepsy' TTS I 712; II 917; III 696; IV 773 (and San. 65v. 20). The early passage might possibly (other alternatives have been suggested) be translated as follows: Türkü VIII (we lived in the Çoğay kuzı: and Kara: kum, eating gazelles and hares; the people's bellies were full) yağımız tegre: uçuk teg erti: 'our enemies were all round us like a flock of birds' T 8.

VU açkı: 'elder brother, (junior) paternal uncle'; cf. éçi:. The Xak. entry follows oçak and might imply a basic form açık, but the Kıp. forms point to açkı:. N.o.a.b. Xak. the Xākānī (Turks), addressing an elder brother (al-axi'l-akbar) say açkım; the qāf is inserted only with the 1st Pers. Poss. Suff.; it is not permissible to say açkıŋ Kaş. I 64: Kıp. XIII al-'amm 'paternal uncle' açkı: (sic; also ata: karındaşı:) Id. 31, 19: XIV açğı: (cim, unvocalized) al-şağir yuxāṭibu'l-kabir 'a junior thus addresses a senior' Id. 9.

D uçğuk Hap. leg.?, possibly the earlier form of some medieval words mentioned under uçuk; presumably Dev. N. fr. uç-. Xak. XI uçğuk al-zukām 'catarrh, cold in the head' Kaş. I 98.

C içkur compound of iç 'inner' and 1 kur 'belt'. Survives in some NE, SE, NC, and SW languages as içkır, uçkur, and the like. Xak. XI Kaş. I 35 (iç): XIV Muh. al-kamarrān 'belt' uçkur Mel. 67, 8; Xwar. XIII 'Ali içkur 'belt' 47: Kom. XIV 'belt' içkır CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIV içkur al-kamarrān 'a Pe. word' Id. 9: Osm. XVIII uçğur in Rūmī, band-i izār wa band-i şalwār 'the belt of the trousers or drawers' San. 65r. 29.

içük 'fur-skin', hence later 'fur-coat'. Recorded in Vam. 231 (?XIX. Uzb.) as içik; survives in NC Kzx. işik. Xak. XI içük 'any fur-skin (farw) taken from a sable, sqirrel, and the like' Kaş. I 69: Kom. XIV 'a fur overcoat' içik CCG; Gr.

F üjek 'written character, letter, syllable'. The word has a Sogdian look and may have reached Turkish through that language, but seems ultimately to go back to Chinese tzŭ (Giles 12,324; Old Chinese (Pulleyblank) dzyiy), same meaning; the spelling varies greatly, the final sound is always kāf or the equivalent, but in Uyğ. the initial is more often u- than ü-. Survives with much the same meanings in NE Tel. üzük R I 1895; Tuv. üjük Pal. 428; NW Kaz. icik TT V 12, note A 5; SW XX Anat. üzük SDD 1442. Uyğ. VIII ff. D açın- Preliminary note. In the early period the Refl. f.'s of 1 aç- and açı:- would have been homophonous, and it is difficult to decide which form the early occurrences represent, but on balance they all seem to represent the former. If so the earliest occurrence of the latter is in a side-note (prob. in a SW hand) to Kıp. XV ta'allama 'to feel pain' awurun-(for ağrın-) Tuh. 9b. 4 with acın- in the margin. On the other hand, at the present day the only survival of the Refl. f. of 1 aç- seems to be NE Sag., Şor adın- (sic) 'to open the mouth'; acın- (with a wide range of phonetic variations) 'to feel pain, grief, anger, or compassion; to grudge; to be pitied', etc., which s.i.a.m.l.g., is clearly the Refl. f. of açı:-.

D açın- Refl. f. of 1 aç-; the meaning in some of the passages below is linked with those of 2 açığ, 2 açığlığ and, partly, açıl-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. evin barkın açınığlı [kü]digli kişi 'people who look after and tend the houses and property' (of kings, beg's and notables) Wind. 32–3: Bud. (the ox-herd took him to his house and) açındı 'tended him, or made him comfortable'; (he entrusted him to those in the house, saying) artuk edgü açınıglar 'tend him very well'; bir ay artuk açındı 'he tended him for more than a month' PP 67, 6–68, 2; isig özüŋde artukrak açınu köyü közedü tutduŋ 'you have kept him tending and watching over him more carefully than your own life' U IV 36, 81–3; ökünürmen bilinürmen açınurmen yadınurmen 'I repent, admit, disclose, and publish' (all my misdeeds) Suv. 137, 23: Civ. [gap] suvın açınmış kerek 'you must treat . . . with water' H II 25, 65: Xak. XI beg erin açındı: al-amir akrama wa na''ama cundahu 'the beg showed regard and granted favours to his army (etc.); and one says er atın açındı: aḥsana'l-racul li-farasihi qadim wa 'alaf 'the man gave his horse barley and fodder'; and one says er ko:yın açındı: 'the man pretended to open (yaftaḥ) his bosom'; also used of a sick man or a child in the cradle when he throws off his bed-clothes (kaşafa 'an diṯārihi) Kaş. I 199 (açınu:r, açınma:k): KB açın- occurs (1) without an Object, e.g. (may these my good qualities be useful to the king) açınsun 'may he show favour' (and may my pains disappear) 468; (2) governing the Acc., e.g. tapuğsuz ağırlap açındım séni 'although you were undutiful I honoured you and showed favour to you' 646.

?E içan- this word is read four times in TT I, but nowhere else, and translated 'to avoid, take care'. The text is, however, very badly written, and it may well be a misreading of ınan- 'to trust, rely on'; if not, it is perhaps an earlier form of işen-, same meaning. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (there is a deceitful official in the realm; he impedes your efforts) örki kişilerke içanğıl (?ınanğıl) edremlig kişilerig ayağıl 'rely on(?) highly placed people, and honour virtuous people' TT I 65; in 196–7 and 214–15 the word is in coordination with saklan- 'to protect oneself' instead of aya:-; a.o. 207.

at- basically 'to throw, to shoot', with a very wide range of extended and metaph. meanings. (Red. for examples lists 22). There is a wide variation in the cases of the direct and indirect object; the original usage seems to have been to put the object thrown in the Acc., the target (if mentioned) in the Dat., and the weapon (if mentioned) in the Abl.; another usage is to put the target in the Acc., and the weapon in the Instr., and another to mention only the weapon in the Acc. In some phr., e.g. taŋ at- 'of the dawn, to break' there is no stated Object; and in some languages at- has almost become an Aux. é:t- (é:d-) has a long semantic history; it originally meant 'to organize, put in order' (a meaning surviving only(?) in NE Tuv. Pal. 576), then 'to ornament, adorn' (cf. étlg), then 'to create' (as part of an organized plan), then by a gradual process of attenuation simply 'to make', and finally 'to do'. This attenuation occurred chiefly in the Western languages; the Eastern languages, perhaps for the colourful reason given by Kaş., rather avoided the word and continued to use kıl- for 'to make, do.' S.i.a.m.l.g., nearly always for 'to make, do', but in most languages used chiefly to form compound verbs out of foreign, esp. Ar. nouns. The consonant of this verb, unlike that of at-, is -d- before vowels in the SW (Oğuz) languages and this no doubt represents the earliest form. The intervocalic -d- in the NE languages is not significant as it occurs universally. Türkü VIII the word is common (over a dozen occurrences) usually in the phr. bodun ét- 'to organize a people (group of clans or tribes) into a realm (é:l)', often with an implication of conquering them first; e.g. Suğdak bodun éteyi:n téyin 'saying "I will organize the Sogdian people" ' (I crossed the Pearl River) I E 39; another phr.

is çerig ét- 'to marshal troops in battle order'; e.g. süŋüş bolsar çerig éter erti: 'when there was going to be a battle, he used to marshal the troops' Ix. 9; the later meaning perhaps occurs in bark étgü:çi: beḍiz yaratıgma bitig taş étgü:çi 'ornamenting the grave goods, having the painted decoration carried out, and ornamenting the memorial stone' I N 13; also occurs in the Hend. ét- yarat-; e.g. Az boḍun étip yaratıp 'organizing the Az people' I E 19; the proper name or title Él étmiş 'having organized a realm' first occurs in Ongin 4: VIII ff. éli:g étmi:ş men IrkB. 48; Man. biz aḍruk aḍruk étip yaratıp nomka kigürsüg törö bar erti 'there was a rule that we should organize (Hend.) various things and introduce them into the doctrine' Chuas. 228–9 (exact meaning obscure): Uyğ. VIII çerig étdi *Şu. VU üd- Hap. leg.; previous editors have read öd-, taking the word as connected with 2 öt, and translated it 'to give advice', but this is etymologically impossible; it seems in fact to be the basic verb of üdig 'sexual passion', q.v.; but the text may be corrupt. Cf. üdlen-. Türkü VIII ff. kara: üpgü:k yıl yaru:mazkan tedi: üdmeŋ körmeŋ ürkittiŋ 'the black hoopoe, before the year became bright, said, "Do not get excited (?), do not look, you frightened me" ' IrkB 21 (the double -tt- is unusual in Runic script, and the word may be an error for ürkitmeŋ).

1 öt- the basic connotation is movement through or over; it is both Trans. and Intrans., in the latter case almost always with 'time' of some sort as the Subject. If Trans. it can govern several cases, with different shades of meaning; with the Acc. it usually means 'to cross', e.g. a river, the movement being over rather than through; with the Dat. it means 'to penetrate into (something)'; and with the Abl. (and/or Loc.) 'to pass right through (something)' and come out the other side. There are various metaph. meanings, e.g. 'to pass over, forgive (sins, etc., Abl.)'; 'to give up, renounce (something)'; and, if Intrans., (of the bowels) 'to be purged'; (of goods) 'to move freely, be easily marketed'. E i:ḍu: a word read in Kaş. I 110, 10, and translated 'trouble, distress' by Brockelmann with a query and by Atalay without one. It occurs in a verse, Kaş.'s translation of which is too free to help, spoken by a man in a lovers' quarrel, aydı: senıŋ u:ḍu:, emgek telim i:du: (or i:dü), yumşar katığ u:ḍu:, köŋlüm saŋa: yügrük. The first u:ḍu: is the Gerund of uḍ- and the second is 1 uḍu: 'sand-dune'. The word after telim might be the Gerund of uḍ- used in a slightly different meaning as a Postposition meaning 'after', or it might be the Gerund of ı:d- although that verb has no obviously appropriate meaning. In any event it cannot be a noun. It must mean something like 'He said, ["I went] following you, and after(?) many sufferings, the hard sand-bank softened, and my heart hastened to you".'

1 iḍi: properly 'master, owner', but in Moslem texts often 'the Lord' (God). The phonetic history of this word is exceptionally complicated. The original form must have been iḍı:, but the syn. word ige/iye/i-e is so old that its independent existence cannot be completely excluded. It seems, however, more probable that this is merely a Sec. f. with an unusual vowel change in the final. The position is complicated by the existence of a syn. Mong. word ece(n) which is as old as the XIII SH (Haenisch 42), and looks like a Turkish loanword. İdi: could have become ici in Mong., but ige/iye could hardly have become ece, so if the two words are identical the word must have been borrowed before the vocalic change took place and later altered to conform with it. It survives in a wide range of Sec. f.s, which are not always easy to identify:—NE e: R I 657; i: 1407; ie 1411; Khak. e: Bas. 334; Tuv. e: Pal. 591: SE Tar. ege R I 694; Türki iga Shaw; ége BŞ; ige Jarring: NC Kır. e:, ege Kzx. iye MM, Shmit.: SC Uzb. ega: NW Kaz. iye R I 1434, 1578; Kk., Nogay iye; Kum. es: SW Az. yiye; Osm. is; Tkm. eye; XX Anat. eye, iye, ez. I* 65: KB ıduk kut 'the blessed favour of heaven' (not as a title) is fairly common, 343, 354, 1335, etc.; ıḍuk also occurs in other contexts, e.g. of beğlik 1960: XIV Muh.(?) al-qaḍā wa'l-qadr 'destiny, fate' ıyı:k Rif. 189.

?D ota:ğ (?oda:ğ) originally 'a small temporary building'. S.i.a.m.l.g., the idea of temporariness prevailing in NE and SE, and smallness elsewhere. Morphologically a Dev. N. in -ğ, possibly fr. 1 ota:- with the connotation of a place to light a fire in (see Muh. below). The Osm. form oda suggests a connection with 1 ota:- and so 1 o:t (o:d). See Doerfer II 489. Xak. XI ota:ğka: öpkele:p süke: sö:zle:me:dük (sic, ?read sö:zle:me:dı:) ğaḍiba 'alā'l-aqrānihi fi'l-xayma fa-mā takallama ba'dahu ma'a'l-cund 'he got angry with his neighbours in the tent and thereafter did not talk to the army' *Kaş. D uḍık N./A.S. fr. uḍı:- 'sleepy, asleep'. N.o.a.b.; in the medieval period displaced by uyku (a contraction of uḍı:ğu: or the like) which occurs in Xwar., Çağ., Kom., Kıp., and Osm. fr. XIII onwards and s.i.a.m.l.g. Not to be confused with oḍuğ which has exactly the opposite meaning. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. A katığlanaŋ kim ürke uḍukun saklanmakan ereŋler bu bir oḍguruğlı dınkutı teŋrike 'strive to keep yourselves from long sleep for this one God of the majesty of the D aṭğa:k Hap. leg.; Dev. N. fr. aṭ- but with no close semantic connection; as according to Brockelmann, para. 52a., this suffix is particularly used for plant names, the second may be the original meaning and the others metaph. extensions. Xak. XI aṭğa:k al-ṣufār wa'l-qawlanc 'bile, colic'; and a plant (nabt) with yellow flowers is called aṭğa:k; used metaph. for any face which is yellow with grief (iṣfarra mina'l-ḥuzn) Kaş. I 118.

D atka:ğ Dev. N. fr. atka:-; used to translate the Bud. (and later Man.) technical term vikalpa 'attachment (to this world)'; a l.-w. with the same meaning in Mong. (Kow. 62, and, with altered meanings, Haltod 16). Survives only(?) in NE Tel. R I 464; Tuv. Pal. 71 atkak 'the barb of a fish-book; the gills of a fish'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (you have turned mankind away from evil deeds and) yafşınmış ilinmiş atkağtin 'from the attachments which fasten and tie them (to this world)' TT III 27–8.

VU utğun Hap. leg. Xak. XI utğun 'a broad strap on the left side of the saddle to which the buckle (ḥalqa) of the girth is fastened and secured with its tongue' Kaş. I 107.

aḍğır 'stallion'. A very early (First Period) l.-w. in Mong. as acirğa. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually as ayğır or the like, see Shcherbak, p. 87. Acırğa is listed in San. 32v. 5 specifically as a Mong. word meaning nar 'male' that is faḥl 'stallion'; the latter word was corrupted to fucl 'horse-radish' in some intermediate authority, and the word with that meaning appears in some later authorities ŞS. 5; R I 510; Sami 22, etc. See Doerfer II 648. Türkü VIII ak aḍğırığ 'a white stallion' I E (35), 36: VIII ff. öğüri:ŋe: kutlu:ğ aḍğır men 'I am a stallion fortunate in his stud' IrkB 56: Uyğ. VIII ff. D oğğuratı: Adverb in -tı:; as this Suff. is attached only to N./A.s, the word is presumably der. fr. oğğurak, q.v.; the connotation is that the intellect is aroused, so that the conscious action of the mind etc. is stimulated; the best translation is therefore 'rousingly, vividly'. Hitherto transcribed utğuratı and translated 'completely', but neither form nor meaning are etymologically justified. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (damaged passage) oğğuratı belgü[lüğ] körtgürü bérdi 'he demonstrated . . . so that it became vividly manifest' M III 26, 11 (i): Bud. D oğğurak N./A.S. fr. oğğur-, sometimes used as an Adv., cf. oğğuratı, q.v.; the two words appear as alternative readings in the MSS. of TT VI. Basically the meaning must be 'rousing' or the like; applied both to human actions (preaching, etc.) and human sensations (perception, feeling, etc.), in the latter case perhaps best translated 'vividly, convincingly', or the like. Pec. to Uyğ. Hitherto transcribed utğurak, or more recently otğurak, and translated 'completely', but these seem to be errors. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (thus long and continuously you have wrought great benefits; by virtue of your good deeds) oğğurak burxan [kutın bultuŋuz?] 'you have convincingly [attained the blessed status of?] Prophet' TT III 105: Bud. D 2 ötüg 'request, memorial to a superior', etc.; cf. ötün-. N.o.a.b., but a l.-w. in Pe. as ötūk, see Doerfer II 574. Etymologically obscure. Doerfer points out that the V. fr. which it is derived is a l.-w. in Mong. as öči- (for öti-*), 'to report, propose', etc. w. Dev. N.s öčig, öčil (Haenisch 120, Kow. 541, etc.). It is possible that there was a Turkish V. ötl:- or ötü:-, now lost, fr. which this word and ötün- were derived. Alternatively it might be taken as a Dev. D 2 otluğ P.N./A. fr. 2 ot. S.i.m.m.l.g.; in SW Osm. otlu; Tkm. otli; but note that in Osm. 'poisonous', a meaning belonging to this word is also pronounced odlu owing to some confusion with 1 otluğ. Xak. XI otluğ ta:ğ cabal mu'şib 'a mountain covered with vegetation' Kaş. I 98.

D otluk A.N. (Conc. N.) fr. 2 ot. S.i.m.m.l.g.; in NC 'manger', elsewhere usually 'pasture'. In some languages there is a homophonous A.N. fr. 1 o:t meaning 'a strike-a-light' and the like. The text of the MS. of Kaş. is as shown below; the printed text has atluk and oḏluk in error; but the Arğu form is peculiar and some confusion with uḏluk may have occurred. Xak. XI otluk al-āri fi luğatihim 'manger' in one of their dialects *Kaş. D eḍle:- Den. V. fr. e:ḍ; in the early period 'to turn (something Acc.) into something useful', hence, e.g. 'to cultivate (a garden, etc.)', and also 'to deem (something Acc.) to be useful', hence 'to esteem (someone)'. Later it came to mean simply 'to make, create', and finally, like é:t-, it came to be little more than an Aux. V., used to form compound V.s w. N.s, usually foreign. In this sense it seems to have been regarded as more graceful than é:t-. Survives as eyle- in SE Türki, Shaw 37, BŞ. 807, Jarring 40 (also in its earlier sense); NW Kaz.; SW Osm., Tkm. Uyğ. viii ff. Civ. (in a text about a vineyard, 'I will give a rent of 60 measures of wine') toŋuz yıl eḍlemişke 'for cultivating it during the Swine Year' USp. 6, 5; eḍlegüci bir erklük kişi 'a responsible person to cultivate (the vineyard)' do. 21, 5; bağnı eḍlep 'cultivating the vineyards' do. 22, 41; bağlarımızını eylep (sic) do. 22, 47–8 (a xiv text): Xak. xi ol eḍle:dі: ne:ŋnі: ṣana'a'l-ṣay' 'araḍa(n) 'he made use of the thing' *Kaş. (D) otruğ 'island'; too old to be a Dev. N. fr 2 otur- 'to sit', as has been suggested, since this form did not evolve fr. olur- until the medieval period; possibly a Den. V. fr. 1 otur-, with the connotation of something cut off from the mainland. Survives in various forms in one or two NE languages and NW Kaz. utraw. A Dim. f.(?) otraç was current in Kom. and Kıp. (Id., Bul., Tuh.), and survives in NW Kar. T., Kow. 442. Most SC, NW, and SW languages use some form of atağ/adağ first noted in Muh. and also noted in Kom. and Kıp. (Id., Bul., Tuh.), which it is difficult to connect morphologically with this word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. otruğ 'island' PP 33, 7; 36, 6; TT V 26, 91, and 94; Suv 211, 19 and 22 (spelt oturuğ); Hüen-ts. 1915; Kuan. 20–1 (ergü): Xak. XI otruğ al-cazira 'island' *Kaş. Dis. V. ADR-

D aḏır- Caus. f. of 1 *aḏ-; basically 'to separate (two things Acc., or something Acc., from something else Abl.)'; hence 'to distinguish (between things Acc.)' and even 'to single out, prefer (something)'; cf. üḏür-, q.v. Became a l.-w. in Mong. as ajira- 'to part from (people), return home' (Haenisch 4) with further developments of meaning (Kow. 124, Haltod 26). S.i.a.m.l.g., usually as ayır-, but NE Khak. azır-; Tuv. adır-; in NC Kır., Kzx. acıra- 'to part from (people)', reborrowed fr. Mong. also occurs. In some texts it is difficult to distinguish between the Perf., etc. of aḏır- and aḏırt-, q.v. Türkü VIII ff. Yen. altı: yaşımta: kaŋ aḏırdım bilinmedim üç éçime: ayıta: aḏırdım (the last word is prob. an error for aḏrıldım) 'at the age of six I was parted from my father and did not get to know him; I said farewell(?) and was parted from my three elder brothers' Mal. 32, 16; Man. D éttür- Caus. f. of é:t-; with a range of meanings similar to those of é:t-. S.i.a.m.l.g. In Kaş. included in a section for verbs with short initial vowels, which perhaps indicates that the initial alif maksūr yā was intended to represent é-. Cf. étıt-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. étdürdimiz 'if we have had constructed'; v.l. for étdimiz in TT IV 6, 46 (ét-): Xak. XI ol meniŋ ı:şı:m é:ttürdi: 'he gave orders for putting my affair in order' (bi-iṣlāḥ amrī); and one says ol etük é:ttürdi: 'he gave orders for the repair (bi-iṣlāḥ) of his boot' *Kaş. S otar- See oṭğar-.

VU 1 otur- Hap. leg., but see otrul-, otruş-. Certainly with back vowels and, if oṭruğ, q.v., is etymologically connected, with o-. Xak. XI ol saç oturdı: qaṣṣa'l-ṣa'r wa'l--ṯawb wa naḥwahu 'he cut hair', (cut out) clothes and the like Kaş. I 176 (oturur, oturma:k, sic in MS.).

utur- (ʔutır-) 'to meet'; survives only in the Ger. utru:, q.v.; the basis of utrun-, utruş-. Became an early l.-w. in Mong. as uçira- 'to meet' (Haenisch 157) a form presupposing a Turkish utır-. This Mong. verb was subsequently reborrowed as uçra- San. 64v. 11 and s.i.m.m.l.g. as uçra-, uçura-.

üḍür- 'to choose (one of several Acc.); to part, separate, scatter (things, etc. Acc.); to separate (something Acc., fr. something Abl.)', with or without öŋi, see v. G. ATG para. 279. Practically syn. w. aḍır- (Kaş. uses the same range of words to translate both) and perhaps an 'attenuated' form of it. Survives only(?) in NE Khak. üzür-, same meaning, which fixes the first vowel as ü-, not ö- as normally used to transcribe this verb and its der. f.s. Cf. also seç-. Uyğ. VIII ff. D adaş/addaş N. of Assn. fr. 1 a:t (a:d). Abdülkadir İnan in Türk Dili, Belleten 3rd Series, No 1, pp. 41 ff. argued that the original meaning was 'friend, comrade', and that 'namesake' was a later, secondary meaning. This is etymologically impossible, but the meaning 'comrade' is so prevalent in the early period as to suggest that in this context 1 a:t meant 'clan (rather than personal) name', so that addaş meant primarily 'fellow clansman'; cf. kadaş. S.i.a.m.l.g. See Doerfer II 437. Türkü VIII ff. Man. yavlak éş tuş adaş kadaş 'evil comrades (Hend.) and kinsmen (Hend.)' Chuas. 197–8: Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. F 2 ak 'hateful'. Hap. leg.; Pelliot considered this to be an idiomatic use of 1 a:k, pointing out that Chinese pai 'white' (Giles 8,556) has a similar meaning in some contexts; but it seems more reasonable to suppose that it is a l.-w. fr. Chinese wu (Ancient Chinese âk*) 'to hate, hateful' (Giles 12,779). Cf. akla:-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. ayığ kılınçlığ ak oğlın 'his wicked hateful son' PP 62, 5.

1 ok 'arrow'. Owing to the use of arrows for various ritual and ceremonial purposes it came to be used at a very early date in the sense of 'sub-tribe' (and as such forms part of such tribal names as On ok) and also of 'a lot' in casting lots. O:k (so spelt) 'a share of an inheritance', noted in Kaş. is, no doubt, another special sense of this word. Later it came, like i:k, to mean 'a long piece of wood', usually round in section, like an axle, rolling-pin, and the like, and so tended to be confused with u:ğ. S.i.a.m.l. See Doerfer II 605–6. Türkü VIII oku:n urtı: 'he hit with an arrow' I E 33, 36; On ok the tribal name of the Western Türkü occurs several times in I, II, T: Uyğ. VIII ff. ağı: from XI onwards consistently translated 'silk brocade' and the like; earlier contexts suggest the meaning 'treasure', and cf. ağı:çı:, ağı:lık; 'silk brocade', as the main component of early Turkish treasures, may, however, have been the original meaning. N.o.a.b. The word ağ/ağı prob. used only in such phr. as ağı kurdu 'caterpillar' noted in Osm. XVI TTS II 9 and surviving in XX Anat. SDD 74, 76, 78, 131, 1602 prob. has nothing to do with 'silk' (worm); it seems to be a Sec. f. of ağu:. Cf. barçın. Türkü VIII ağı: occurs 5 times in I S 5–7, II N 4–5, and several times elsewhere in the context of gifts given by the Chinese to the Turks; in I S 5, II N 4 it summarizes a list of such gifts 'gold, silver', and two words prob. meaning silken fabrics of some kind, so prob. means 'treasure'; in a list of booty in T 48 sarığ altu:n ürüŋ kümüş kız koḍuz eğri: teve: ağı: 'yellow gold, white silver, girls, femmes soles, humped camels' . . . it looks more like 'brocade'; in other occurrences it could be either, but 'treasure' is more probable: VIII ff. ığaç (ığa:ç) originally 'tree', in Uyğ. esp. in the phr. ı: ığaç 'shrubs and trees'; hence 'wood (generally), a piece of wood'. At least fr. XI onwards the word was also used for a large unit of linear measurement, conventionally a parasang of 4 or 5 miles, perhaps originally a time-distance measure like 'an hour's journey'; it is hard to see any semantic connection between the two meanings. The phonetic history, too, like that of ığla:-, q.v., is complicated. Before XI the form was consistently ığaç but in Xak. became yığaç with a prosthetic y-, which survives only in SC Uzb. yoğoç 'wood' (for 'tree' Persian daraxt is used) and Çuv., yavāş/yivāç (yavăş, yıvăsy) *Ash. uğut 'yeast'. Survives in NE Şor R I 1619: SE Türki Shaw 24; NC Kır.; and, with a slightly different meaning, in SW XX Anat. uğut, uhut, uğunt SDD 1415. Xak. XI uğut a word for 'yeast' (xamīr) used in making beer (al-mizz). It is various vegetable drugs (adwiya) which are collected and mixed with (specially) grown barley; the whole is then kneaded, cut into pieces the size of a nut and dried. Then wheat and barley are boiled, and the yeast is broken up, and an amount the size of a nut is sprinkled on each (lot of) wheat. The boiled wheat is then folded over and put on a clean thing (şay') to ferment for three days. Then it is picked up and put in a jar and left to ferment in it for (another) ten days. Then water is put on it and later strained. This is 'wheat wine' (ṣarābu'l-ḥinta) Kaş. I 50.

PU?S oğat- n.o.a.b.; in Syriac script, so the -ğ- is certain. In Muséon XXXVIII, p. 45 Bang equated this word with SE Tar. oxat- 'to awaken' R I 1004, but that is unlikely since the original form of the latter, oḏğat-, could hardly have lost the -ḏ- so early. It is more likely that it is a Sec. f. of okıt or ukıt-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. oğatıp kelmiş bizni teg tınlığlarka evangelyon nom ertinig nomlap kottuŋuz 'having come to make people like us recite (or 'understand') it(?) you have exhaustively taught the precious doctrine of the gospel' TT III 62–3: Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (you will certainly be reborn) oğatmatın [seş?]metin 'without invoking(?) or . . .' (the Buddhas) Suv. 24, 20.

D okıt- Caus. f. of okı:-; 'to make (someone Acc. or Dat.) recite or read (something Acc.)'. S.i.a.m.l.g. usually as okut- and meaning 'to teach'. Uyğ. VIII ff. ağtar-/axtar- apparently both Intrans. 'to turn, or roll, over' (rare) and Trans. 'to turn, or roll, (something Acc.) over', with some extended meanings like 'to translate (a book etc. Acc.) from (one language Abl.) into (another -ça/-çe)'; more or less syn. with evir-, esp. in the last meaning. The second syllable, always -tar-, excludes the possibility that this is a Caus. f. Also partly syn. with ağna:-, but unlikely to be connected with it etymologically. As regards the velar, Kaş. is prob. right in saying that ağtar- was the original form, though he habitually uses axtar-, see his remarks on sığıt; the Uyğ.

script is too ambiguous to make the Uyğ. form certain. S.i.a.m.l.g., sometimes much distorted, e.g. NE aŋdar-/aŋnar-/aŋar-; NC, NW awdar- as well as more regular forms, aktar-/axtar- in the same groups. Uyğ. VIII ff. ağıl originally 'an enclosure for livestock; cattle-pen, sheep-fold'; thence 'a settlement or group of tents' associated with such an enclosure. An early, ?First Period, l.-w. in Mong. as ayil (Haenisch 11, Kow. 3), and in Russian (fr. a NW language) as aul. Survives as ağıl in SE Türki, Shaw 11; SC Uzb. (oğıl) and SW Az. Osm., Tkm. (a:ğıl) and as awl in some NC and NW languages. The form ayıl in some NE and NC languages is a reborrowing fr. Mong. oğul 'offspring, child', originally of either sex, but with a strong implication of 'male child'; by itself it can mean 'son', but not 'daughter'; in the Plur. it might mean 'sons and daughters', but oğul kız would be the more normal expression. One of the very few Turkish words forming a Plur. in -n. Thus oğla:n was originally the Plur. and understood as such, but this fact was later forgotten and oğul came to mean 'son', and oğla:n 'boy' and later 'servant' or 'bodyguard' (the origin of German Uhlan); the timing of these changes has not yet been worked out. Both words s.i.a.m.l. with various phonetic changes. D 1 ağla:- Hap. leg., but see ağla:k, ağlat-; 'to be deserted, abandoned', and the like. Morphologically a Den. V. connected not with 1, 2 a:ğ, but with medieval 1 oğ; there are traces of a connection between ağla:k, q.v., and that word, but there is no good evidence that this verb and its der. f.s ever started with o-. Xak. XI ağlayu: *Kaş. D ığla:- Den. V. fr. ığ; 'to weep'. The phonetic history of this verb is very similar to that of ığaç, q.v.; the original form was certainly ığla:-, but a form with prosthetic y- evolved in Uyğ. and was an alternative form in Xak. S.i.a.m.l.g. usually as ığla-, yığla- or a Sec. or metathesized form of one of them, but in NE there are some forms with initial a- or rounded vowels and the SW form ağla:- (Tkm. a:ğla-) probably emerged as early as XIV. Uyğ. VIII ff. VUD ıhla:- Hap. leg.; the alif is unvocalized, but it seems reasonable to suppose that this is a Den. V. fr. ıh, an alternative form of ık, q.v., same meaning. Xak. XI (in a note on exclamations ending in 'quiescent' hā') radical (al-aṣli) hā' is not found in the pure (ṣamim) Turkish language except in the expression er ıhla:dı: axaḍa'l-racula'l-rabw 'the man was seized with hiccoughs', in which this (ıh) is an onomatopoeic for the sound which rises from the chest (and also in the word ühi: 'owl', q.v.) *Kaş. 1 ağan Hap. leg.; the para. concerned is most obscure; Thomsen translated the word 'penance' as a pure guess, suggesting a connection with ağan- in U II 87, 62; this is a simple misreading of ağna:-, which could be a Den. V. fr. this word; if so, it might mean 'prostration' or the like; Orkun's translation 'seclusion', based on a supposed connection with 1 ağla:- is morphologically improbable. Türkü VIII ff. ak at karşısı:n üç bolu:ğta: talu:la:pan ağanka: ötü:gke ıdmı:s 'a white horse choosing his adversary in the three states of existence(?) sent him to prostration(?) and prayer(?)' IrkB 19.

VU?F oğar pec. to Kaş. In spite of the difference in vocalization it seems likely that this is an Ar. l.-w., perhaps received through Pe. where it is also a l.-w. Xak. XI oğar at al-farasu'l-aġarr 'a horse with a white blaze on its forehead'; this word agrees with the Ar. in sound and meaning except that in Ar. the alif carries a fatha and in Turkish a damma Kaş. I 53; a.o. I 335 (bol).

VU oğur Hap. leg. Although this is described as Oğuz, the A.N. oğurluk, q.v., appears in a Xak. verse. It is entered between the Xak. and Oğuz translations of uğur and is possibly a special meaning of that word, but there is no obvious semantic connection. Oğuz XI oğur al-'iwāḍ 'exchange', one says atka: oğur aldım 'I received (something) in exchange for the horse' Kaş. I 53.

uğur semantically rather indefinite; seems to connote both 'time' and 'cause'; in some contexts it is hard to say which is uppermost. 'Time' seems to have evolved into 'the right time, an auspicious time', and thence into 'good fortune' the meaning uppermost today in the word and its der. f.s. Very common in the early period, but survives only(?) in SW Az., Osm., Tkm. (and Krım R I 1010). Has been fairly consistently transcribed oğur, but TT VIII has uğur and this is the modern pronunciation. See Doerfer II 604. Uyğ. VIII ff. Kır. IX ff. élim uğrınta 'for the sake of(?) my realm' Mal. 10, 8 (a chaotic inscription, but these words seem clear): Xak. XI uğur al-waqt 'time'; one says ne: uğurda: keldi:ŋ 'at what time did you come?'; uğur al-dawla (here) 'reign'; hence one says beg uğrı:nda: meniŋ ı:şım é:tildi: salaḥa amri fi dawlati'l-amir 'my affairs were kept in good order in the reign of the beg'; uğur al-imkān wa'l-furṣa fi'l-ṣay' 'possibility, opportunity for something'; hence one says bu: ı:ş uğurluğ boldı: ṣāra hāḏā'l--amr fi imkānihi wa furṣatihi 'this affair became possible and opportune' Kaş. I 53: Osm. XIV ff. uğur 'direction; objective; journey' noted in several texts TTS I 716–17; II 921; III 722; IV 778, but in some quotations this is not the meaning, e.g. (I) kadırğa tamām bir yıl uğura gitti, denizden mā'adā nesne görmediler 'the galley went out for a period of a whole year, but they saw nothing except the sea'.

akru: 'gently, quietly', and the like; often doubled. From the earliest period a longer form akuru: occurs and fr. XI forms with -n attached. None of the morphological analyses of this word which have been suggested, e.g. in Brockelmann, para. 104, are plausible, and it seems to be a basic word, the form with attached -n being perhaps an Instr. S.i.m.m.l.g. usually with attached -n and sometimes metathesized as in SW. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. akuru akuru maŋın yorıyur 'she walks at a quiet pace' U II 24, 2; a.o. U III 72, 17: Civ. ot akuru akuru [gap] 'let the fire [burn] gently'. H II 18, 56: Xak. XI akru: Indeclinable (ḥarf) uğra:- Den. V. fr. uğur, and like it semantically rather indefinite. In Uyğ. it is nearly always constructed with a Ger. in -ğalı:/ğeli:, and means 'to intend to (do something)', occasionally with the Dat. with the same meaning; the Ger. uğra:yu however seems to mean 'especially, particularly' (see discussion and further examples in TT V, p. 33, note B86). In Xak. it usually takes the Dat. and means 'to go purposefully (to someone or to do something)'. In Rbğ., as well as the earlier usages, the meaning 'to meet (someone Dat.)' first appears; this is the normal modern meaning. Survives in SE Türki Shaw 11; NE Kar. PUD oğurğa: 'backbone'. Almost the only stable elements about this word in modern languages are the meaning, the initial o- and the -r-. The last syllable varies between -ğa and -ka (in the Uyğ. text it might be either) but -ğa: is more probable. If so, it might be a Dev. N. fr. oğur-, bearing the same relation morphologically to oğruğ as, say, bilge: to bilig. This is the likeliest explanation; but the only early occurrence of the word is in a late Bud. Tantric text, possibly XIII or XIV, and it might be a Turkish l.-w. in Mong. (oğurğa would be the form assumed by oğruğ in Mong., cf. uğurka for ukruk) reborrowed in the Mong. form; there does not, however, appear to be any trace of such a Mong. word. S.i.a.m.l.g. in a wide variety of forms; in some -m-, -n-, -ŋ-, or zero take the place of the first -ğ- and in others a -t- is inserted after the -r-, producing such forms as NC Kır. omurtka, Kzx. omırtka, and SW Az. onurğa, Osm. omurğa, Tkm. oŋurğa. Uyğ. VIII ff. PU ekek Hap. leg., unless mis-spelt in Kıp. XV 'ayb 'shame' ilik Tuh. 24b. 4 there is no other trace of such a word, and lām and kāf are sometimes confused with one another; cf. ekeklik. Xak. XI ekek işle:r al-mūmisa mina'l-nisā 'a prostitute' Kaş. I 78.

PU?D ögek/ögük, the first apparently the Man.-A form of the second. A term of affection(?) of uncertain origin. The suggestion in v. G. ATG, para. 57 that it is a Dim. f. of 1 ö:g hardly fits the context of its being addressed to a son; the theory that it is a Dev. N. fr. ö:- seems semantically more suitable. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A yeme ögi kanı antağ ögek sav sözleyü umağay 'and his mother and father will not be able to speak such understanding(?) words' (as to enlighten his mind) M I 15, 1–3: Bud. in PP 5, 8; 6, 6; 9, 6; 16, 3 speeches addressed by the king to his son Edgü ögli tégin begin amrak ögükim and in do. 26, 3 the old man says to the king 'why are you sending your god-like, jewel-like ögükünüzni to the land of death?'. In these contexts it is clearly an alternative word for 'son', but 'sensible, understanding' hardly seems very appropriate.

ükek originally 'box' or the like; hence metaph. 'a wall tower' on a city wall, Arabic burc, in certain contexts with the metaph. meanings of that word. PUC egrı: teve: N.o.a.b.; obviously some kind of precious object. The word has hitherto been read with final -ı: but certainly on two occasions and prob. the third it is -e:. Thomsen discussed it in Turcica (MSFO XXXVII), pp. 68–9, and was inclined to think it meant some kind of textile or perhaps horse-furnishings, but the simplest course is to read it as two words egrı: teve: and translate it 'humped camels'. Türkü VIII (because I led the Türkü people to various named places in the west they brought unlimited yellow gold, white silver, girls, women) egrı: teve: ağı: 'humped camels and brocade (or treasure?)' T 48: O. Dis. V. EGŞ-

D égeş- Co-op. f. of égе:-. Survives in NE Khak. igeş- 'to help to file, or to saw (wood)'; NC Kır. egeş- 'to be filed'. Xak. XI ol maṇa: temür égeşdi: 'he helped me to file (fī saḥl) the iron' (etc.) Kaş. I 187 (égeşü:r, égeşme:k).

D egiş- Co-op. f. of eg-. Survives only(?) in NE Alt., Tel. i:ş- 'to bend (Trans.)' R I 1550; Bar. iŋiş- 'to bend down (Intrans.); huddle up' do. 1432: SE Türki eŋiş- 'to bow' Jarring 42. Xak. ol maṇa: çöge:n egişdi: 'he helped me to bend (fī 'aṭf) the polo-stick'; also used for competing Kaş. I 187 (egişü:r, egişme:k): Çağ. XV ff. it is likely that this verb existed in Çağ, as éŋiş- 'to be huddled up'; P. de C. 142 lists it with this form and meaning, quoting Babur (fol. 194v., ll. 6–7 of the Gibb Trust facsimile) (the snow fell so boisterously till bedtime) kini éŋişip olturup idim 'that I just sat huddled up'. San. 117r. 29, using the same quotn. as evidence, listed the word as ıŋış-, immediately after ıŋra-/ ıŋran- and translated it by the same word nālidan-i zār 'to moan, groan'; but this seems to be merely a mistranslation based on a false etymology.

D ekiş- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of ek-. Xak. XI ol maŋa: tarığ ekişdi: 'he helped me to sow the seed' ('alā baḍri'l-zar'); also used for competing Kaş. I 187 (ekişü:r, ekişme:k).

PUD 1 igeş- Recip. f. of ige:-; 'to quarrel' and the like. This is the best attested word in this group, surviving with much the same meaning in NC Kır. egeş-, Kzx. eges-; SW XX Anat. egeş-, egiş-, ekeş-, eyeş-, igaş-, igeş-, üyeş-, SDD 510, 512, 517, 564, 781, 782, 803. The modern form suggests fairly definitely medial -g-, not -k-, and less definitely initial é- rather than i- Xak. XI ikki: buğra: igeşdi: taṣādama'l-faḥlān wa ṭa'āḍḍā 'the two camel stallions attacked and bit one another' Kaş. I 187 (prov.; no Aor., or Infin., possibly regarded as a second meaning of égeş- which it follows immediately).

PU(D) 2 igeş- Hap. leg.; 'to rely on one another'. Listed between 2 ögüş- and égeş-. Clearly a Recip. f. but not semantically connected with any known verb, except that there is a faint connection with the third, unexplained, meaning of igen-. Xak. XI kişi:le:r ı:şta: bi:r bi:rike: igeşdi:le:r 'the people relied (ittakala) on one another in the matter' Kaş. I 187 (igeşü:r, igeşme:k).

D 1 ögüş- Hap. leg.; Recip. f. of 1 ö:g-. Xak. XI ikki: eren ögüşdi: 'the two men praised one another' (tamādaḥā) Kaş. I 187 (ögüşü:r, ögüşdi:).

D 2 ögüş- Recip./Co-op. f. of ögi:-. Survives in NE Tuv. ögeş- 'to rub one another' and the like; must also have survived fairly recently in SW Osm. since in a XVII–XVIII Ar. dict. ḍaras (of the teeth) 'to be set on edge' is translated ekşi nesne çignemek ile diş ögüşmek 'to grind one's teeth owing to biting something sour' TTS I 736 (uyuşmak). Türkü VIII ff. toğan kuşu:ŋ tırŋakı: ögü:şü:pen 'the falcon's claws ground against one another' IrkB 44: Xak. XI ol maŋa: tarığ ögüşdi: 'he helped me to grind the corn' (fi ṭaḥni'l-burr, etc.); also used for competing Kaş. I 187 (ögüşü:r, ögüsme:k).

ekşi:- 'to be sour, acid, tart'; no doubt an old word since ekşig occurs in Xak., but not noted before XV. S.i.s.m.l. in NW, SW. Çağ. XV ff. ekşi- (spelt) turş şudan 'to be acid, sour', also used in Rūmī San. 45v. 9.

PUD ükşürüg Hap. leg.; the last letter is missing, but the meaning is fixed by the Chinese original and a Dev. N./A. in -g fr. ükşür-, Caus. Co-op. f. of ük- seems the likeliest reading. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. bu ükşürü[g] ötügümin bütürü yarlıkazun 'may he deign to fulfil this repeated request of mine' Hüen-ts. 310–11.

F öküz (?ököz) one of several terms for bovines, best translated 'ox', since it is more specific than u:ḏ and sığır but not quite so specific as buka: 'bull'. Almost certainly borrowed from Tokharian; Prof. Werner Winter has told me that the source is more likely to be Tokharian A than Tokharian B okso. The A form has survived only as o[gap] in a much damaged text (Sieg and Siegling A 459b. 1) but can be restored fairly confidently as okäs, which would have become ökez/ököz in Standard Turkish and öker in the l/r language from which the First Period Mong. loan-words were taken. Türkü VIII ff. Mon. AL al Preliminary note. There were certainly two ancient words spelt a:l. It is doubtful whether there was a third, probably al if genuine; see below.

1 a:l 'device, method of doing something'; originally quite neutral and used for honourable as well as dishonourable devices and methods; later it became pejorative only and meant specifically 'deceit, guile, dirty trick'. In the early period usually used in the Hend. al çeviş or al altağ. Became a l.-w. in Pe.; survives only(?) in SW Osm. al; Tkm. a:l. XIX Osm. lexicographers regarded it as foreign, Red. 179 describing it as Pe. and Sami 47 as a corruption of Ar. ḥīla, 'better not used'. See Doerfer II 516. Türkü VIII ff. yég a:lığ bulu:şğalı: una:ma:du:klar 'they did not agree on finding a good device' Toyok III 2v. 5–6 (ETY II 179): Uyğ. VIII ff. 3 al if really an ancient word, meant 'front, facing, prior position' but there is great doubt whether it was. In the early period it occurs only with a 3rd Person Poss. Suff. in the Dat., Abl. and Loc. and these words might equally well be the same cases of alın, q.v. The earliest authorities for the existence of al as such are Vel. and San., but in Çağ., too, the word is attested only in suffixed oblique cases; it is possible that by this period a word al had been formed by a kind of false etymology fr. oblique cases of alın. It certainly seems to exist in some modern languages, but is still, except in Kaz., apparently used only in oblique cases. Such words are SE Türki ayl BŞ 10; Jarring 16; NC Kır., Kzx. alda, aldan, alğa and similar forms in NW Kaz.; in NE the situation is complicated by the fact that alın when carrying suffixes would become ald. There is a parallel problem in the question whether there was an ancient word alt or whether this, too, is a back formation fr. altın, q.v., and there is a good deal of confusion between the modern forms of these two groups of words. The following is the relevant evidence regarding this word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. 1 é:l the basic, original meaning was 'a political unit organized and ruled by an independent ruler'; the most convenient short term in English is 'realm'. In the early texts it usually occurs in association with other political terms, xağan the ruler of such a realm, boḍun its people, törö: the unwritten customary law under which it was administered by the ruler, uluş the geographical area which is occupied and öge: the chief administrative officer of the ruler. From Xak. onwards, but not apparently earlier, it developed some extended meanings. In particular it often seems to mean 'the community, the people of the realm', displacing boḍun in this sense. As the Turks became involved in international politics it also began to have an international application and came to mean 'organized international relations' from which the transition to 'peace', one of its modern meanings, was an easy one. It is an open question whether 'courtyard', one of the meanings' given by Kaş., belongs to this word, but it is prob. merely a metaph. use meaning literally 'the realm of the owner of the house'. The phr. usually spelt é:l kün in two words, which is first noted in KB and seems to mean 'people', has given some trouble. The theory in Id. that kün here is 1 kün 'sun' is not at all plausible. The most reasonable explanation is that the second syllable is the Collective Suff. -gün and that the spelling should be é:lgün in one word. S.i.a.m.l.g. as él/el/il meaning 'country, province; people, community (esp. one's own people as opposed to foreigners)' and, less often, 'peace'. ol both (1) an indeclinable Demonstrative Adj. 'that' as opposed to bu: 'this'; (2) a declinable Demonstrative Pron. 'that', also used for the 3rd Pers. Pron. 'he, she, it'. As a Pron. it was also used in the early period as the equivalent of the copula 'is, are'. In this last case there are two usages: (a) subject (sometimes implied, not stated), predicate, ol, meaning that the subject is the same as, or has the quality described by, the predicate; (b) subject, ol, meaning that the subject 'is that', often followed by a subordinate clause as in such phr. as ümid ol 'my hope is (that . . .)'. C.i.a.p.a.l.; in most the form is still ol, but in one or two the -l has been elided, prob. comparatively recently (the only early occurrence, once in Türkü, is almost certainly a scribal error). Such forms are SE Türki o:, o, u Shaw, BŞ, Jarring, and SW Az., Osm. o. In one or two other languages, e.g. SW Tkm. o occurs as a colloquial form, beside the more formal ol. The oblique stem has been from the earliest period an-, and three cases anın, anta, antan are listed separately since they are used as Advs., but there seems to have been an alternative stem ın- of which traces are to be found under ança: and aŋaru:, and in the early period the Plur. was ola:r. In one or two languages, esp. SW Osm. this stem has been converted by false analogy to on-; the only early occurrence is listed under Xak.; and there are sporadic cases of the elimination of -n- in the Plur., e.g. Çağ. alar. Türkü VIII ol is normally an Adj. e.g. ol savığ 'that word' I S 7, II N 6—barduk yérde: eḍgüg ol erinç 'your (only) advantage in the places to which you went was presumably that' (your blood flowed like water, etc.); Oğuz: yeme: tarkınç ol 'his Oğuz, too, are in a difficult mood' T 22; Bilge: Toñukuk añığ ol 'the Counsellor Toñukuk is evil' T 34—anı: körüp 'when you see it' I S 13; anı: üçü:n 'because of that' I E 3; II E 28; four o.o. of anı:; VIII ff. in IrkB every para. ends with the phr. eḍgü: (yavız, etc.) ol '(the omen) is good (bad, etc.)'; ol ta:şı:ğ 'that stone' Toy. 16 (ETY II 58); (a blue-white stone) tir tözlü:g ol 'has its origin in Mercury' do. 5–6: Man. ol öḍün 'at that time' *Chuas. Mon. V. AL-al- 'to take', with all the shades of meaning of the English word, 'to seize, collect (a debt), receive, accept', and some others as well, such as 'to take off' (a cap, saddle, etc.), 'to marry' and (as an abbreviation of satğın al-) 'to buy'. S.i.a.m.l.g. The word is used in many idioms and compounds in which it is sometimes the second element. When it is the first in expressions like alıp bar- and alıp két- 'to take away', and alıp kel- 'to fetch', the two words are often fused and assume forms like appar-, ekkit-, akkel-. Ǯarring 18–19 lists about 30 phr. beginning with a'ıp (alıp) in SE Türki. In compounds in which al- is the second element the meaning largely depends on the form of the first verb. In modern NE and NC languages a Ger. in -p is followed alternatively by al- or bér-, e.g. satıp al- 'to buy', satıp bér- 'to sell'. In such cases Pal. says that al- in NE Tuv. connotes action taken in one's own interest or for oneself. But, if the first element is a Ger. in -a:/-e:, al- has the same meaning as u:- 'to be able'. In such expressions al-, like u:-, is usually, but not always, in the Neg. f.; phr. like kele almadı 'he could not come' are common, but phr. like kele aldı 'he was able to come' occur also. The date when this idiom evolved is uncertain. The earliest languages in which it is traceable are Kom. and Çağ., but no examples have been noted in Xwar., Kıp., or any earlier language or in the SW languages. It has often been suggested, e.g. in R I 348, that the SW Impossible f. barama- 'to be unable to go' is a contraction of bara al- but this is an error, the second element is u:-, q.v. In the basic meaning 'to take' the object is in the Acc., the source from which it is taken in the Abl., and the third-party beneficiary, if mentioned, in the Dat. Türkü VIII al- is common, usually 'to capture (by military action)', e.g. (I killed their xağan and) élin anta: altım 'thereupon took his realm' II E 27; but ol savığ alıp 'accepting that statement (as true)' I S 7, II N 6; Türk[geş xağan] kızı:n ertiŋü: uluğ törün oğlıma: alı: bértim 'I took the daughter of the Türgeş xağan (in marriage) for my son with great honour' II N 10; a.o. I E 8, II E 8 (1 é:l): VIII ff. öğü:m ötl:n alayı:n 'I will accept my mother's advice' IrkB 58; kaltı: yürü:ŋ ta:şığ alsar 'if a man takes a white stone' Toy. 15 (ETY II 58): Man. anıŋ savın alıp Chuas. 137; a.o. 198: Yen. altı: yeğı:rmı: yaşıma: almış kunçuyım 'my wife whom I married at the age of sixteen' Mal. 48, 7: Uyğ. VIII al- 'to capture' occurs four times in Şu.: VIII ff. ıl-/ıl- Preliminary note. There is some difficulty about the vocalization of these verbs. Kaş. I 169 says that there were two: (1) ıl-, Aor. ılur, with a back vowel 'to descend'; (2) il-, Aor. iler, with a front vowel (of a thorn) 'to catch (a garment, etc.)'; but the former is spelt with a front vowel in KB (and the Caus. f. ildür- survives with front vowels in NC), and the latter with back vowels in Çağ.; in the latter language however some meanings are so close to those of al- as to suggest that ıl- here was a Sec. f. of al-, just as in some languages there is a Sec. f. ık- of ak-, q.v. There is in fact no doubt that the second verb did have a front vowel.

ıl- 'to descend (from something Abl.)'. N.o.a.b. The suggestion in *Kaş. D alçak 'gentle, mild, humble' in a laudatory sense; survives in this meaning in NE Alt., Tel. R I 423: NC Kır.: NW Kaz. and SW Tkm., but in SW Osm. and Krım it has (recently?) acquired a pejorative meaning 'low (in stature or character), base, vile'. Prima facie a N./A.S. fr. alça-, but this verb is very poorly attested, occurring only in Osm. Red. 184, in a pejorative sense; the Pass. f. alçal- is, however, better attested in recent Osm. dicts. In these circumstances it is possible that alça- is a back formation fr. alçak and that the latter is a Den. N. for an earlier altçak der. fr. alt, but this depends on the question whether the latter, q.v., is an ancient word. See aşak. Xak. XI alçak al-ḫalīmu'l-ẓarīf 'gentle, mild; graceful, polite' *Kaş. alt as in the cases of 3 al and ast, there is grave doubt whether this is really an independent ancient word. If it was it meant 'the bottom, or lower surface (of something)'. It has been suggested that altın, astın, which is synonymous with it, and üstün, which is often used in antithesis to it, all carry the suffix -dun/-dün/-tun/-tün, etc., which is clearly recognizable in words like öŋdün and kédin, and that these are crases of alttın, *asttın, *üsttün. This is probably correct, but it does involve assuming that alt and ast are in a class by themselves, and different from iç and 2 ta:ş which are the bases of comparable forms içtin and taştın but are also normal N./A.s, since they are used only in suffixed forms. If this is correct, then alçak, q.v., can also be regarded as a crasis of altçak and derived from this word. The only medieval forms of this word, always in suffixed form, are in Tef. Kom. and Kıp. In modern languages there is some confusion between alt and 3 al, but suffixed forms of alt meaning 'below' certainly occur in some NE, NW, and SW languages, and similar forms of ast with the same meaning in SE, NC, SC, and some NW languages. (Xak.) XIII ff. Tef. altına, altında, altındın 'beneath, from beneath' are noted after nouns under altın 49: Kom. XIV altında 'subordinate to him' CCG; Gr. 36: Kıp. XIII (in the grammatical part) 'as for Ar. word taḥt "below, under", its root (aṣluhā) in Turkish is altı ('with back -l-'), if you wish to say taḥtak you say altında:, taḥtakum altıŋızda: (and other examples) Hou. 53, 8 ff.: XIV (under 'adverbs of position') taḥt altında: Bul. 14, 4: XV (ditto) taḥt altı: Kav. 35, 6; taḥt alṭ Tuh. 8b. 10; 73b. 9 (followed by two examples with Suffs.)

D uldaŋ (?ulduŋ) Den. N. fr. u:l; 'the sole' (of a boot, etc.); the earliest form was perhaps ulduŋ (see ulduŋluğ). S.i.a.m.l.g. as ultaŋ with minor phonetic variations, in SW Tkm. and XX Anat. (SDD 1088) oltaŋ and in NE Koib., Kaç., Sag., (R I 1699, 1700.) Khak. and Tuv. as ulduŋ/ultuŋ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. the word appears as ulyak in TT VII 42, 1 a very late text prob. transcribed from an Arabic original, in which it was misread; (a manly man is equal to a jewel) erdemsiz kişi etük içindeki ultaŋ (written ulyak) birle tüz ol 'a man without manly qualities is equal to the sole in a boot': Xak. XI uldaŋ asfalu'l-xuff 'the sole of a boot' *Kaş. D altınç Ordinal f. of altı:; 'sixth'; the only form recorded in the early period; the longer form altınçı: first appears in the Vienna MS. of KB, and s.i.a.m.l.g. w. minor phonetic changes. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. altınç TT V 24, 62; TT VII 40, 105, etc.: Civ. altınç common in TT VII and USp.: XIV *Chin.–Uyğ. D oldruğ abbreviated Conc. N. fr. oldur- (olur-); one of several words for 'seat' derived fr. this verb and apparently pec. to KB. Xak. XI KB (you have prepared this ball) olduruğa ne oldruğ yéri bu 'to sit on; what kind of a seat is this?' 647; o.o. 787, 2547, 2588.

?D ildrük prob. Pass. Dev. N. fr. ildür- (iltür-); 'the plant rue, Peganum harmala'. İlrük is fully vocalized, but ildrük in III 412 in a section containing dissyllables with first syllables ending in two consonants is completely unvocalized and in III 21, 22 the only vowel points are a taşdīd and ḍamma over the dāl, which is presumably an error for a cazm over the dāl and a ḍamma over the rā'. N.o.a.b.; SW XX Anat. ilezik 'rue' is more likely to be a corruption of yü:ze:rlik, q.v., than of this word. The situation is further complicated by the fact that in III 12 it is ildrük and not ilrük that is described as being in the language of Uç and Barsğan. Xak. XI ildrük al-ḥarmal 'rue' Kaş. III 412; a.o. III 12, 22 (yıḍığ)—Uç XI ilrük al-ḥarmal I 105.

D oldrum abbreviated N.S.A. fr. oldur-(olur-); lit. 'a single act of sitting'; but actually 'crippled, incapable of standing up'. N.o.a.b. Xak. XI oldrum (vocalized oldurum in the MS., but in a section containing dissyllables with the first syllable ending in two consonants) al-muq'ad mina'l-nās 'a crippled person' Kaş. III 412: XIV Rbğ. (he saw that some were blind, some lame, some in pain) kimni olturum 'some crippled' R I 1091; Muh. (after 'lame' axsak) al-muq'ad olturum Mel. 48, 5; Rif. 142.

élet- (?élt) the basic meaning seems to be, physically 'to carry', but with several extended meanings like 'to bring (something Acc.), to carry away (something Acc.)'. It is not clear whether the word was originally monosyllabic or dissyllabic, and, if the latter, whether the second vowel was -e- or -i-, but- on balance it was prob. originally élt-. VUD 2 ulıt- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of 2 *ulı:-. Apart from a possible survival of that V. in SE (see ula:-) this V. and ulın-, q.v., which is commoner, are the only representatives of this group of V.s. Xak. XI ol anıŋ boynın u:lıtı: (sic) alwā 'unuqahu 'he twisted his neck'; also used of twisting anything else Kaş. I 213 (u:lıtur, ulıtma:k; the u:- is an error, see ulat-).

D ület- Caus. f. of üle:-; 'to have (something Acc.) divided and distributed (to people Dat.)'. Survives only(?) in NE Khak., Tuv. Xak. XI ol çığa:yka: yarma:k ületti: amara bi--tawzī'i'l-darāhim wa tafrīqihā 'alā'l-fuqarā' 'he gave orders for the money to be divided and distributed to the poor' *Kaş. E ölüt- 'to kill'. This word has been erroneously read in Türkü VIII T 3. The photographs, which are clear, show that the actual word in the inscription is ötmış, but there is a small crack in the stone between ö and t which has been taken for an l. The text reads (you abandoned your xağan and surrendered (to the Chinese). Because you surrendered) teŋrı: ötmiş erinç 'Heaven, no doubt, abandoned you'.

D alta:- Den. V. fr. 1 a:l; although 1 a:l and alta:ğ, q.v., were originally neutral in meaning and only later became pejorative, alta:- always meant 'to deceive, trick, cheat (someone)', with a few extended meanings like 'to soothe (a child), to console' in some modern languages. VU?D üle:tü: 'silk handkerchief'; perhaps Dev. N. fr. ület- in the sense of a section of a large piece of silk fabric divided into equal parts. Survives only(?) in SW XX Anat. alatu a word for 'silk handkerchief' used by Türkmen, SDD 192. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. ületü (front vowels) occurs twice in *Fam. PU?F élteber a title for a tribal ruler subordinate to a superior ruler. N.o.a.b. in Turkish texts, but very common in Chinese historical texts transcribed chieh (or ssŭ) li fa (Giles 1,472 or 10,281 6,885 3,376). In spite of the dissimilarity of their modern pronunciations, there is no reasonable doubt that Müller was right in making this identification in U II 94. Prob. a l.-w., if not a compound of 1 él and the Aor. in -r of a verb which might have been teb- or tev- (but not the familiar tev- 'to pierce'). See Doerfer II 655. Türkü VIII (Kül Tégin captured) Az elteberig 'the élteber of the Az' I N 3; Uyğur elteber II E 37; [Karluk elt]eber II E 40 (restored from the context); bunça: bedizçi:n Toyğun elteber kelü:rti: 'Toyğun, the élteber, brought all these decorators' I NE; a.o. Ix. 21: Uyğ. VIII ben b[. . . el]teber Şu. edge.

alk- 'to use up, finish, come to the end of (something Acc.)'; hence sometimes 'to destroy (something Acc.)'. v. G. ATG, para. 160 suggests that this is an Emphatic f. of al-, but this is unlikely since there is no real semantic connection and no evidence that the Emphatic Suff. was -k- as well as -ık-. ?S alığ syn. w. añığ, q.v., and perhaps a Sec. f. of it. In this meaning survives only(?) in SW XX Anat. aluk (of a man) 'bad' SDD 98. It is, however, possible that a word meaning 'crazy, stupid, mad', and the like, NE several dialects alığ R I 373; Tel. alu: do. 387; Khak. alığ and SW Osm. alık is a survival of this word. See Doerfer II 535. Kıp., Oğuz XI alığ al-radī' min kull şay' 'bad' of anything Kaş. I 64; also occurs in I 384, 6 in a verse (repeated in I 85, 5 with yavuz instead of alığ) (the men who reckoned it good fortune to have a guest have all disappeared) kaldı: alığ oyuk körüp evnі: yıka:r baqiya'lladīn iḏā ra'awu'l-ḫayāl naqaḍū axbiyatahum kaylā yanzil 'alayhi 'but those who, when they see a mirage, strike their tents in order that (a guest) may not lodge with them, have remained'; alığ is not specifically translated but must have meant 'wicked' or the like: Xwar. XIV alığ 'weak, inadequate' Qutb 8: Kıp. al-cabān 'cowardly' (opposite to 'brave' alp) alığ Hou. 26, 4: XIV alu: al-'āciz 'an ġarīmihi 'weaker than (or inferior to) his adversary'; bu: bundan alu: dur 'this is inferior ('āciz) to that'; and for a'caz 'more inferior' they say alurak Id. 22: Osm. XIV ff. alu 'weak, inferior', often in contrast to ulu 'great' or yég 'better', common in XIV and XV and occurs in XVI TTS I 23; II 31; III 18; IV 19.

D allığ Hap. leg.; P.N./A. fr. 1 a:l; 'resourceful'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. TT I 26 (alta:-).

?D alık/aluk; it is an open question how many etymologically different words of these forms there are and which of them can be explained as Pass. Dev. N./A.s fr. al-. This is obviously true of the word in KB, and possibly true of Kaş.'s Oğuz meaning of alık. But it is less obviously true of Kaş.'s meaning of aluk, and rather improbable of the Kıp. meaning. It is difficult to connect NC Kır. alık 'peak, summit' R I 372 with any earlier meaning, but SW XX Anat. alık/aluk retains the second early Osm. meaning and has other meanings like 'driftwood carried away by a flood' which clearly represent a Dev. N. fr. al-. See Doerfer II 547. (O. Kır. IX ff. the word read aluk in Mal. 44, 2 is corrected to alp in Shcherbak's revised text): Xak. XI KB tükel bilse bolmaz kılıklarını yéme alsa bolmaz alıklarını 'it is impossible (for a servant) to understand completely (his master's) character, or to accept his habits(?)' 4757 (for meaning see Osm.): Oğuz XI alık minqāru'l-ṭā'ir 'a bird's beak' Kaş. I 68; aluk er al-raculu'l-aḍla' (sic, not al-aṣla' 'bald' as in printed text) 'a sturdy, powerful man' I 67: Kıp. XIV aluk 'uddatu'l-dābba kā'in mā kāna 'any kind of equipment (harness, etc.) for a horse' Id. 21 (and alukla:- sawwā'l-'udda 'to put harness, etc. (on a horse)'): Osm. XIV alık 'habits' and the like in one XIV text; (however just a strange ruler may be) alığın anlayınca él yıkılur 'the country is disorganized until it gets to understand his habits'; alır ola cıhānıŋ alığını bilir ola zamānıŋ kılığını 'he will come to accept the habits of this world and to know the character of the (present) age' TTS I 20—alık XVI translates al-qurṭān 'a thick felt put on a horse's back beneath the saddle' in one text II 28.

D 1 ula:ğ Dev. N. fr. ula:-; lit. 'something joined on', and the like with various specific applications. Survives only(?) in NC Kır. ulo: 'joining, attaching', and SW Osm. ulak 'something within easy reach'. Cf. sapığ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A ulağ sapağda 'in endless succession' M III 13, 19 (ii): Bud. noted only in the Hend. ulağ sapığ which is common in TT VI, e.g. tuğa ölü ulağ sapığ 'the endless succession of birth and death' 015; o.o. 312, 345, 388, etc.; Suv. 61, 17: Xak. XI ula:ğ ruq'atu'l-ṯawb 'a patch on a garment' Kaş. I 122.

?D 2 ula:ğ a technical term for a horse used for carrying goods or riding, more particularly a horse for hire and a post horse. The specific meaning seems to be that it is one of a string of horses available for hire or use, and it may originally have meant a string of horses rather than a single animal, but if so this meaning became obsolete very early. It is therefore prob. a Dev. N. fr. ula:-, etymologically identical with 1 ula:ğ, but with a specialized meaning. An early l.-w. in Mong. as u/la'aulağa (Haenisch 162, Kow. 394) 'posthorse, relay horse'. S.i.a.m.l.g. in a wide range of forms including such divergent ones as NC Kır. ılo:, ulo:, uno:. See Doerfer II 521. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. ulağ 'transport horse let out on hire' is common in late contracts e.g. maŋa Saraŋuçka Usunka barğu eşek ulağ kergek bolup 'as I, Saranuç, needed donkeys and transport animals (or "donkeys for transport") to go to Usun'. USp. 3, 2–3; (I gave one roll of cloth for) Mekiliŋ Kurçanıŋ ulağka 'Mekilin Kurça's transport animal(s)' (and fifteen rolls of cloth for) Kültürtey ulağ terike 'the hire of Kültürtey's transport animal(s)' do. 31, 9–13; o.o. 38, 15; 39, 4; 91, 20: Xak. XI ula:ğ 'any horse (faras) which an express post-rider (al-barīdu'l-musri') takes by order of the amīr (i.e. beg) and rides until he finds another' Kaş. I 122; ıdğıl meni: tokışğa: yövgil maŋa: ula:ğ-a: 'send me to the battle, wa a'inni li-tu'ṭiyanī faras yuballiğunī ilā'l-ḥarb 'and help me by giving me a horse to carry me to the battle' III 172, 12: Çağ. XV ff. ulağ/ulak at 'horse' Vel. 118 (quotn.); ulağ/ulak (1) markab-i suwārī 'riding horse' (same quotn.); (2) payk wa qāṣid 'a messenger, or courier' sent from one place to another; (3) kār bī-ucrat 'unpaid labour'; the author of the Burhān-i qāṭi' included this as a Pe. word with the same meanings San. 85v. 21; Kıp. XIV ulak al-barīd Id. 21: Osm. XIV ff. ulağ, more often ulak, once (XVII) in error uğlak, usually 'mounted messenger', occasionally (XIV, XV) 'post horse'; c.i.a.p. TTS I 717; II 922; III 702; IV 778.

uluğ 'big, great', physically and metaph., including such usages as 'grand(father); eldest (son)'. Prob. a basic word and not a P.N./A in -luğ, since it has no semantic connection with u: and cannot be derived fr. u:-. C.i.a.m.l.g., but in SW, while ulı is the standard word in Tkm., it has been almost entirely displaced by böyük (beğük) in Az. and büyük in Osm. D alkığ 'wide, broad'; well established in Uyğ., where it occurs only in the Hend. kéŋ alkığ, otherwise known only in NE in a curious variety of forms; Karağas alhığ (sic); Khak., Koib. allığ; Şor alığ, aldığ R I 373, etc.; Bas. 23; Tuv. algığ Pal. 55. Prima facie N./A.S. fr. alk-; the semantic connection is tenuous, but cf. alku:. There is a NE Khak., Tuv. verb algı- 'to expand, become broader', but this can hardly be as old as Uyğ., and may well be a late form of alk- or even a back-formation fr. alkığ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A (you will live in that country) kéŋin alkığın muŋsuzun 'at your ease (Hend.), and carefree' M III 30, 5–6 (i): Bud. G.*35; *K.*4; kéŋ alkığ (of heaven, earth, a palace, etc.) is common in TT VI 07, 241, 243, etc.; a.o. X 26.

D olğun N./A.S. fr. 1 ol-; 'ripe'. Survives only in SW Osm. and XX Anat. ulğun/ulkun SDD 1416–17. The word is not fully vocalized in Kaş. and the Ar. translation corrupt, but its identity is certain. Xak. XI seḍremiş olğun konak (mis-spelt koyak) qalla rab'(?) ḥabbati'l--cāwars 'the quantity(?) of grains of millet was small' Kaş. III 167, 7 (the second word must be a Nom. as the third is a Gen. but rab' (not fully vocalized) does not look right); n.m.e.

D alkınç Dev. N. fr. alkın-; 'coming to an end, annihilation', and the like. N.o.a.b., but cf. alkınçsız. The -u- is no doubt euphonic before a consonantal Suff. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. alkınçuka teği burxan uruğı üzülmez 'the seed (i.e. succession) of Buddhas will be unbroken until the end of time' TT VI 205; séziklig köŋülümüz alkınçuka teği üzülzün 'may our doubts be utterly dispelled' do. 380–1.

Dis. V. ALĞ-

?D alık- N.o.a.b. Morphologically obscure; hardly to be derived from al-; if the basic meaning is 'to fester, turn septic', perhaps fr. 2 a:l, lit. 'to be inflamed'. Xak. XI er alıktı: la'uma'l-racul 'the man was vile, miserly'; and one says ba:ş alıktı: tanaffaṭa'l-curḥ wa faṣada 'the wound festered and turned septic', also used of anything that turns septic owing to mishaps in menstruation or parturition or to running sores' (naẓra ḥā'iḍ aw nufasā aw cunub) Kas. I 191 (verse; alika:r, alıkma:k): KB (these things (bad temper, anger, etc.) are bad for a man) munı kılsa yalnuk alıkar etöz 'if a man does them, his body deteriorates' 337 (so read, with Vienna MS. against bilse . . . ılıkar in Fergana MS.).

alka:- 'to praise', both in the religious and the ordinary sense; hence, more recently, 'to bless, pray for a blessing on (someone Acc.)', cf. alkış. S.i.s.m.l. in NE, SE, NC; in SC and NW displaced by Mong. l.-w. makta- and in SW by Ar. nouns with et-. See 2 arka:-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. ağızınta sizni öge alkayu 'praising (Hend.) you with their mouths' TT III 97: Bud. kılmışların yeme tutup ögdüm alkadım erser 'if I have accepted(?) and praised (Hend.) what they have done' Suv. 135, 4–5: Civ. TT I 170 (tüş-): Çağ. XV ff. alka-(-mış, etc.) alkış et-Vel. 28 (quotn.); alka- (spelt) du'ā-yi xayr kardan 'to bless' San. 48v. 7 (quotns.)

D alkat- Caus. f. of alka:-. N.o.a.b.; apparently, like ögüt-, q.v., used only in the Particip. f. alkatmış 'praiseworthy, provoking praise; blessed'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.A. (at an auspicious moment, on an auspicious day) yeme alkatmış ayka 'in a blessed month' M I 26, 22–3; a.o. do. 24 (ögüt-): Man. alkatmış bés kat teŋri yérinde 'in the blessed five-fold heavens' TT III 59: Bud. alkatmış ıduk élig uluşuğ 'the blessed, holy realm, and country' TT VII 40, 17.

D olxut- Hap. leg. Der. f. olur-; Kaş. is quite right in saying that it is completely irregular, but olğut- would be equally irregular. It looks rather like an abbreviation of olğurt-, q.v. Xak. XI ol meni: olxuttı: aclasanī 'he seated me'; originally with -ğ- olğuttı: li-anna'l-fi'l lā yu'addā bi'l-xā' albatta because a verb is certainly not made Causative with -x-', but is made Causative with -ğ-, e.g. oğğur- 'to wake', toğğur- 'to satiate'; in these the verb is made Causative with a -ğ- *Kaş. ilk 'first' in order of time or space. No doubt, originally a Mon. but often, prob. for reasons of euphony, spelt ilki:. D 2 éllig P.N./A. fr. 1 é:l; originally lit. 'having a realm', it soon came to mean 'king', perhaps at first to supply a word with this meaning for translations of Bud. and Man. scriptures. In Uyğ. Bud. it is often combined, or alternates, with xa:n, q.v. It then came to be spelt, and perhaps pronounced, élig with a singl -l-, and perhaps, at some uncertain later date, ilig. In Persian it suffered further changes, e.g. to ilek, but this was prob. never really a Turkish word. Apart from the refces. below, the only survivals seem to be in NC Kır. eldü 'populated'; eldik (1) 'democrat'; (2) in phr. calpı eldik 'embracing all the people', and possibly ilik or ilik cilik 'neighbour'. See Doerfer II 661. Türkü VIII éllig (spelt with two l's) boḍun ertim 'we were a people with a realm of our own' I E 9, II E 8; o.o. I E 15, II E 13 (élsiret-); I E 18 (ditto); I E 29, II E 24 (ığar); eçi:m xağan éli: kamşağ boltukı:nta: boḍun él(l)igi: ekigü: boltukı:nta: 'because my uncle the xağan's realm became insecure and the people and their ruler came to be at variance' I N 3: VIII ff. ?D elü:g (?elö:g) 'mockery, ridicule'; prima facie a N.Ac. fr. elü:-. An early l.-w. in Mong. as eleg (with Den. V. elegle-; Kow. 205–6, Haltod 47). The modern forms, NE elek R I 811; elik do. 815; Khak. Bas. 334; NW Kar. elik R I 815; Kow. 183; Kaz. elek do. 811 look more like reborrowings fr. D ilig Dev. N. fr. il-; 'attachment' and the like. N.o.a.b., but see iliglig. There are several modern words of similar forms and some may be descended from this word, e.g. SW xx Anat. ilik çeken 'the cords that tie the ends of a camel's wooden collar together' SDD 786. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. ev barklıġ iligig tutuğuğ 'attachments and ties to home and household goods' USp. 105, 7–8.

D ölüg N./A.S. fr. öl-; 'dead; a dead person, corpse'. S.i.a.m.l.g. w. phonetic variations. NW Kaz. distinguishes between üll 'dead', and ülik 'corpse' R I 1849 but this is unlikely to reflect an earlier antithesis between ölüğ and ölük, the word is consistently spelt ölüg in those alphabets, Runic and Manichean, which distinguish g and k. See Doerfer II 621. Türkü VIII tirigi: . . . ölügi: 'those of you who survived . . . those of you who died' I N 9 (yurt); VIII ff. (a dappled cow gave birth to a dappled calf . . .) ölü:gde: ozmi:ş IrkB 41; this could conceivably mean 'was saved from death', but the phr. used for this in 13, 17, and 49 is ölü:mde: ozmi:ş, and the form in 41 is prob. a scribal error: Man. ol ölügke katıldı 'he had intercourse with that dead (woman)' M I 5, 7; o.o. 5, 8; 6, 4: Yen. tirig ölüg ara: 'between the living and the dead' should perhaps be read in Mal. 26, 1: Uyğ. VIII ff. D almalık A.N. (Conc. N.) fr. alma:; 'apple orchard'. Survives in its literal meaning in some NW and SW languages, but used as a place-name over a much wider area. Does not occur in any Turkish text before XV, and then only as a place-name, but occurs as a place-name in a Sogdian document found at Mount Mug in Fergana which can be firmly dated to the first quarter of VIII. It is unfortunately impossible to determine which of the various places with this name is referred to, but it must have been within reasonable distance of Fergana, and the name must be a legacy from the period when the Western Türkü ruled in this area. Türkü VIII in a much damaged Sogdian document, B 1, relating to the issue of various kinds of military equipment, quivers, weapons, etc. it is stated (l. 4) that 'ḏmḏwkč γwβω mr'z 'the assistant to the governor of Almaluk' (Sogdian ḏ (Hebrew lamed) here used with its original value l) received five weapons of an uncertain kind, M. 1 alaŋ basic meaning uncertain; it seems to be 'level open ground' with some implication that it is, in particular, 'an area of open level ground, a clearing, in a forest'. Survives in this meaning as alan in NW Kaz. R I 359; SW Osm. and XX Anat. SDD 90 and 139 (aylan); in the last it also means 'level open ground' in general. alın 'forehead', perhaps with some extended meanings. The extent of these depends on the question whether various words in oblique cases are to be taken as derived fr. alın or fr. 3 al, q.v., with a Poss. Suff. Alın 'forehead' survives only in SW Az., Osm., Tkm.; elsewhere it has been displaced by l.-w.s, usually Mong. maŋlay, less often Pe. pīşina. Uyğ. VIII ff. ulun 'a thin stick, or shoot'; hence 'the shaft of an arrow'. Survives in SW XX Anat. ulun 'the root of a wheat or barley plant' SDD 1417. The word is not recorded in early Cağ. dicts. but P. de C. somewhere found a word uluŋ 'arrow-shaft' which he entered twice, one starting alif-lām, etc. (p. 35) and once alif wāw lām, etc., p. 80); these entries were much distorted in R I 388, 1852 and ŞS. Uyğ. VIII ff. D öleŋ Dev. N. fr. öli:-; 'grass', esp. 'fresh growing grass'; hence, by extension 'a grassy meadow'. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in SW only Tkm. and XX Anat. There is, supposedly another öleŋ meaning 'a wedding song' noted in San. 86r. 21 and surviving in NC Kır., Kzx., and SW Tkm., but this meaning prob. derives from the fact that the refrain (quoted in San. and Tkm.) is hay öleŋ hay öleŋ, which looks like a metaph. reference to the bride. See Doerfer II 620. Uyğ. VIII ff. Survives w. some extended meanings in SE Türki Shaw 12: NC Kzx.; NW Kaz. and SW XX Anat. SDD 91. Cf. alart- Xak. XI talka: alardı: talawwana'l-hişrim wa ğayruhu mina'l-ṭimār 'the unripe (and other) fruit changed colour'; and one says kişi: yi:ni: alardı: 'the man's body (etc.) became leprous' (barişa); and anıŋ kö:zi: alardı: 'his eyes were dazzled' (bariqa) *Kaş. iler- acc. to Kaş. 'to be dimly visible'. Became a l.-w. in Mong. as ilere- 'to appear, become clearly visible' (Kow. 300, Haltod 67). NE Tel. iler- with the latter meaning, R I 1480, might be either a survival or a re-borrowing fr. Mong. Cf. ilert-. Xak. XI menıŋ kö:züme: ne:ŋ ilerdi: taxayyala'l-ṣay' fī 'aynī fī bu'd aw ẓulma 'the thing was dimly visible to my eyes in the distance or the dark'; (in verse) tağla:r başı: ilerdi: 'the heads of the mountains were dimly visible' *Kaş. olur- (?olor-) 'to sit', with various extended meanings. The phonetics of this word are complicated. The Caus. f. olğurt- q.v. suggests that the original form was olğur-, but there is no other trace of such a word. The only form in Uyğ. and earlier languages is olur-, but this form survives only in NE Tuv. olur- and Yakut olor- Pek. 1819. In Xak. there are two forms oldur- and oltur- which are best explained as very early examples of the Turkish habit of dis-similating -l- to -Ld- (cf. the pronunciation alda for allāh in some modern languages). The form oltur- still survives in some modern languages, but in others the -lt- has been assimilated to -tt- (some NE languages), -d- (other NE languages) or -t- (all SW languages and some others). The verb originally meant 'to sit', possibly with a distinction of meaning between 'to sit down on (something Dat.)' and 'to be seated on (something Loc.)'. The special application to rulers seems to have been pec. to the early period. Another shade of meaning is (of nomads) 'to settle down, reside' (in a particular place); in some languages only of temporary settlement, permanent settlement being described by yat-. In some modern languages used as an Auxiliary Verb, preceded by a Ger. in -p, meaning 'to do (something) habitually, continuously, or frequently', but sometimes with a very tenuous meaning. Türkü VIII olur- is very common in three distinct meanings; (1) 'to sit down (for a rest)' I E 27, II E 22; T 51–2 (uḍı:-); (2) 'to take (one's) seat on the throne' xağan olurtım 'I took my seat as xağan' I S 9, II N 7; a.o. I S 8, II N 6 (1 é:l); (3) 'to settle down, take up residence' (temporarily, in a particular place Loc.) altu:n yışda: oluruŋ 'settle down (for a time) in the Altay mountains' T 31 oluruŋ téyen tedi 'he said, "stay where you are" ', T 34; o.o. I S 4, etc.: VIII ff. a (bird) çıntan ığaç üze: olu:ru:pan 'perching on a sandal-wood tree' IrkB 4; xan olu:rupan 'a Xan, taking his seat on the throne' (built himself a capital) do. 28; (a pail) küneşke: olu:ru:r 'is sitting in the sunlight' do. 57; (a crane) uça: uma:tı:n olu:ru:r 'sits still, because it cannot fly' do. 61: Man. uluş has a curious history; originally it meant 'country' in a geographical sense, as opposed to 1 é:l (q.v.) with its political implications, but it began to be associated with the names of cities, and by XI in some languages it meant 'city' rather than 'country'. An early l.-w. in Mong., where it became ulus to comply with Mong. phonetics and acquired a political rather than a geographical sense. It was originally used for the largest political unit known, the Mong. empire (see XIII below), and when this was split into four between the four sons of Çingis it was used for each of these four parts, e.g. 'the ulus of Çağatay'. Then, since the Mongols thought more in terms of peoples than of territories, it came to mean 'a confederation of peoples (é:l)', the peoples being divided into 'tribes' (aymağ), the tribes into 'clans' (boy), and these into families (uruğ). All these words, except perhaps the third, were Turkish and the second, fourth, and fifth have a continuous history in Turkish, but the first had so completely lost its original meaning that when it was reintroduced into Turkish it appeared in its Mong. form ulus (not uluş) and with its Mong. meaning. Uluş seems to survive only in NW Kar. L. R I 1697; in all other language groups (except NC where it is obsolete) it is ulus 'nation, people, tribe', and the like. Türkü VIII (in the list of foreign powers represented at Kül Tégin's funeral) Buxarak uluş 'the country of the Bokhariots' (prob. in Inner Mongolia, not Bokhara itself, see S. F amaç a very early l.-w. fr. Pe., no doubt acquired with the plough, when the Turks first became agriculturalists. Persian āmāc meant primarily 'plough', thence 'a heap of earth thrown up by the plough', thence 'such a heap, perhaps further enlarged, used as an archery target', and thence 'a furlong, one twenty-fourth of a parasang', a suitable distance for an archery range. Kaş. noted two of these meanings, San., who recognized the word as Pe., gave only one Turkish meaning. It is listed in SE Türki amaç 'plough' Shaw 14; SC Sart ditto R I 646; Uzb. omoç 'plough' (obsolete) Bor. 304 and in SW Tkm. omaç 'plough' (obsolete). It existed in SW Osm. fr. an early period (see below), but Red. marked it as Pe. and so did Sam. 54, describing it as a 'superfluous' word for 'target'. It has, however, been adopted in Rep. Turkish meaning (physically) 'a target' and (metaph.) 'aim, objective' on the ground that it means 'target' in SW Anat. (amaç SDD 98; emeç do. 528). See Doerfer II 552; and cf. bokursi. Xak. XI amaç (?amac) al-hadaf 'target'; amaç al-faddān wa hiya ālatu'l-filāha 'plough', that is an agricultural implement *Kaş. E amuç one of the few serious scribal errors in Kaş. In I 140, 7, after translating armağa:n ('gift') and saying that there is an alternative form yarmağa:n, wa huwa amuc is added. This has been taken to mean that this was another word for 'gift', but it is merely a miscopying of wa huwa aṣaḥḥ 'and it is more correct'.

?D amtı: 'now'. Prima facie, an Adv. in -tı: (Studies, p. 145) fr. am, but the only trace of this word in this sense is in NE Sag., Şor R I 643, Khak. and Tuv. where it exists side by side with amdı, and looks like an abbreviation of that word. It certainly had back vowels as late as Xak. but in some Uyğ. texts it seems to be spelt with e-. The dental was certainly unvoiced in Türkü and voiced in Xak. and later; the position in Uyğ. is uncertain owing to the ambiguity of the script. S.i.a.m.l.g., with back vowels only in NE. When um- came to mean 'to hope', it followed suit, and umu 'hope, expectation' survived in the XIX SW Osm. dicts., but is now obsolete and

1 ımğa: 'wild mountain goat'; an old word w. ending -ğa:. The spelling in Türkü seems to be amğa:, since Runic m ğ a: could hardly be read ımğa:. Became an early l.-w. in Mong. as imağa(n)/ima'a(n) 'male (wild) goat' (Kow. 309, Haltod 69); Mong. Plur. ima'at in XIII Secret History (Haenisch 82). On this word see Studies, p. 235 and also Shcherbak 118 and L. Bazin, 'Noms de la "chèvre" en turc et en mongol', in Studia Altaica, Festschrift für Nikolaus Poppe, Wiesbaden, 1957, pp. 28 ff., both of which contain minor errors, e.g. that the word originally had an initial y- which rests on no better evidence than a mis-spelling in the Vienna MS. of the KB. Survives apparently only in SW xx Anat. ima/ime SDD 789, 790, both of which seem to mean some kind of wild goat. Türkü VIII passages in I N 8 and II E 31 have hitherto been read Amğa: Kurğan kışlap and Amğı: (error for Amğa:, the stone is chipped here) Kurğan kışladukda: 'after spending the winter at Amğa Kurğan'. This is open to two objections: (1) in the only other early (Uyğ. VIII) occurrence of kışla:- it is preceded by the Instr., Ötüken iri:n kışladım 'I spent the winter north of the Ötüken' Şu. E 7; (2) kurğan, 'fort' and the like, is not noted earlier than Kıp. XIII and Çağ. XV ff. The correct reading is prob. amğa:korığın 'at the hunting ground for wild goats reserved for the xağan' (see korığ) prob. used as a place-name: VIII ff. (a leopard and a stag went searching for game and grain) ortu: yérde: amğaka: sokuşmi:s esri: amğa: yalım kaya:ka: ünüp barmi:ş 'in the middle country they met a wild goat; the dappled wild goat climbed a bare rock and made off' IrkB 49 (for kaya: cf. KB): Xak. XI KB kayada yorığlı bu ımğa teke 'these mountain goats and ibexes ranging among the rocks' (cannot escape you) 5373: XIV Muh. kabşu'l-cabal 'wild mountain goat' ı:mğa: Mel. 72, 10; Rif. 175 (mis-spelt, nūn for yā): Çağ. XV ff. ımğa: (spelt) buz-i kūhī 'mountain goat' San. 114v. 29; (yaman . . . and, in Mong., buz 337v. 4): Osm. XIV to XVI ime (or? ıma) 'mountain goat'; in several texts TTS I 337; II 532; III 368; IV 421.

D amran- Refl. f. of amra:-; basically 'to be friendly, loving' and the like in a good sense, it came sometimes to mean 'to desire, lust' in an evil sense in Uyğ. S.i.s.m.l.; NE Alt. amran- 'to live in peace' R I 650, and SW xx Anat. amran- 'to loll, sprawl' SDD 99 are prob. reflections of the meaning of amara- (amra:-) as a l.-w. in Mong. but NC Kzx. émren-/émiren- (of a mother) 'to fondle' R I 963, MM 141 and SW Osm. imren- 'to long for, covet'; Tkm. imrin- 'to sympathize with, like' are no doubt direct survivals. Türkü VIII ff. Dis. AMY uma:y originally 'placenta, afterbirth'; also used as the name of the (only?) Turkish goddess, whose particular function was to look after women and children, possibly because this object was supposed to have magic qualities. Survives, more or less in the second meaning, in NE Şor umay R I 1788; Khak. ımay (sic) and NC Kır. umay; the last also means 'a mythical bird that builds its nest in the air', but this is merely a corruption of Persian humāy. Türkü VIII (my younger brother grew to manhood) umay teg̈ ög̈üm katu:n kutı:ŋa: 'under the auspices of my mother who is like (the goddess) Umay' I E 31; a.o. T 38 (basa:)— Kögmen [. . .] ıg̈uk yer suv [. . .] kan teŋrı:d[e: . . .] umay xatu:n Inscription on a tile found near Ulan Bator ETY II 161: VIII ff. Preliminary note. Apart from m there were three nasal sounds in early Turkish: dental n, which has survived in all languages, guttural ŋ, which has survived in some languages, been weakened to n in others and in a few, under the influence of Mong. (see Studies, p. 220), strengthened to ŋğ, ŋk, and palatal ñ, which was already becoming obsolete in VIII and has now evolved into y, n or a combination of the two, usually metathesized, see Clauson, 'The Turkish Y and Related Sounds' in Studia Altaica, Festschrift für Nikolaus Poppe, Wiesbaden, 1957. There is some difficulty in texts in Ar. script in distinguishing between ŋ and ng, but the latter combination seems to occur only when -g- is the first letter of a suffix, and in Kaş. words containing ŋ are placed in special sections for words containing that sound. Some authorities, e.g. Id., tried to overcome the difficulty by representing ŋ by n with a diacritical mark, usually three subscribed dots, but this mark is often lacking in the surviving MSS.; in others ğ sometimes seems to be used to represent ŋ.

D an- stem for the oblique cases of ol, q.v.

1 aŋ 'understanding, intelligence'. The earliest note of this word is in San., but as it is the basis of aŋla:- it must be much older. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE and ?SC. 2 é:n 'sloping downwards'; pec. to Xak.; homophonous w. én-. Xak. XI é:n yé:r al--habūṭ mina'l-arḍ 'downward sloping ground'

hence one says é:n yok habṭa wa ṣa'ūd 'up and down country' Kaş. I 49; a.o. III 4, 12 (yı:ş).

3 én 'earmark' on sheep or other animals; not noted before XIV but the Dev. V. éne:- is older. Survives in NE Khak. Bas. 59; NC Kır., Kzx., and SW XX Anat. en, ın, in SDD 531, 770, 791. Kıp. XIV (after 1 é:n) also used ṣaraṭ uḍni'l-ğanam 'an earmark on sheep' Id. 23 (156).

1 eŋ an Adjectival Prefix forming a quasi-Superlative. S.i.a.m.l.g. as eŋ occasionally éŋ. In spite of the fairly consistent spelling aŋ in Uyğ., which is contradicted by eŋ in TT VIII, there is no reasonable doubt that this was always eŋ. See Doerfer II 566. Türkü VIII eŋ ilk I N 4; eŋ ilki: I E 32; II E 30 'first of all' (adverbially): Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A eŋ ilki ditto M I 14, 6: Bud. Sanskrit antima- 'last of all' (Adj.) eŋ kénki TT VIII A.48; aŋ (sic) ilki TT V 20, 2; aŋ başlayuku tıltağı 'its primary cause' do. 20, 3 and 7; aŋ başı do. 20, 10; 24, 55; aŋ başlayu Suv. 348, 6; aŋ tübinde 'finally' TT VII 40, 143: Civ. eŋ öŋre 'first' (Adv.) TT VIII L.33; aŋ ilki TT VII 14, 4; H I 14: Xak. XI KB bularda eŋ altın 'the lowest of these' 137, 793 (aşnu:kı:), 3997: Kom. XIV eŋ (before labials em) CCI, CCG; Gr. 89 (quotns.).

2 eŋ survives only in SW XIX Osm. but even there described in Sam. 143 as 'obsolete'. Most authorities translate 'cheek', but as it is often associated with colours, 'complexion', the Osm. meaning, may sometimes be intended; yaŋa:k, the alternative word for 'cheek' seems originally to have meant specifically 'cheek-bone'. Xak. XI eŋ al-xadd 'cheek'; one says kızıl eŋ 'red cheeks' Kaş. I 40: KB sarığ kılğa eŋ 'it will make my cheeks yellow' 477; o.o. (see kız-) 1100, 2385: XIII(?) At. (the prophets have white faces, Muḥammad is the eye in the face) yā olar kızıl eŋ bu eŋke meŋ-e 'or they (have) red cheeks, and he is the mole on the cheek' 26: XIV Muh.(?) al-xadd eŋ (followed by al-'āriḍ 'cheek-bone' yaŋa:k) Rif. 140 (only): Çağ. XV ff. eŋ yayak Vel. 31 (quotn.); éŋ ditto 84 (quotn.); éŋ gūna wa 'āriḍ 'complexion, cheek' San. 117v. 28 (quotns.): Xwar. XIV eŋ 'cheek' Qutb 21; éŋ do. 50; MN 6, etc.: Kıp. XIV eŋ ('with -ŋ') yuṭlaq 'alā'l-xadd 'is used with reference to the cheek' Id. 25; (under buğday) em lawnu'l-xadd 'the colour of the cheeks' do. 34.

3 eŋ with a front vowel occurs only in IrkB, where it might mean 'wild game' (but for this a:v might be expected) or, more generally, 'food' (usually a:ş). Its relationship to Mong. aŋ 'wild game' (Kow. 15, Haltod 2) is obscure, but since the Mongols must have had their own word for 'wild game' the resemblance is prob. fortuitous. Aŋ 'wild game' in most NE languages R I 182, Khak., Tuv., and NC Kır., is no doubt a Mong. l.-w. Türkü VIII ff. bars keyi:k eŋke: meŋke: barmi:ş eŋi:n meŋi:n bulmi:ş 'a leopard and a deer went to look for game (or food?) and grain and found it' IrkB 31 (cf. eŋle:-).

i:n 'the hole, or lair, of a wild animal'. S.i.a.m.l.g. Türkü VIII ff. 1 oŋ like 1 sa:ğ q.v. and, in English, 'right', the opposite both of 'left' and of 'wrong'. Both meanings seem equally old. Except in scripts which carefully distinguish between o- and ö- easily confused with 1 öŋ, particularly in regard to the cardinal points, since for someone facing East öŋtün is 'East' and for someone facing South oŋtun is 'West'. 2 öŋ 'colour', of anything. Since Chinese sè (Giles 9,602), properly 'colour', is also used to translate Sanskrit rūpa 'material form', in some Man. and Bud. texts öŋ is used in the same technical sense, instead of the natural translation of this word, körk, q.v. Survives only in some NE languages and NC Kır., Kzx.; in these languages it tends to mean 'the complexion of the face' and even 'the face', which leads to confusion with 2 eŋ and even 1 öŋ. Türkü VIII ff. Dis. ANA ana: 'mother'. Like ata:, q.v., first appears in Uyğ., where it is still rare and 1 ö:g, q.v., still common. C.i.a.m.l.g., except NE where it has been partially displaced by Mong. ece/ice; sometimes subjected to unusual deformations, e.g. anne, to make it a term of more intimate affection. See Doerfer II 567. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. anasın [gap] oğlanı severçe 'as children love their mother [and father?]' TT III 98–9 (babasın is restored in the gap, but this

ini: 'younger brother'. C.i.a.p.a.l., but in SW Osm. largely displaced by such phr. as küçük kardeş. Cf. éçi:. See Doerfer II 674. Türkü VIII inim and inisi: are common in I and II; a collective Plur. in -gü:n occurs three times; in I S 1 the spelling is clearly inygünm, in II N 1 the stone seems to be damaged beyond repair at this point, and Radloff's 'retouched' squeeze simply reproduces the word fr. I S 1; in I N 11 the third letter is not clear in either Russian squeeze or Finnish photograph, but it is clearly not y and could well be i; the -y- in I S 1 can, therefore, be taken as one of several mason's errors and the word read everywhere, as might be expected, ini:gü:nim 'my younger brothers': VIII ff. Man. inili éçili 'younger and elder brothers' Chuas. I 31: Yen. inim eçim Mal. 28, 4; a.o.o.: Uyğ. IX inim Suci 6: VIII ff. VU ona: an Adv., pec. to Uyğ. and discussed at length in TT V, p. 32, note B 80. It seems to mean both (1) 'precisely, exactly' and (2) '(very) soon'. It seems to be the origin of a modern word ana (with other forms ene, anav) used as an Excl. meaning 'here, here you are', and an Adv. meaning 'merely, simply' which occurs in some NE and NW languages, NC Kzx., and in a wide range of forms in SW XX Anat. SDD 99, 100, 101, 104, 532, 534, 537, 791, 793. The Kzx. phr. ana mına suggests a connection with ol and v. G. ATG, para. 190 adopts this suggestion, but the oblique stem of ol is consistently an- (with some traces of ın-) in Uyğ. Cf. onu:. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Ratnaraşı atlığ açarı ona amtı bu erür 'now this is the teacher named Ratnaraşı' Suv. 573, 20–1; Brahmadatı élignıŋ [körünçlüki] ona ıraktın közünü turur 'King Brahmadattas' tate chariot(?) is just appearing in the distance' U II 22, 5–6; men ona basa yitdim 'I have certainly gone astray' Suv. 615, 14–15; ona at the beginning of a long sentence TT V 24, 80; (for the second meaning see onakaya).

D o:nu: pec. to Xak.(?); apparently the Acc. of ol used as a sort of Excl., but irregular since the oblique stem of ol in Xak. is an-. Possibly a later form of ona: q.v. Xak. XI one says o:nu: meaning ḏāka 'that' and mu:nu: meaning hāḏā 'this' fi'l-išāra ilā'l-'ayn mina'l-a'yān 'to distinguish one thing from another' Kaş. III 238: KB onu and munu occur several times as rhymes at the end of consecutive hemistichs but add little or nothing to the meaning; ayur emdi oğlum barırmen munu saŋa kaldı ornum barı neŋ onu 'he said "now, my son, I am going away (from here); my position and all my goods remain (there) for you" ' 1161; sözin kesti Ögdülmiş aydı munu bu yaŋlığ bolur beg tapuğçı onu 'Ögdülmiş finished his speech and said (this) "the (relations between the) beg and the servant are like this" (there)' 4155.

öŋi: 'other than (something Abl.), different'; when doubled, öŋi: öŋi:, means 'various, different kinds of'; Kaş. quotes an alternative form öŋin, no doubt Secondary, which appears in some medieval texts, and was the origin of ögin/ögün, q.v. Survives, with minor phonetic variations in most modern language groups, not SW, in SE, SC meaning 'variegated, parti-coloured', perhaps owing to a supposed connection with 2 öŋ. Cf. aḍın, aḍruk, özge:. Türkü VIII ff. (how shall I get on) iḍişimte: ayakımta: öŋi: 'without my cup and bowl?' IrkB 42: Man. (if we have said) kentü özüumüzni (sic) künte ayda öŋi biz 'we ourselves are independent(?) of the sun and moon' Chuas. 26–7; antın öŋi bolğay 'it will be different from that' TT II 6, 25: Uyğ. VIII ff. Survives in several NE languages, often much abraded to ö:ç, ö:ş, ös, and the like; SE Türki öŋgeç; NC Kır. öŋgöç, Kzx. öŋeş; SC Uzb. ŋaŋaç. In SW the word used is öŋük which is noted from XIV onwards TTS I 745; II 638; IV 519 (transcribed üŋük) in phr. kızıl öŋük. Uyğ. VIII ff. (in a list of diseases translated fr. a Chinese text) öŋüç ağrığ ığıg 'a disease (Hend.) of the larynx' (Chinese yeh hou (Giles 12,981 4,007). U II 69, 4 (i).

D ança: Equative form of ol; properly 'as much as that', but normally in the early period hardly more than 'thus'. There is also, in the early period, a Sec. f. beginning with ı- of this and other cognate words (ançıp, aŋaru:, etc.). This is usually transcribed ınçe, a spelling which does occur in TT VIII, but as there is also a spelling ınça in those texts, and as the word survives in this form in NE Tuv., it is likely that the original form was ınça: and that ınçe is merely one of several examples of the tendency of ı- to move into a front position (cf. ı:ş, ı tı:ş, etc.). S.i.a.m.l.g. as ança and the like. As ınça: always means 'thus', some editors of early texts have tended to 'correct' words meaning 'thus' to ınçe even when ança: is clearly written. See Doerfer II 560. Türkü VIII ança: 'thus' is common in I and II and occurs in] T 2, 6, 8, 10 (ö:gleş-), etc.; Ongin 8, 11; Ix. 20, 23; it is generally used near the end of a sentence or para. to summarize briefly what has gone before or, less often, what follows, e.g. anı: körüp ança: bilip 'when you see it (the memorial tablet) know thus' (i.e. what has been said in the preceding sentences) I S 13: VIII ff. the concluding sentence of each para. in IrkB begins ança: bili:ŋ (or bili:ŋler) 'know thus' (i.e. as follows, the omen is good or bad); ança: témi:ş 'this is what he said' Toyok III 2r. 4 and 11; v 2 (ETY II 179): Man. neçe yügürür erti ança kusar yarsıyor erti 'the more he ran the more he vomited (Hend.)' M I 7, 12–13; ınça (sic) sakıntı 'thus he thought' (i.e. as follows) do. 5, 1: Uyğ. VIII ff. D aŋçı: N.Ag. fr. 4 aŋ (3 eŋ) 'hunter'. Rare in Uyğ., but clearly so spelt. A l.-w. in Mong. as aŋçi (Kow. 18, also aŋğiçi; Haltod 4). It is not clear whether the same word in some NE languages and NC Kır., Kzx. is a survival or a reborrowing fr. Mong. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. keyikçi aŋçı tuzakçı boltumuz erser 'if we have been hunters of stags and wild game or trappers' U II 84, 9–10; TT IV 8, 56–7.

?F ançu: n.o.a.b., but cf. ançula:-; used only in the Hend. ögdir ançu which seems to mean 'gift' or 'reward'. In U III 92, in a note on 32, 16 it is suggested that it is the Chinese phr. an chu 'to live in peace' (Giles 44 2,527); the semantic connection is not convincing, but the word is prob. a Chinese l.-w. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. alı yarlıkazun teŋri baxşı nomlamış nom ertininiŋ ögdirin ançusın 'may the sacred preacher deign to receive a reward (or gift in return?) for the precious doctrine which he has preached' U III 32, 14–16; (go and kill the six-tusked elephant; if you do this) saŋa uluğ törlüg ögdir ançu bar 'there are various great rewards (or gifts?) for you' do. 56, 8–10.

1 inçü: n.o.a.b.; poorly attested in the early period, the only occurrences being in Uyğ. Civ. documents of which one certainly, and the other two probably, date from the Mong. period. There is, however, no good reason for supposing that this is a l.-w. The only early (XIII) Mong. word of comparable form is ince 'a maid-servant given to a bride at her marriage' (Haenisch 83, there connected with Chinese ying, same meaning (Giles 13,343)) which is no doubt the original form of inci 'dowry' (Kow. 280, Haltod 62). This latter is a Mong. l.-w. in various NE languages and NC Kır., Kzx. There is no real semantic connection between these Mong. words and inçü:, which at any rate in the medieval period had much the same meaning as English 'fief', that is 'a piece of land granted by a ruler on condition of the performance of certain services', and, by extension, 'the person(s) bound to perform such services'. Whether this was the original meaning it is hard to say. It has been plausibly suggested that this is the word which appears in the Staël-Holstein scroll, a Khotanese Saka document dated A.D. 925, in the forms 'ijüva and 'injü, meaning apparently 'the chief tribe in a confederation', that is the ruler's own tribe (see Asia Major, N.S., vol. II (1951), p. 17; vol. IV (1954), pp. 90 ff.). The original meaning may have been nearer to 'family or clan property', and in particular 'a chief's own property'. See Doerfer II 670. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (two landowners too old to work say) urluk inçülerdin inçü borlukka eḍlegüçi bir erklüg kişi bérsün 'let them give a responsible person from the family properties(?) to the family (?) vineyard to cultivate it' USp. 21, 3–4; in USp. 22 (mid-XIV) inçü bağçı 'a worker in the family(?) vineyards' occurs 10 times; inçü kılıkı bile inçü borlukçı kezikte barça barsun 'in accordance with the custom of the family estates(?) let all the vineyard workers on the family estates(?) go in turn' do. 25, 5–7: Çağ. XV ff. inçü 'a vassal (ṭapu adamı) who goes voluntarily to a beg, enters his service and works for him' Vel. 82 (quotn.); incü (spelt) ((1) 'pearl'); (2) mamlük 'servant, slave'; (3) amlāk wa raqbāt-i xāṣṣa-i dīwānī 'private lands and slaves belonging to the government' San. 117v. 15: Xwar. XIII inçi 'inheritance' 'Ali 47: Kıp. XV in a Golden Horde letter dated A.D. 1428 (they went off) öz éllerin ala 'retaining (only) their own realms', with éllerin glossed inçü 'fiefs' A. N. C? ançıp/ınçıp prob. a crasis of ança erip. Occurs always in isolation at the beginning of a sentence, normally meaning 'this being so', or 'so much for that', less often almost 'on the other hand, but' or used without any particular content to mark the beginning of a new para. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. IrkB, Postscript (alku:): Man. D aŋla:- Den. V. fr. 1 aŋ; 'to understand' with the same shades of meaning as the English word. The normal early word for 'to understand' was uk-, and aŋla:- was very rare, which perhaps explains why Kaş. thought it was specifically Oğuz. S.i.a.m.l.g. often much distorted, e.g. NE oŋna-, etc. (Türkü VIII the word aŋlar read at the end of T 34 (see añığ) in Radlov's edition is a figment, the photograph in Aalto's edition shows no sign of it): Uyğ. VIII ff. ?E iŋle- Hap. leg.; Pelliot read this word in the text below and translated it 'to bend', connecting it with 2 eŋ- (eğ-) which is morphologically impossible; it is no doubt a mistranscription of irkle:- q.v. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. 1 er- 'to be' (something, somewhere, etc.), necessarily accompanied by a Predicate; it cannot be used by itself to mean 'to exist' (for which see ba:r), but is often used as an Aux. V. after Participles, etc. of other verbs. In the earliest period it was conjugated completely, but the -r- began to be elided fairly early, and after that the tenses formed by attaching suffixes with initial vowels became obsolete and were replaced by the corresponding tenses of bol-/ol- in some languages and 1 tur- in others. However, some tenses, usually without the -r-, s.i.a.m.l.g. The unusual very early Gerunds(?) erki, erken, erinç are listed separately. Türkü VIII; VIII ff including Man. and Yen. er-, 'to be', and as Aux. 2 ér- 'to reach, arrive; to meet(?)'. This verb is well established in several medieval languages and survives in SW Osm., but in the early period is so overshadowed by 1 er- that it is difficult to identify, particularly since its Perf. can hardly be distinguished from that of ert-. In the early period there is a phr. er-bar- which seems to mean 'to behave in an independent, insubordinate fashion', and can hardly be an idiom of 1 er-. In this sense it may be the basis of erk, q.v.; the same meaning seems to survive in NW Nog. erüv (a Nog. Infin. form) 'freedom, liberty', and NW Kk. er- 'to follow; to meet; to amuse oneself' is also connected. See 1 értür-, 1 ériş-. Dis. ARA ara: (?a:ra:) difficult to pin down grammatically; there does not seem to be any record of it as the subject of a sentence or in other contexts in which it could be regarded as an ordinary Noun. In the early period it is used only as a Postposn. meaning 'between (two places), among (a number of people)', and the like; but Kaş. translates it as a Noun and does not describe it as a ḥarf. Later it seems to be used almost only in the Loc., either with a preceding Pron. Adj., e.g. bu arada 'in this locality', or with a Poss. Suff. e.g. aramızda 'among us' or with a 3rd Pers. Poss. Suff. and a preceding Noun, e.g. oşbu yaruknuŋ arasında 'in the middle of this light'. Normally used of space, less often of time. S.i.a.m.l.g. The spelling a:ra: in IrkB and TT VIII (SW Tkm. a:ra) is prob. the original one. Türkü VIII (when the blue heaven was created above and the brown earth below, man was created) eki:n ara: 'between the two' I E 1, E II 2; similar phr. I E 2, II E 4; Ongin 10; (then to the north of the Chinese) Tağ(?) VU arra (sic) Hap. leg.; onomatopoeic. Xak. XI arra al-bawl 'urine'; an Excl. (ḥarf) addressed to a donkey to encourage it to urinate; it is repeated two or three times and (the donkey) urinates. This agrees (wāfaqat) with Ar. because al-arr means 'copulation' (al--cimā') in Ar. Kaş. I 38.

arı: a large stinging insect, 'bee, wasp, hornet'. NE Tuv. irbiş prob. preserves the original pronunciation, but it might have been irpiş. All the early occurrences are in Uyğ. where the alphabet is so ambiguous that the final sound is not quite certain; it was certainly not -s and both -ç and -z are improbable. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. irbiş is included in lists of savage beasts with 'lion, leopard', etc. in TT VI 116; Suv. 331, 23; 599, 16; 610, 13; irbiş kuḍruğı translates Chinese pao wei 'panther's tail' (Giles 8,697 12,601), the name of a constellation TT VI 93; in U IV 44, 6 and 11 apparently spelt irbiç.

Dis. V. ARB-arva:- 'to make magic, cast spells'. Survives, generally as arba- in some NE languages; SE Türki; NC Kır., Kzx., and as avra- in SC Uzb. Xak. XI ka:m arvış (later misvocalized arvaş in the MS.) arva:dı: raqā'l- kāhin ruqya 'the sorcerer cast a spell' Kaş. I 283 (arva:r, arva:ma:k): Çağ. XV ff. arba- afsūn kardan 'to make magic' San. 34v. 23.

érpe:- Hap. leg., but see érpet-, érpel-. Xak. XI ol yığa:ç érpe:dı: 'he sawed (naşara) the wood' (etc.); and one says ol ı:şığ érpe:dı: afsada'l-amr li-mā arāda iṣlāḥahu 'he spoilt the business in trying to improve it' Kaş. I 271 (érpe:r, érpe:me:k).

?D ürpe:- 'to be shaggy, dishevelled', and the like, is not actually noted but must be the basis of ürpek, ürpet-, ürpeş-; its relationship to the practically synonymous ürper- is obscure, but the likeliest explanation is that both are Den. V.s in -e:- and -er- respectively fr. ürp. The modern forms ürpey- and the like which survive in NC Kır., Kzx. and NW Kar. T., Kk., and Nog. seem to go back to ürpe:- rather than ürper-.

D érpet- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of érpe:-. Xak. XI ol yığa:ç érpetti: 'he gave orders for the wood (etc.) to be sawn with a saw' (bi-naşri'l-xaşab wa ğayrihi bi'l minşār) Kaş. I 260 (érpetür, érpetme:k).

D ürpet- Caus. f. of ürpe:-; 'to make (the hair, etc.) dishevelled'. Survives as ürpeyt- and the like in the languages listed under ürpe:-. Xak. XI er başın ürpetti: 'the man ruffled (ṣa"aṯa) his head (etc.)' Kaş. I 259 (ürpetür, ürpetme:k; MS in error -ma:k).

D arval- Hap. leg.; Pass. f. of arva:-. Xak. XI arvış arvaldı: ruqiyati'l-ruqya 'the spell was cast' Kaş. I 249 (arvalur, arvalma:k; arvış mis-spelt arkış).

D érpel- Pass. f. of érpe:-; n.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (in a fragmentary text) kında: pa:rmış erpe:lkülüg (sic) 'having gone to the torture he will be sawn' *TT VIII G.*61: Xak. XI yığa:ç érpeldi: 'the wood was sawn with a saw' (nuşira . . . bi'l-minşār); and in the prov. aŋa:key (so spelt, but obviously corrupt, perhaps read oŋa:rıp) érpeldi: ı:ş urida'l-amr bi'l-iṣlaḥ fa-nuşira ya'nī ufsida 'it was wished to improve the business but it was sawn, that is spoilt' Kaş. I 244 (érpelür, érpelme:k).

?D ürper- 'to bristle, stand on end', of hair, and the like; perhaps Intrans. Den. V. fr. ürp, cf. ürpe:-. Survives only(?) in SW Az., Osm. Xak. XI er ürperdi: tanaffasa'l-racul wa'zba'arra mina'l- ğaḍab aw li'l-qitāl 'the man panted and bristled with anger or in a fight'; and one says taka:ğu: ürperdi: taqazza'a'l--dīk li'l-qitāl 'the cock fluffed out its feathers for a fight'; and one says anıŋ yı:nı: ürperdi: iqṣa'arra cilduhu 'his skin had gooseflesh' Kaş. I 217 (ürperür, ürperme:k): Osm. XVIII ürper- (spelt) rūyīdan-i sabza 'of a plant, to sprout'; and metaph. rāst şudan-i mūy-i andām wa damidan-i xaṭṭ-i naw xaṭṭān 'of the hairs of the body to stand on end, and of a young beard, to sprout' San. 70v. 17.

D arvaş- Co-op. f. of arva:-; 'to say spells together'. S.i.s.m.l. like arva:-. Xak. XI ka:mla:r kamuğ arvaşdı: haynamati'l--kahana bi-kalām 'the sorcerers (all) mumbled (certain) words'; also used when they cast spells for ulcers (raqaw min sa'fa) and the like Kaş. I 236 (arvaşur, arvaşma:k).

D ürpeş- Co-op. f. of ürpe:- survives only(?) in NC Kzx. Xak. XI eren ürpeşti: taşa"aba'l-abṭāl wa'zba'arrū ğaḍaba(n) 'the warriors bristled (Hend.) with rage'; also used of other people Kaş. I 229 (ürpeşü:r, ürpeşme:k; verse).

1 ert- normally Intrans., 'to pass' in all the usual meanings of that English word e.g. (of time) 'to pass'; (of an illness) 'to pass off'; (of physical movement) 'to pass' (from one place to another); occasionally Trans. 'to pass' (e.g. a place); in a few passages in Uyğ. Bud. it is a Trans. with 'sin' or the like as Object, and in this case seems to mean 'to commit persistently' (the conclusion in TT IV 14, note A.11 that this must be a different verb is improbable). Survives only(?) in most NE languages. Türkü VIII (I mobilized the army of the On Ok; we, too, took the field and) anı: ert(t)imiz 'went past them' . . . VUD 2 ért- in Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Hüen-ts. 1981 the Chinese phr. fa chiang (Giles 3,366 1,212) lit. 'dharma general' i.e. 'a monk of outstanding character' is translated nom értgüsi 'leader(?) of the doctrine', chiang being taken as a verb 'to lead'. If this is so, ért- seems to be the Caus. f. of 2 ér- and presumably survives in NC Kzx. ért- 'to take (someone) with one, allow (him) to follow one' R I 790; MM 144.

örт- 'to cover, conceal (something Acc.)'. Survives in NW Kaz. and SW Az., Osm., Tkm. Uyğ. VIII ff. ordu:, ortu: Preliminary note. This is one of the few cases in which two words semantically different are, at any rate in Türkü and Xak., differentiated phonetically only by the difference between -rd- and -rt-; in Uyğ., owing to the ambiguity of the script, only the context can decide which word is intended. The second is spelt* orto in T'T VIII, and the fact that in most modern languages both words now end in -a suggests that originally both ended in -o:. It is prob. that the words, entered as 1 and 2 ordu:, have a common origin, but as they had developed quite different meanings by XI they have been entered separately; -rd- is an unusual combination of sounds in Türkü and suggests that this is a l.-w., cf. 2 karşı:.

1 ordu: (ordo:) originally 'a royal residence', that is 'palace' or 'royal camp' as the circumstances demanded; in the religious (Bud. and Man.) texts also 'a heavenly mansion'. An early l.-w. for 'palace, royal camp' as ordo in Mong. (Haenisch 125). Survives in NE Tuv. ordu; SE Türki orda Shaw 20, BŞ 761, Jarring 215 (with Sec. f.s); NC Kır. ordo; Kzx. orda; SC Uzb. ürda; NW Kk., Nog. orda; SW Az., Osm. ordu, Tkm. orda. In SW Az., Osm. it came to mean 'a royal camp', thence any 'military camp' and finally, in military terminology, the largest type of military formation, 'army'. Elsewhere it retained its original meaning, but there are indications that in some languages it was reborrowed fr. Mong. See Doerfer II 452. Türkü VIII Oğuz yağı: ordu:ğ basdı: 'hostile Oğuz attacked the royal camp' I N 8; ordu:ğ bérmedi: 'he did not surrender the royal camp' I N 9: VIII ff. xan olu:rıpan ordu: yapmı:ş 'the xan came to the throne and erected a royal residence' IrkB 28; a.o. do. 34: Man. iki yaruk ordu içre 'in the two palaces of light' Chuas. 15: Uyğ. (VIII ordu: in *Şu. artuç (?arduç) a generic term for 'the juniper tree'. In modern languages largely displaced by the syn. Mong. word arça (Kow. 161, Haltod 33) but survives in NE Tel. artış R I 314; Tuv. ditto; S.E Türki ardaç BŞ 30; SC Khokand artış Shaw 5: NW Kar.K ardıc R I 323; Kaz. artış; SW Az., Osm. ardıc/ardıç. See Doerfer II 448. Uyğ. VIII ff. D artuk (?artok) Pass. N./A.S. fr. 2 art-; originally 'additional, an extra amount'; in the earliest texts used chiefly in numerical expressions; later usually 'a large additional amount', less often 'excess, excessive'. S.i.a.m.l.g. as artuk in SE and sometimes SC and artık elsewhere, with some extended meanings esp. in SW. The theory in TT V 33, note B. 71 that in a number of passages in Uyğ. Bud. the word read aḍruk is a metathesis of artuk is not at all plausible. Türkü VIII kırk artukı: yeti: 'forty-seven' (normally yeti: ellig) I E 15; artuk yılkı:ğ içit(t)i: 'he fed more livestock' Ix. 25; ay artukı: tört kün 'a month and four days' II SW; o.o. I E 33 (ur-); T 40 (1 u:ç): VIII ff. D ortuk (ortok) apparently Den. N. fr. ortu:, but the function of the Suff., normally Diminutive, is obscure; 'partner'. Became ortak at a fairly early date (the MS. of Kaş. where the scribe tended to substitute the later form must have been written during the transitional period). S.i.a.m.l.g., ortok in NE Alt., Tel. R I 1071; NC Kır. and ortak elsewhere. See Doerfer II 446. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. ortuk seems to occur in two damaged and obscure texts; in USp. 55, 26–7 Memet Moŋğol çın ötekçi bile ortuk altı şık yér might mean 'six şık of land held in common with Mehmed Moŋğol the true debtor' (the last two words might be another Proper Name); in USp. 30, 7 ortakı looks like a N./A.S. in -kı 'situated in the middle', but ortuk in 30, 12 seems to be this word, meaning obscure: Xak. XI ortuk al-şarīk 'a partner' *Kaş. 'partner' in two texts TTS II 735; IV 612.

D ertig Hap. leg.; Conc. N. fr. 1 ert-; lit. 'something over which one passes'. Xak. XI ertig al-ṭarīqu'l-maslūk 'a beaten track' Kaş. I 103.

?D örḍek a generic term for 'duck', particular varieties being distinguished by qualifying Adjs. or Nouns. Exceptionally Kaş. consistently translates örḍek 'goose' and ka:z 'duck', but this must be an error. Morphologically perhaps Dev. N. fr. 1 ö:r- (the bird) 'which rises' (from the water). The metathesized form in Suv. (of which the MS. is XVIII) must be a Sec. f.; it survives as ödürek in NE Tuv. and the eccentric forms in Xwar. and Kıp. may also go back to it. S.i.a.m.l.g., normally as örḍek and the like. See Doerfer II 450. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (oxen, sheep, swine) kaz ödirek takığu 'geese, ducks, and poultry' Suv. 4, 12: XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict. 'duck' örḍek Ligeti 190: Xak. XI örḍek al-iwazz 'goose' *Kaş. D örtüg Conc. N. fr. ört-; originally 'covering' in general (Uyğ. Man. 'covered' may be the Pass. Dev. N./A. in -ük, 'covered' not otherwise recorded); in modern languages usually more specifically 'head-covering, veil'.

Survives in SE Tar. örtü: R I 1236; NC Kır. ürtük; SC Uzb. urtuk Bor. 480 (described as 'literary', ?mistranscribed): SW Az., Osm. örtü; Tkm. örtük. Uyğ. VIII ff. D örtgü:n Conc. N. fr. ört-; etymologically 'something covered', in practice 'haystack' and the like. Survives only in NE Şor R I 1842 and Khak. ürtün 'threshing-floor'. The status of the Kıp. word is uncertain; it may belong here, but Mong. inder 'balcony, raised platform' (Kow. 279, Haltod 62) was borrowed, as indir/ındır) in some NW languages to represent 'threshing-floor' and is listed in Kom. XIV Gr. 273; it survives in NW Kar. R I 1364, Kow. 194 and in SW XX Anat. SDD 771 (from one place only); the Kıp. word might be a metathesis of this. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. in a contract for the sale of land USp. 108, 18–20 the boundaries are described as: E. Burxan kulınıŋ örtgün; S. 'the big road'; W. 'Taŋut's land'; N. Buyançuknuŋ örtgün; it must here mean 'stackyard' or the like: Xak. XI örtgü:n al-şubra 'a heap (of cut corn and the like)' *Kaş. D örtlüg P.N./A. fr. ört; 'blazing, flaming'. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. avış tamudakı örtlüg yalınlığ yérde 'in a blazing (Hend.) place situated in the avici hell' TT IV 10, 25–6; örtlög (sic) tamu:da:kı 'situated in the blazing hell' *TT VIII N.*12: Xwar. XIII örtlü 'fiery' 'Ali 46: Kom. XIV 'flaming (hell)' örtli/örtlik CCG; Gr. 184 (quotns.).

D erdem Den. N. fr. 1 er; etymologically 'manly qualities', esp. 'bravery', but more commonly used in a broader sense for 'goodness, virtue, good qualities' and sometimes applied to things as well as people. In Uyğ. sometimes appears metathesized as edrem. An early loan-word in Mong. where it was originally used for 'competence, efficiency, capability' (Haenisch 44) and later also for 'wisdom, knowledge' (Kow. 260, Haltod 60). NE Tuv. ertem 'knowledge, science' Pal. 587 is no doubt reborrowed fr. Mong., but SW XX Anat. erdem/erden 'virtue, excellence' SDD 542 is a direct survival. See Doerfer II 451. Türkü VIII alpı: erdemi: 'his bravery and manliness' Ix. 4; o.o. do. 7 and 12: VIII ff. erde:m occurs several times in the Toyok doct. (ETY II 57–9) as a technical term for 'the magical quality, virtue' of a precious stone: Yen. phr. like erdem üçün and er erdem üçün 'because of his manly qualities' are common Mal. 29, 4 and 7 etc.: Uyğ. VIII ff. D ertür-, etc. Preliminary note. As in the case of artur-, verbs of this form may be Caus. f.s of 1 er-, 2 ér- or 1 or 2 ert-, but all early forms seem to be explicable as Caus. f.s of 2 ér-, which is rare, or 1 ert- which is not much commoner.

D 1 értür- Caus. f. of 2 ér-; 'to cause to arrive, bring to a successful conclusion' and the like. Survives only(?) in SW Osm. erdir-. Türkü VIII tokuz:nç ay yéti: otuzka: yoğ ertü:r-timiz 'we brought the funeral ceremonies to a conclusion on the 27th of the 9th month' I NE; similar phr. II S 10; a.o. I E 40 (ükün:-).

D 2 ertür- Caus. f. of 1 ert-; 'to cause to pass, pass by', etc. with various extended meanings. Survives as erttir-/érttir- in most NE languages R I 793, Khak., Tuv., and perhaps NC Kzx. (R I 793, not MM). Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. [gap] ertürür erdimiz 'we have passed (our lives?)' U III 16, 2; üç yavlak yoldın ertürgeli umaknıŋ (a cause) 'of being able to pass by (i.e. avoid) the three evil roads' TT V 22, 32; ertürmezün 'let (Śilabhadra) not allow (Hüen-tsang) to pass (us) by' Hüen-ts. 309: Civ. ertürmiş ke:re:k 'one must pass (the time)' TT VIII I.18: Xak. XI anıŋ ya:zukın ertürdi: 'he pardoned (ṣafaḥa 'an) his sins'; and one says anıŋ ı:şın ertürdi: 'he authorized (acāza) his affair, that is he agreed to it (qabilahu)'; also used of anyone who overlooks something (cāwaza ṣay' 'an mawḍi') Kaş. I 220 (ertürür, ertürme:k); a.o.(?) I 219 (artur-).

D urtur- Caus. f. of ur-; with a corresponding range of meanings. Survives as urdur- in NE Khak.; NC Kır.; SC Uzb. (urdır-), some NW languages and SW Tkm. and vurdur- in SW Az., Osm. Türkü VIII içi:n taşı:n aḍınçığ beḍiz urtu:rtım 'I have various decorations placed inside and outside' (Kül Tégin's tomb) I S 12: Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. beḍük kaŋlılarda . . . urturup 'having them placed on large waggons' U III 40, 28–9: (Xak.) XIII(?) Tef. urdır-/urdur- 'to order to put (something Acc., into something Dat.)' 331: XIV Rbġ. urdur- 'to let oneself be beaten' (with something birle) R I 1672(quotn.): Çağ. XV ff. urdur- ('with u-') maḍrub sāxtan 'to cause to be beaten' San. 67v. 22: Xwar. XIV urdur- 'to order to put (something Acc., on something üze)' Qutb 199: Osm. XV urdur- 'to order that (a country Acc.) should be attacked' in one text TTS III 710.

D örtür- Hap. leg.(?); Caus. f. of 1 ö:r-; 'to grow (a plant, etc. Acc.)'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A M I 14, 10–11 (1:).

D artaş- Co-op. f. of arta:-. Survives only (?) in NE Sag., Tel. ardaş-/artaş- 'to fall out with one another' R I 309, 322. Xak. XI yalŋuk için artaşdı: fasada'l-nās ba'ḍuhum bi-ru'ya ba'ḍ 'some of the people became corrupt in the view of the others(?)'; also used of a number of things (kull şay' kaṯīr) when some of them become corrupt among the rest Kaş. I 230 (artaşu:r, artaşma:k); ışı: anıŋ artaşıp fasada amruhu 'his affairs deteriorated' II 219, 4.

D artış- (ardış-) Co-op. f. of 1 art- (ard-); 'to help (someone Dat.) to load (something Acc.)', and the like. S.i.s.m.l. Xağ. XI ol maŋa: arçı: artışdı: 'he helped me to load (a'ānani 'ala ilqā' . . . wa ḥamlihi) the saddle-bag on the baggage animal'; also used for 'to compete' Kaş. I 231 (artışur, artışma:k).

D ertiş- Recip., etc. f. of 1 ert-. Survives only(?) in NE Khak. Bas. 63. Xak. XI ol meniŋ birle: arsla:ndan ertişdi: 'he competed with me in getting past (fī'l-mucāwaza) the lion', or anything else that is feared Kaş. I 231 (ertişü:r, ertişme:k); in the para. on the river Ertiş, I 97, it is said that the name is taken from the word ertiş meaning bārinī fī'l-mu'ābara 'compete with me in crossing', no doubt a false etymology.

D irteş- Co-op. f. of irte:-; n.o.a.b.; SW xx Anat. irteş- 'to quarrel, push one another about' is a Sec. f. of örteş-. Xak. xi ola:r bu: sözüg irteştil:le:r tafaḥḥaṣū hādā'l-kalām 'they scrutinized this statement', or affair, or something else *Kaş. S 3 arkun See akru:.

arka:r prob. always 'the mountain sheep, Ovis argali', although the Ar. words used by Kaş. normally mean 'mountain goat, chamois' (it is likely that the animal was exotic to Arabs and had no specific name in Ar.). S.i.s.m.l., see Shcherbak, p. 117, usually as a generic term without indication of sex. The Mong. synonym arğali is perhaps a l.-w. fr. this word. Uyğ. VIII arkar başı: tuşında: prob. 'opposite (the place called) Arkar başı:' Şu. S 1: Xak. XI arka:r 'al-urwīya, the female of al-wu'ūl'; its horns are made into knife-handles Kaş. I 117; o.o. I 214, 17 (sukak); 421, 17 (translated al-wa'l): Çağ. XV ff. arkar-ı ğalça 'the wild (Pe. l.-w.) mountain sheep is mentioned twice in Babur (Gibb Memorial facsimile, 141 v. 13; 276v. 10); alkar (sic) qūç-i kūhī 'mountain ram' San. 50r. 20.

D arkış Dev. N. fr. 1 arka:-; 'a person or group of persons travelling for commercial or official purposes', hence both 'travelling merchants, caravan', and 'official envoys, mission'; it is not always easy to see which is meant and merchants were often used as official envoys.

Survives in NE several dialects arğış/arğıs R I 300–1; Khak. arğıs 'travelling companion'; NC Kzx. arkıs ditto R I 293 (not in MM); SW xx Anat. Dis. V. ARĞ-

1 arka:- 'to search, investigate', etc. N.o.a.h., but no doubt the earlier form of the synonymous SW Osm., Tkm. word ara-, which is not traceable earlier than San. 34r. 18 where it is treated as a Çağ. word translated miyān-i çīzi-rā tafaḥḥuṣ kardan 'to make an investigation into something', but illustrated only by a Rūmī quotn. (Xak.) XIII(?) At. seniŋ birlikiŋke dalīl arkağan 'anyone who seeks a proof of Thy uniqueness' 7; (the Prophet) bilig Çinde erse siz arkaŋ tédi 'said seek knowledge (even) if it is in China' 104: Oğuz XI ol anıŋ evin arka:dı: baḥaṯa mā fī baytihi wa ṭalabahu wa faḥaṣa mā ẓanna fīhi 'he enquired what was in his house and searched it and investigated what he thought was in it' Kaş. I 283 (2 arka:- follows).

2 arka:- a rhyming jingle not used in isolation; n.o.a.b. Xak. XI (after 1 arka:- in the same para.), and one says ol anı: karğa:dı: arka:dı: la'anahu wa ḏakara masā'atahu 'he cursed him and spoke of his wickedness'; used as a Hend. (muzdawica(n)) and not by itself; taken from their word for 'praise' (al-ṯanā') alkış; since it was used frequently in a Hend. alka:- also acquired a pejorative meaning (cu'ila fī'l-şarr); and since it was originally laudatory the -r- was substituted for -l-, as malşūş became marşūş in Ar. Kaş. I 284 (arka:r, arka:ma:k; the theory, though prima facie improbable may be correct, see karğan-).

ırğa:- 'to shake, or rock (something Acc.)'; survives only(?) in NC Kır., Kzx.; it also existed earlier in SW Osm. but has there been displaced by the Freq. f.(?) ırğala-. It is difficult to connect this verb semantically with ırğa:ğ, but there is a NE Tuv. verb ırğay- 'to be crooked' Pal. 570, and this suggests that there was originally a second verb ırğa:- with this meaning. Xak. XI ol yığa:ç ırğa:dı: hazza'l-şacara wa nafaḍahā li-yasquṭ ṯamaruhu 'he shook (Hend.) the tree so that the fruit should fall'; also used of other things Kaş. I 283 (ırğa:r, ırğa:ma:k); o.o. translated nafaḍa III 316, 15; 321, 16: XIII(?) Tef. ırğa- 'to shake' (a tree) 129: (Xwar. XIV ırğa-/yırğa- Quth 91, 206, and Kom. XIV yırğa- CCG; Gr. 133 both meaning 'to enjoy oneself' have no connection with this verb but are Sec. f. of a l.-w. fr. Mong. cirğa- (Haenisch 90) same meaning): Kıp. XIV ıra:- ḥarraka fī'l-mahd wa mā nāsabahu 'to rock in a cradle' and the like, also pronounced ırğa:-, which also means hazza Id. 11: Osm. XIV to XVI ırğa- 'to shake (something)' in a few texts TTS I 353; IV 394.

D ırğat- Caus. f. of ırğa:-; properly 'to order (something) to be shaken', but from a fairly early date used in the same meaning as, and in place of, ırğa:-. S.i.s.m.l. w. some phonetic changes like NC Kzx. ırıt-. Xak. XI ol yığa:ç ırğattı: anfaḍa'l-şacara wa ğayrahā 'he had the tree (etc.) shaken' Kaş. I 263 (verse; no Aor. or Infin.): XIII(?) Tef. ırğat- 'to shake (someone)' 129: Çağ. XV ff. ırğat- cunbānidan 'to shake, move (something)' San. 98r. 17 (quotn.).

D ırğal- Pass. f. of ırğa:-; 'to be shaken, to sway', and the like. Survives only(?) in NC Kır., Kzx. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. 1 ığaçlar ırğalur 'the bushes and trees sway' Suv. 621, 5: Civ. artuç sögüt butıkı yüz törlüğin ırğalur 'the stem of the juniper tree sways in every direction' TT I 165–6: Xak. XI yığa:ç ırğaldı: 'the tree was shaken' (nufiḍa); also used of anything that is shaken (huzza) Kaş. I 249 (ırğalur, ırğalma:k): Kom. 'to be shaken, to sway' ırğal- CCG; Gr.

D ırkla:- Den. V. fr. ırk; 'to cast lots, consult the omens'. Survives only(?) in SW Anat. ırıkla- SDD 773. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. TT VII 28, 6 (ırü:) a.o.o. in this text: Xak. XI ka:m ırkla:dı: takahhana'l-kāhin mutafa'ila(n) fī şay' 'the magician made magic consulting the omens about something' Kaş. III 443 (ırkla:r, ırkla:ma:k).

D ırğan- Refl. f. of ırğa:-; 'to shake, sway, rock', etc. (Intrans.). The commonest member of the group, s.i.a.m.l.g. Xak. XI yığa:ç ırğandı: ihtazzati'l-şacara wa ṭaḥarrakat 'the tree (etc.) shook and rocked' Kaş. I 254 (ırğanu:r, ırğanma:k): Çağ. XV ff. ırğan-(-ıp) ırğala- Vel. 54; ırğan- Refl. V., cunbīdan

'to move, stir' San. 98v. 2: Xwar. XIV ırğan- 'to shake' Quth 206: Kıp. XV inhazza ırğan- Tuh. 6b. 5: Osm. XIV ff. ırğan- (in XVI ığran-, ırkan-, ıran- also occur) 'to move, sway'; c.i.a.p. TTS I 353; II 500; III 344; IV 395.

D arğur- Caus. f. of 1 a:r-; 'to tire (someone) out'. Pec. to Kaş. Xak. XI ol atın arğurdı: a'yā farasahu 'he tired his horse out' Kaş. I 225 (verse; arğurur, arğurma:k, sic, not -ğar-, in MS.); a.o. I 486, 14.

D arğurt- Hap. leg.; mentioned only as example of a Caus. f. of a Caus. f.; cf. arğurtur- Xak. XI anıŋ atın arğurttı: ḥamala'l--insān 'alā i'yā' farasihi 'he urged the man to tire his horse out' Kaş. I 229, 13; n.m.e.

D arkaş- wholly irregular Co-op. Den. V. fr. arka:; survives only(?) in NE Tuv. arğaş- 'to lift something heavy together'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Sanskrit hastasaṃlagnikayā 'by the act of clasping someone closely' arka:şma:k üze: *TT VIII C.*11: Xak. XI ol anıŋ birle: yük arkaştı: ḥamala ma'ahu'l-ḥiml muzāḥarata(n), wa huwa an yac'al kull wāḥid minhumā ẓahralu li-ṣāḥibihi 'he carried the burden on his back with him, that is each of them made a back for the other' *Kaş. D ırğaş- Co-op. f. of ırğa:-; 'to shake (something) together'. Survives only(?) in NC Kır. Xak. XI ol meniŋ birle: yığa:ç ırğaştı: 'he shook (nāfaḍa) the tree in co-operation or competition with me' Kaş. III 322, 1; a grammatical example, n.m.e.

Tris. ARĞ

PUD arkuçı: Hap. leg.; listed between umduçı: and erdini: which excludes the possibility that it is an error for arkışçı: a word which might be expected in this sense; it seems rather to be connected with arğu:la:-, and is presumably a N.Ag. fr. arku: (or arğu:, but not the arğu: listed above) which seems to be also the basis of arkuru: Xak. XI arkuçı: 'an intermediary (al-mutawassiṭ) between two people, and the messenger (al--rasūl) between the relatives of the two parties to a prospective marriage' *Kaş. The occurrences in Uyğ. have been much misunderstood; sometimes it has been taken as a Sec. f. of ürüŋ and translated 'serene', which is not the meaning of either word (see e.g. TT V p. 28, note B.1) and sometimes transcribed ürük, taken as derived fr. 1 ür and translated 'everlasting' (see e.g. Index to USp.). Uyğ. VIII ff. D erki: an Adv. discussed in v. G. ATG para. 359 and Hüen-ts. Biog., p. 21, note 62; in spite of the contrary opinion expressed therein, it seems, except on the rarest possible occasions, to be used only at the end of questions to indicate that a categorical answer is not expected; the best translation is, therefore, a periphrasis like 'do you suppose that . . .' or 'is it likely that . . .'. Like erken and 1 erinç it seems to be a Dev. form fr. 1 er- dating back to a time when the verbal Suffs. were rather different fr. those in VIII and later. Survives only(?) in NE Tuv. irgi 'a particle used in questions to make them more polite'. Uyğ. VIII ff. érkek 'male, masculine', in antithesis to tişi: 'female', a generic term applied to men and animals; said in v. G. ATG, para. 59, to be an Intensive form in -kek of 1 er, but this is certainly wrong since the initial is é-, not e-, and there is no adequate evidence of the existence of a suffix -kek (as well as -gek, which is not an Intensive). S.i.a.m.l.g., usually as érkek/irkek. Türkü VIII ff. érkek buza:ğu: 'bull calf' IrkB 41; a.o. do. 24 (emig): Uyğ. VIII ff. D erklig P.N./A. fr. erk; both 'possessing power or authority' and 'possessing free-will or independence, free to do as one likes'. The two meanings are very close together, and it is often difficult to decide which is intended; when applied to God prob. both are, and 'mighty' is the best translation, though it does not give the whole meaning. Survives in NC Kır. erktü:; Kzx. érikti, irikti, and NW Kar. L., T. erkli; Kaz. irikli. The phr. erklig xan was early adopted as the title of 'the ruler of the underworld'; it was borrowed by Mong. as erlik kağan and this phr. has been reborrowed by some NE languages. Türkü VIII üze: teŋri: erklig (gap) 'Heaven is mighty above' *Ix. S ergen See erŋen.

D erken like erki: (q.v.) and 1 erinç an archaic Dev. form fr. 1 er-; originally used after verbs in the Aor. f. to mean 'while', later used rather more freely to mean 'while being', see v. G. ATG, para. 437. Survives in NE Tuv. ergin 'a particle used to give a flavour of indefiniteness to a statement' (perhaps a Sec. f. of erki:) and as eken/iken, etc. 'while being' in most other language groups. Türkü VIII ff. (s.v. 1 er-): Çağ. XV ff. both authorities list érken, érkin, éken, and ékin, usually without cross-refces., and stating that they are all synonymous; but the examples show that érkin/ékin has a different meaning and is a Sec. f. of erki:; érkin ('with -k') is used with another word, e.g. bolmadı erkin olmadımı 'was it not?' (quotn.); érken ('with -k-' has the same meaning (quotn. containing érkenni 'his being') Vel. 49; éken ('with -g-', sic in error) usually used with another word, e.g. fulān éken fulān iken or idügi 'being so-and-so' (quotns.); ékin ('with -k-') usually used with another word, e.g. bu érdi ékin bu idi (quotns.) do. 64; érken (spelt) hast 'is' (quotn. containing tilbe érkén dür 'is mad'); also spelt érkin (quotn. ne érkin said to mean both 'what is?' and 'what liberty of action?') also a lafẓ-i zā'id 'supplementary word' used dar rawābiṭ 'in compound expressions' (quotn.) San. 99v. 28 (several oblique cases of érken follow); éken (spelt) same translation as érken (quotn.), also spelt ékin San. 108v. 19 (several oblique cases follow); ékin (spelt) inter alia; (2) abbreviation of érkin az cumla-i rawābiṭ meaning hast (quotn.); (3) a supplementary word used as an ornament in compound expressions (quotns.) do. 109r. 28: Xwar. XIII érken/éken 'while' 'Ali 37.

D 1 irkin Intrans. Dev. N./A. fr. irk-; 'collected together in one place' and the like. Survives in SW XX Anat. irkin (and irkim) 'a hoard, buried treasure' SDD 796, and also perhaps Osm. ürkün 'a pool of rain water' and the like. Xak. XI irkin su:v al-mā'u'l-mustanqa' 'stagnant water'; also used of anything collected together (muctami'); hence the chiefs (akābir) of the Karluk are called kö:l irkin meaning that 'his intellect is concentrated like a full pool' ('aqluhu muctami' ka'l-ğadīri'l-mumtali') (see 2 irkin): irkin yağmur al-maṭaru'l-dā'im ayyām 'continuous rain for several days' Kaş. I 108.

2 irkin a title borne by tribal chiefs, inferior to xağan but superior to beg, cf. elteber, 1 çoːr. In addition to the occurrences in Turkish below, the word often occurs in Chinese records transcribed i-kin (sometimes mis-spelt ssü-kin owing to confusion between two similar Chinese characters). The subject is discussed at length by F. W. K. Müller in 'Uigurische Glossen' in the Festschrift für Friedrich Hirth, Berlin, 1920, pp. 317 ff. where it is stated that the title Kül Erkin (sic) also occurs in Raşīdu'l-dīn and Abū'l-ğāzī, but in the Russian translation of the former, Rashid-ad-din. Sbornik letopisei, Moscow–Leningrad, 1952 ff., vol. I, p. 147, the spelling is Kül Irkin. Kaş.'s etymology is unconvincing; it is almost certain that the title 2 kül, q.v., is not identical with kö:l; this word, too, is prob. merely a title, but if it is der. fr. irk- the meaning is prob. something like 'convener'. Türkü VIII anta: késre: yer(?) bayırku: uluğ irkin yağı: bolt: 'after that the paramount irkin of the Yer (reading uncertain) Bayırku: became hostile' I E 34; [? ulu]ğ elteber özi: kelti: sir(?) irkin oğlı: Yigen Çor kelti: 'the great(?) Elteber (of . . .) came himself; Yigen (or Yégen?) Çor the son of the Sir(?) Irkin came' Ix. 21 (it is possible that the word before Bayırku: in the first quotn. which is damaged on the stone and the word before Irkin in the second are identical and may be sir, q.v.): (Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. the words İrkent irkini in USp. 22, 8–9 are transcribed as two P.N.s İrkenür İrkey in Arat's revised text, prob. correctly): Xak. XI Kaş. I 108 (1 irkin): KB in the list of ranks and official titles in 4065 ff. which is partly corrupt in all MSS. 4068b. prob. reads kayusi kül irkin 'some become kül irkin'; negü tér eşitgil Ila irkini (so read) 'hear what the irkin of Ila says' 4752.

D örgen Conc. N. fr. 2 ö:r-; 'plaited rope, cord', and the like. Survives, sometimes with slightly different meanings, in NE Küer. örgöŋ (sic) R I 1230; NW Kar. L. The word is syn. w. 1 uruk, the two words are quite unconnected but some medieval and modern words like urğan in Xwar. XIII 'Ali 56 and SW Osm., Tkm. and perhaps arğan/arkan in SE Türki, NC Kır., Kzx., etc. seem to lie squarely between the two. Oğuz (sic?) XI örgen al-nis' 'the thong of a camel's girth' *Kaş. VU (?D) örge:- possibly Den. V. fr. 2 örüg; see örgin. The word in Tef., if it belongs here, would support the suggested etymology. Uyğ. VIII orku:n balıklığ beltiri:nte: el örgi:ni:n anta: örgipen étitdim 'I set up the throne of the realm at the junction of the Orkhon and Balıklığ (rivers) and rested(?) there' *Şu. D ürkül- Hap. leg.; Pass. f. (used only as an Impersonal verb) of ürk-. Xak. XI ürkünç bolup ürküldi: waqa'ati'l-hazāhiz ḥattā nufira minhā 'panic broken out so that (the people) scattered because of it' Kaş. I 250 (ürkülür, ürkülme:k).

D irkle:- 'to trample on (something Acc.)'; Dev. N. fr. irk, but the semantic connection is only metaph. The entries in Kaş. are mostly unvocalized but the Uyğ. spellings of this verb and irklet- and the alternative form with prosthetic y- make the spelling certain. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. PP 65, 5 (see E iŋle:-): Xak. XI ol yé:rig irkle:di: waṭi'a'l-arḍ 'he trampled on the ground (etc.)'; dialect form (luğa) of ikle:di: (misvocalized ekle:di:) *Kaş. D örkle:- Den. V. fr. örk; 'to tether (a horse, etc. Acc.).' Survives in SW XX Anat. ökle-/ örekle-/örkle-/örükle-/ürükle- SDD 1106, etc.; some of these forms and NE Tel. örö:lo-, NC Kır, ditto.; Kzx. örele- are perhaps der. fr. örük. Xak. XI ol atığ örkle:dl: 'he tethered (şadda) the horse to a stake with a long rope' Kaş. III 443 (örkle:r, örkle:me:k): KB (any beg who is prudent watches over his realm) yağı boynı yançtı üze örkledi 'he crushes the enemy's neck and ties him down' 2016 (the Fergana MS. reads ikledi 'trampled', and this, or irkledi, makes better sense, and is prob. the correct reading): (XIII(?) Tef. örklen- 'to be fastened to (something Dat.)' Refl. f. 248 (örklen-); 340 (ürklen-, same quotn.)): Osm. XVI örkle- translates Ar. words for 'to tether' in two dicts. TTS II 756; IV 629.

D irklet- Caus. f. of irkle:-; 'to make (someone Dat.) trample on (something Acc.)'. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. béş ajunuğ irkletip ozkurtuguz 'Thou hast saved us, making us trample on the five forms of existence' TT III 47: Xak. XI ol anar yé:r ikletti: 'he made him trample (awṭa'ahu) on the ground' Kaş. I 265 (ikletür, ikletme:k, all unvocalized).

D erklen- Refl. Den. V. fr. erk; 'to possess power or authority'. Survives only(?) in NW Kar. L., T. R I 781; Kow. 184. Türkü VIII ff. Man. él(l)enmekim etöz meŋisi begeḍmekim erklenmekim 'my being a ruler, bodily pleasure, my being a beg, and my possession of authority' (have become very worthless and trivial in my sight) TT II 8, 43–4.

D irkin- Refl. f. of irk-; 'to collect (things) for oneself'. N.o.a.b.; irkin- 'to stop from hesitation or fright' Red. 293 is no doubt a Sec. f. of ürkün- (see ürkünç). Xak. XI ol ö:ziŋe: neŋ irkindi: 'he collected (cama'a) things for himself' Kaş. I 254 (irkinür, irkinme:k): Çağ. XV ff. irkin-(-ür) translated qaṣd u mayl eyle- 'to be inclined towards', but in the supporting quotn. the meaning is clearly 'to collect' Vel. 52 (not in San. where irk- is described as Rūmī).

VUD örgen- Refl. f. of örge:-; 'to rest' or the like. This seems the obvious etymological explanation of this word, although 'to be saturated' or the like would suit the context better. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. Man. (then that good man) kamağ özi toni bastan (sic, as usually in this text) aḍak(k)a teği kanka iriŋ(k)e örgenip 'with his whole body and clothing from head to foot lying in blood and pus' M I 5, 12–14; arığsızka örgenmisin (seeing himself) 'lying in filth' do. 6, 7–8.

D 1 ergür- contracted (cf. ergüz, ergüz-) Caus. f. of erü-; 'to melt, dissolve (something Acc.); 'to macerate (something Acc., in something Dat.)'. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (the fourth virtue of the Wind God is that he) tum[lığıg] ergürer 'melts what is frozen' Wind. 39–40; (the fifth that) isigig ergürer tarkarur 'he melts and dissipates heat' do. 46–7: Civ. matu luŋ suvka ergürüp 'macerating citrons (l.-w.) in water' H II 22, 41; a.o. do. 24, 42; Xak. XI ya:ğ ergürdi: 'he melted (aḏāba) the fat' (etc.) Kaş. I 227 (ergürür, ergürme:k).

D 2 érgür- Caus. f. of 2 ér-; etymologically 'to cause (something) to reach or arrive', but except in Osm. with rather different meanings. Survived in Osm. until fairly recently, but now only in XX Anat. ergör-/ergür-/irkör/irgör- SDD 544, 796. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. érte kün tavrak buyan kıl aşnukan érgürü etözüŋni közeḍ 'early in the morning swiftly do good deeds; seizing the first possible opportunity(?) preserve your body' TT I 171–3; ürkürü buyan kıl TT VII 28, 2 is prob. a misreading of ergürü: Xak. XI ol aşka: ergürdi: adraka'l-ṭa'ām qabl an yanfalit 'he got hold of the food before it went past him'; also used of anyone who gets hold of anything before it goes past him Kaş. I 227 (ergürür, ergürme:k): Osm. XIV ff. ergür-/irgür-(érgür-)/erür-/irür- (érür-) 'to make, or let (someone Acc.) reach (a place Dat.); to bring (something Acc., to someone Dat.)', c.i.a.p. TTS I 275; II 395; III 263; IV 436.

D erksin- Refl. Simulative Den. V. fr. erk; 'to have power, or authority (over someone Acc. or üze:)'. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. Man. él(l)enmek erksinmek 'to be a ruler and have authority' M III 16, 9 (ii); a.o. do. 19, 14: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A M I 27, 10 (uğur): Bud. bursaŋ kuvrağ üze erksindimiz erser 'if we have exercised authority over Buddhist communities (Hend.)' TT IV 6, 45; o.o. Pfahl. 22, 3 (uğur); USp. 102a. 7–8: Civ. şılavantılar seliler erksinip 'the clergy and laity (l.-w.) having authority' (over certain properties) USp. 88, 26–7: Kom. XIV barçalarnı erksindeçi 'ruler over all' CCG; Gr.

D irkiş- Co-op. f. of irk-; 'to help to collect', etc. S.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI ol maŋa: tawa:r irkişti: 'he helped me to collect (fī cam') the property'; also for 'to compete'. *Kaş. D örüglük A.N. fr. örüg; 'calm, quietness', and the like. Survives in a word meaning 'an entertainment provided for a newly-arrived neighbour by earlier residents' noted as NC Kır. örülük/örü:lük; Kzx. érulik (sic); SW XX Anat. örülük SDD 1118. See Doerfer II 590. Xak. XI KB amulluk kerek erke kılkı oŋay, örüglük kerek begke tuğsa kün ay 'a man of upright character must be tranquil and a beg calm whether the sun or moon is rising' 325; a.o. 1988: (XIII(?) Tef. istawā 'to rest' örüglüg bol- 81 (transcribed eriglik?)).

D örüklüg P.N./A. fr. örük; 'plaited' and the like. S.i.s.m.l. as örüli/örülü. Xak. XI KB örüklüg saçı 'his plaited hair' 5825.

D erkliglik A.N. fr. erhlig; 'power, authority'. Survives only(?) in NC Kir. erktü:lük; Kzx. ériktilik. Xak. XI KB tüzü neŋke yetti bu erkliglikiŋ 'Thine authority extends over all things' 9: XIII(?) Tef. erkliglik 'independence, arbitrary behaviour(?)' 83.

F örgesün 'thorn' a Mong. word (Kow. 590, Haltod 114) is mentioned as such in San. but does not seem to have become a l.-w. in any Turkish languages; it is therefore very unlikely that this is the word in H II since these medicinal texts are almost certainly all anterior to XIII; it is perhaps a misreading of övkesin 'his lung'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. kızıl örgesin name of a drug H II 34, 21: Çağ. XV ff. örkesün (spelt) in Mong. xār 'thorn', in Ar. called ṣawk San. 71r. 20.

D erksizlik A.N. fr. erksiz; 'lack of independence', etc. Survives only(?) in NC Kzx. ériksizdik and NW Kar. L. aran originally 'a stable'. Survives in NC Kzx., NW Nog. and several minor dialects (R I 251) for 'cattle pen' and in SW XX Anat. 'tobacco barn' SDD 109. Xak. XI aran ('with back vowels') al-ārī 'a stable' Kaş. I 76: Çağ. XV ff. aran (1) 'a row of stakes (sīxhā) which they erect in game-paths for hunting purposes' (quotn.); (2) 'an enclosure (muḥawwaṭa) which they make for cattle to sleep in' San. 36v. 15.

D eren irregular Plur. of 1 er; properly 'men', but as in the case of oğla:n, its true nature was forgotten quite early, and it was treated as a Sing. S.i.a.m.l.g. usually meaning 'real man, fighting man', and the like. Türkü VIII eren is fairly common but invariably follows a numeral or numerical expression like a:z 'few', which suggests that it was regarded more as a collective than a Plur. (which would not normally follow a numeral), e.g. kaŋım xağan yeti yegirmi: eren taşıkmış 'my father the xağan and 17 men marched out' I E 11, II E 10; o.o. I E 34; I E 40 (ükün-); I N 9; II E 37; II S 11; Ongin 5: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. üç erenler (sic) 'the three men' TT II 16, 30–1: Bud. béş yüz satığçı erenler '500 merchants' PP 22, 8; béş yüz erenniŋ do. 28, 2; 53, 6; yüzlüg erenler (sic) 'distinguished people' TT VII 40, 75–6: O. Kır. IX ff. yüz eren Mal. 10, 2 (dubious, text corrupt): Xak. XI eren al-ricāl 'men'; an irregular Plur. (cam' ṣāḥḥ) Kaş. I 76; o.o. I 74 (oğul, q.v.); I 229 (ürpeş-) and over 20 others, in nearly all of which the word is certainly Plur.: KB ajunda ne yaŋlığ eren tuğdı kör 'see what kind of men are born in the world' 234; a.o. 279: XIII(?) At. eren (rather broadly) 'mankind' 89, 90, 93, 373: Tef. erenler 'human beings; men (not women)' 80: XIV Rbğ. erenler 'men; husbands' R I 758 (quotns.); Çağ. XV ff. San. 90r. 16 (1 er): Xwar. XIV erenler '(brave) men' Quth 21: Osm. XIV ff. eren (1) 'male' (not female) ; (2) 'real man, hero'; (3) 'man of experience'; c.i.a.p. normally as Sing.; erenler, too, is common TTS I 271; II 389 ff.; III 257; IV 302.

érin 'lip', sometimes specifically 'the lower lip', and metaph. 'the lip of a cup'. S.i.a.m.l.g. as érin, erin, irin, but almost obsolete in SW where 'lip' is normally Az., Tkm. dodak; Osm. dudak. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A ol külüŋ (?read külünç) érni 'that smiling(?) lip' M I 10, 8: Man. TT II 16, 15 (aḍurt): Bud. üstün altın érinleri 'his upper and lower lips' U IV 30, 52–3; a.o. Suv. 595, 17: Civ. on yanıda érin ikin ara 'on the 10th of the month (the soul) is between the two lips' TT VII 20, 14–16; érin üze meŋ bolsar 'if there is a mole on the lip' do. 37, 9 (USp. 42, 8): Xak.

XI érin al-ṣafa 'lip' Kaş. I 77; é:rni: ṣafatuhu do. 70, 24: XIII Tef. erin 'lip' 81: Çağ. XV ff. érn(-iŋ) muṭlaq alt dudak 'specifically the lower lip' Vel. 52 (quotns.); érn labb 'lip' San. 100r. 21 (quotns.): Xwar. XIV érin 'lip' Qutb 51 (erin), 60 (érin); MN 121, etc.: Kom. XIV 'nostril, gums' (sic) erin CCI; Gr.: Kıp. XIII al-ṣafa eren (sic?) Hou. 20, 4: XIV erin al-ṣafa Id. 12: XV ṣafa (dodak and) érin Tuh. 20b. 6.

D iriŋ Conc. N. fr. iri:-; 'pus'. S.i.a.m.l.g. (in SE Türki jiriŋ). Türkü VIII ff. Man. kan iriŋ 'blood and pus' M I 5, 10, and 14; 6, 4: Bud. yiriŋ aşlığlar (demons)'who eat pus' U II 61, 9; o.o. TT VI 443 (örmen); X 549: Civ. H II 26, 85 (ak-): Xak. XI iriŋ al-qih wa'l-ṣadīd 'pus' (Hend.) *Kaş. orun (oron) originally 'place', and more specifically 'high place, throne'; the first is quite clear in phr. like yé:r orun 'a place' (Hend.) and the second in phr. like linxwa orun 'lotus throne'; also used abstractly in phr. like ornınta: 'in place of (something else)'. An early l.-w. in Mong. as oron 'throne' (Haenisch 126), later 'place, country, province', and other meanings (Kow. 447, Haltod 82). S.i.a.m.l.g., but not current in Osm. after about XVI until revived recently. Türkü VIII ff. Man. ornınta kamşat(t)ımız erser 'if we have overthrown (the four kinds of gods) from their thrones' Chuas. 187–8; men keltim ornuma olurdum 'I have come and seated myself on my throne' TT II 8, 74: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. tınğuluk orunta 'in a place of rest' TT III 110; o.o. do. 12 (énç-gülüg); 139 (aḍalığ)—ol orunka oluru yarlıkadı 'he deigned to sit on that throne' M III 34, 5 (ii): Bud. Sanskrit āsana 'seat' tölet oron (sic) üze: *TT VIII D.*12; linxwa orun 'lotus throne' TT V 12, 126, etc.; o.o. Suv. 182, 6–7 (örü:); U III 43, 29 (bez-, here 'bed')—(King Mahārati) törttin sınar yér orunuğ ıymış basmış 'subdued (Hend.) countries in all parts of the world' Suv. 607, 14–15; o.o. of yér orun Hüen-ts. 94, 149, 177: Civ. iğ oronla:rında: 'on sick-beds' *TT VIII L.*25 A; (if) orunın yégin kılmayın 'I do not provide him with lodging and food' USp. 98, 20–1—'place' H II 6, 14; 8, 21 (ötgürgü:)—borlukuŋnıŋ ornında borluk tilese 'if (you) want (another) vineyard in place of your vineyard' USp. 24, 7–8; similar phr. do. 84, 3: Xak. XI orun mawḍi' or makān 'place' Kaş. II 72, 4 (kopur-); 177, 25 (turğur-); III 430, 9 (kopurt-); kara: orun al-qabr 'the grave', meaning 'the dark place' (al-mawḍi'u'l-muẓlim) III 221, 23: KB orun 'place' is common, e.g. orun ol törütti orun yok aŋar '(God) created places, but has no place himself' 19; ata ornı atı oğulka kalır 'the father's place and name remains for the son' 110: XIII(?) KBPP pādışāh ornıŋa tutmış turur 'he took him for the position of monarch' 32; a.o. 33, but in 34 yérinde; At. 212 (umunç); Tef. orun 'place, seat', etc. 238: XIV Muh. al-maqām 'place' o:ru:n Rif. 179 (Mel. 76, 1 yé:r): Çağ. XV ff. orun/orn these two words mean maqām ve cāygāh 'place' (Hend.) (quotns.); orn- (-ığa 'with o-') anuŋ yerine badal ma'nāsına' in his place' in the sense of substitution (quotns.) Vel. 99; orn (spelt) cā wa makān (quotns.); also used in the sense of substitution ('iwaḍ) as one says in Persian 'so-and-so was given in place of (ba-cā-yi) so-and-so' San. 71 v. 5; orun cā wa makān (quotn.), when followed by a vowel suffix orn as stated above do. 71 v. 19: Xwar. XIV (your father's) ornı 'place' Nahc. 14, 5: Kom. XIV 'place' orun CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIV orun makān wa ğayruhu Id. 11: Osm. XIV to XVI orun 'place' in several texts TTS II 736; III 549; IV 612.

F ören 'bad, ruined'; as Kaş. says a corruption of Persian wayrān, which occurs as a l.-w. in several modern languages in its original or a corrupt form, e.g. NC Kır., Kzx. oyran/oyron. The latest trace of ören is in Osm. Sami 200, where it is described as 'obsolete'. Oğuz XI ören al-radī' min kull şay' 'bad' of anything; I consider this to be taken from the Per. word wayrān 'ruined' (al-xarāb); the Oğuz when they mixed with the Persians (ixtalaṭat bi'l-furs) forgot many Turkish words and used Pe. words instead; this is one of them Kaş. I 76: Osm. XIV to XVII ören 'ruined, desolate' in several texts TTS I 568; II 755.

F(E) üren the Mongolian word üren 'seed, fruit, progeny' (Kow. 577, Haltod 126) occurs as a l.-w. in several NE languages and NC Kır. It has also been read in Türkü VIII ff. Man. üren yaşarur yaḍılur 'the seed turns green and spreads' M III 20, 10–11 (i), but it is said that the text is very difficult to read, and there is no reasonable doubt that this word is a misreading of evin.

ürüŋ 'white' in a general sense, cf. 1 a:k. Very common down to XI but almost obsolete thereafter. Survives in Yakut ürüŋ 'white' (Pek. 3178), and perhaps NC Kır. ürüŋ baraŋ 'dawn' and SW XX Anat. ürün 'milk, yoğurt' SDD 1436. Sporadic Uyğ. spellings yürüŋ are unlikely to represent an earlier form. Türkü VIII ürüŋ kümüşi:n 'his white silver' II N 11; a.o. T 48 (altu:n): VIII ff. ürü:ŋ esri: 'white dappled' IrkB 4 ('falcon'); 41 ('cow' and 'bull calf'); o.o. do. 5, 20; yürüŋ taş 'white stone' Toy. 5 (ETY II 57), a.o.o.: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A yürüŋ tonluğ dındarka 'to a white-robed Elect' M III 30, 10–11; ürüŋ M I 22, 4 (ii): Bud. yürüŋ yipiŋ yaruk yaşuk 'white and violet light (Hend.)' TT V 4, 12; o.o. PP 42, 2 (egir-); TT V 6, 47; U IV 30, 51–2, etc.: Civ. ürüŋ yérlig (a mattress) 'with a white ground' (and coloured ornamentation) USp. 79, 6; yürüŋ bulıt 'a white cloud' TT I 4; o.o. TT VII 13, 29; H I 91, etc.: O. Kır. IX ff. ürüŋümig kara:mığ a:zdım 'I strayed from(?) my white and black (livestock?)' Mal. 11, 3; (my kinsmen, my children) ürüŋü:m kara:m do. 45, 7: Xak. XI ürüŋ al-abyaḍ 'white' of anything, in Oğuz (1) ak: ürüŋ al-kudba 'the white crescent in a finger-nail', that is al-fūfa (ditto) in the nails of young people; one says tırŋa:k ürüŋl: bayāḍu'l-ẓufr: ürüŋ ḥulwānu'l-kāhin 'a fortune-teller's fee'; one says elig ürüŋl: bé:r 'give the fee' Kaş. I 134; three o.o.: KB ürüŋ 'white' is common, e.g. (putting off my widow's weeds) ürüŋ keḍtim as 'I have put on (a garment of) white ermine' 84; o.o. 881, 1103 (1 saç), 1319, 3840 (ertini), 5640, 6622: XIII(?) At. (the prophets have) ürüŋ yüz 'white (i.e. shining) faces' 25; Tef. ürüŋ 'white' (hair, light) 250 (örüŋ): Çağ. XV ff. ewrüŋ (so spelt) rūşan wa nūrānī wa hawā-yi ṣāf 'shining, bright, clear weather' San. 53v. 1: Kıp. XIII al-laban muṭlaqā 'milk' in general ü:rün Hou. 16, 11.

D 1 erinç like erki: and erken, q.v., a very archaic der. f. of 1 er-; its particular function (see v. G. ATG, para. 359) seems to be to make statements in which it is included less than categorical, and it is usually best translated 'presumably, supposedly', and the like. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII (their xaġans were wise and tough) buyrukı: yeme: bilge: ermiş erinç alp ermiş erinç 'their officers, too, were presumably wise and tough' . . . anı: üçü:n élig ança: tutmış erinç 'and for this reason apparently they thus held the realm' I E 3, II E 4; a whole string of similar phr. follows I E 5, II E 5, 6; I E 11, II E 10; o.o. I E 24, II E 20 (ol); I E 26; II E 35; Ix. 23 (ülüg): Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (I have done evil) bilip kılmadım erinç 'but not, I think, done it knowingly' U II 87, 59; kaŋım xan boḍun tiliŋe korkup ınça yarlıkadı erinç 'my father the xan apparently gave this order because he feared what the people might say' PP 11, 1–3; o.o. do. 10, 1; 45, 5: Xak. XI erinç a Particle (ḥarf) meaning la'alla 'perhaps', hence one says ol keldi: erinç 'he has perhaps come' Kaş. I 132; similar entry, but bardı: 'he has (perhaps) gone' III 449; o.o. I 46, 20 (kanık); III 65, 12 (uğra:ğ); 245, 18; 309, 11: KB ölüm buzmağınça buzulmaz erinç 'until death destroys him, he will presumably not be destroyed' 882; o.o. 2062–4, 3739.

D irinç (?érinç): N./A.S. fr. irin-; 'wretched, miserable, unhappy'. N.o.a.b.; see irinçü:. Türkü VIII ff. Man. irinç boldılar 'they became miserable' M III 6, 3 (1); 7, 6–7 (ii): Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A irinç kişi oğlu 'miserable mortals' M I 9, 7: Man. (gap) irinç kılıp ölürtim 'I have made . . . miserable and killed them' TT II 15, 2–3; o.o. TT III 25, 48: Bud. (you will encounter dreadful dangers, and die, and) bizni irinç kılğaysız 'make us unhappy' PP 18, 6; o.o. U II 4, 6 (ınağsız); 29, 14; U III 10, 4 (kolunğuçı:); 16, 21 (ınağsız); 36, 20; TT IV 10, 13 (2 yarlığ); 12, 44 (ol); Suv. 448, 2: Xak. XI Kaş. I 132; III 449 (?; erej).

D urunç 'bribe'; the only modern survival is SW XX Anat. örünç SDD 1118, noted in one village only; if it can be assumed that this is a mispronunciation, the obvious explanation of this word is to take it as a Dev. N. fr. urun- in the sense of 'something put down'. Cf. urunçak. Xak. XI urunç al-riṣwa 'a bribe' Kaş. I 132; III 449 (duplicate entries); o.o. I 354, 9 (1 aç-); III 217, 1: KB urunç alsa ḥācib bolur beg külünç 'if the minister takes bribes, the ruler becomes a laughing-stock' 2442; urunç almasa (so read) 'he should not take bribes' 2506; o.o. 2443, 4144: XIV Muh.(?) al-riṣwa u:runç Rif. 188 (only; also raṣā wa barṭala 'to bribe' (Hend.) urınçla:- 109); al-riṣwa 'to bribe' urı:nçlamak Mel. 39, 3; Rif. 126.

D orna:ğ Conc. N. fr. orna:-; 'place, seat'. A rare word which survives only in NC Kır. orno: described by Yud. as the N.Ac. of orna:- and possibly NE Tel. urna 'insert, insertion' R I 1667. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. arığ simek orunda söğüt altında [tüne]rig ornağ tutunmış erür 'he took for himself a dark(?) seat under a tree in a place in the jungle' USp. 105, 10–12: Civ. ig ağrığ ornağ tutkalır 'diseases (Hend.) promptly occupy the place' TT I 167–8; XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict. chuang 'bed' (Giles 2,778) ǃornuğ (sic) R I 1064; ornuk Ligeti 188 (the latter could be a Dev. N./A. in -uk (Pass.) from orna:-).

erŋe:k 'finger'. Survives only as ergek in most NE languages including Khak. and Tuv., elsewhere displaced by barmak (parmak) which is noted in this meaning in all medieval languages:—Muh., Çağ., Xwar., Kom., Kıp., and Osm. Türkü VIII ff. Man. on yılan başlığ erŋekin 'with ten snake-headed fingers' Chuas. 54: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. erŋeki 'her fingers' M II 11, 22: Bud. atsız erŋek 'ring finger', kiçig erŋek 'little finger', ortun erŋek 'middle finger', yanar erŋek 'index finger', uluğ erŋek 'thumb' TT V 8, 54–7; 12, 119–20; suk eŋreki (sic) 'index finger' U II 46, 71–2 (eğ-); a.o. TM IV 253, 65–6: Civ. uluğ erŋek TT VII 37, 12 (USp. 42, 11): Xak. XI ernek al-iṣbi' 'finger', dialect form of erŋe:k *Kaş. ?D erŋe:n 'bachelor'; possibly contraction of eringe:n 'one who is habitually lazy' fr. erin-. Survives only(?) in SW Osm. ergen; there are several words for 'bachelor' in other modern languages, the commonest being boydak. Xak. XI erŋe:n (sic. in chap. containing dissyllables) er al-raculu'l-'azab 'a bachelor' *Kaş. ?D erin- (?érin-) 'to be lazy, indolent'; morphologically a Refl. f. but with an inexplicable semantic connection with ermegü:. S.i.a.m.l.g. as erin-/érin-/irin which suggests an original érin-. See also erinçig. Türkü VIII ff. Man. Chuas. 255, 266 (ermegür-): Xak. XI er ı:şka: erindi: takāsala'l-racul li'l-amr mustawhişa(n) lahu 'the man was lazy (or dilatory) about the affair because he was uneasy about it' *Kaş. D irin- (?érin-) Refl. f. of 1 i:r- (?é:r-); 'to be miserable, unhappy'. In view of the der. f.s irinç, irintür- there is no doubt about the existence of this word, but occurrences are scarce, and there is some possibility of confusion with yérin-, q.v. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. irinür M II 12, 3 (i) (kut): Bud. köŋli yirindi (sic) 'his mind was distressed' PP 68, 5 (belongs here?).

VU?D uruŋu: 'flag, standard'. Although it is common in the early period as an element in P.N.s, there is no early occurrence as a N., but see uruŋuluğ. The medieval words below are clearly related, and may even be intended to represent this actual word since in these texts ğayn is occasionally used to represent ŋ. A l.-w. in Mong. as oroŋğa, same meaning (Kow. 449, Haltod 83). In spite of this vocalization this word must surely be a contracted Conc. N. fr. urun- in the sense of 'something set up'. Cf. uruŋut. Türkü VIII ff. the Miran MS. (ETY II 64 ff.) is full of P.N.s in which uruŋu: occurs 13 times (a) at the beginning of a name, e.g. uruŋu: toḍu:n (title) çigşi: (title) A.3; (b) at the end e.g. külu:g uruŋu: A.7; (c) in the middle, e.g. Küre:bi:r (tribal name) uruŋu: saŋu:n (title) Br.9; from the contexts it is clearly neither a title nor a tribal name: O. Kır. IX ff. (inscription starts) alp uruŋu totok ben 'I am Alp Uruŋu: Totok (title)' Mal. 16, 1; körtle: xan alp uruŋu: P.N. do. 10, 5; uruŋu: külüg tok bögö: terkeŋe: (i.e. terken-ke:?) P.N. do. 10, 6 (neither reading certain, this text is in disorder): (Xak.) XIV Muh. bayrāq wa'l-'alam 'flag, standard' u:rğu: Mel. 51, 5; Rif. 146 (bayrāq wa ra'su'l-'alam): Kıp. XIV urğa: (sic) al-bayrāq Id. 11.

D irinçü: 'sin, fault'. Morphology uncertain, at first sight bears the same relation to irinç as ögrünçu: to ögrünç, but those two words are synonymous and these are not. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. Man. anığ kılınça irinçüke 'by evil deeds and sins' Chuas. 298: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. irinçü kılığmalar 'committing sins' M II 11, 8; irinçü kılmış kılınçı do. 12, 11–12: Bud. irinçüde boş bolalım 'may we be freed from our sins' TT IV 8, 52 and 66; tsuyda irinçüde boş bolalım ditto do. 6, 32, and 41; tsuy irinçü do. 4, 9, etc.; Suv. 139, 10 and 13 etc.: Xak. XI irinçü: (sic in MS.) al-iṯm 'sin' *Kaş. D orunçı: N.Ag. fr. orun. Survives in NE Soy. (i.e. Tuv.), Tel. 'heir, youngest son' R I 1054–6; Khak. 'substitute, locum tenens' Bas. 131 and NC Kır. 'bedding'. The entry in San. is inexplicable, there is no such word in Mong., Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. orunçılar court officials of some kind, ?'attendants on the throne' Pfahl. 23, 24 (see içre:ki:): Çağ. XV ff. oruncı (spelt) in Mong., gadā wa sā'il 'a beggar' (Hend.) San. 71v. 22.

D urunçak Conc. N. fr. urun-; 'deposit, security, pledge'. Survives only(?) in NE Khak. urunçax 'sudden illness' (sic!) and SW XX Anat. urunçak 'security' SDD 1421. Türkü VIII ff. Man. neçe evniŋ (?so read) kişi urunçakın yédimiz erser 'if we have misappropriated a householder's(?) deposit' Chuas. 112–14: Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. tolp etözümin saŋa urunçak tutuzurmen 'I entrust my whole body as a security to you' U III 83, 7–9; a.o. Tiş. 22b. 6: Xak. XI urunçak al-waḍī'a wa'l-amāna 'deposit, pledge'; may also be pronounced urunça:k *Kaş. D uruŋut a word used in Bud. texts to represent Sanskrit words like senāpati 'army commander, general', and the like. Radlov in a note on Tiş. 20b. 4 indirectly, but plausibly, suggests that it is a crasis of uruŋğut Dev. N. fr. urun-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Tiş. 20b. 4; 26b. 5; 33a. 3; 36a. 8, and 37a. 6 list the names of tört (or törtegü) uluğ yekler uruŋutları 'four great generals of demons (yakşas)' and do. 35b. 1 those of four generals of gods (teŋri); (PU.) Kançanaçavı uruŋut Suv. 425, 7; o.o. do. 10; U IV 18, 220.

D urundı: Dev. N. fr. urun-; 'conflict'. Survives in NC Kır. urundu: and perhaps urunt. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. örletişmek öçlüg urundı 'mutual disturbance and spiteful conflict' Hüen-ts. 2095.

C eren tü:z a star name, to be explained as a compound of eren 'men' and tüz 'alike'; almost certainly 'Gemini, the Twins', which fits the occurrences in KB; Kaş.'s translations are certainly wrong, see Clauson, op. cit., s.v. ülker. N.o.a.b. Xak. XI eren tü:z (in a Chap. containing dissyllables, so to be taken as two words) ismu'l-mīzān fi'l-nucūm wa hīya min manāzili'l-qamar 'the word for the constellation Libra, the Scales'; it is one of the mansions of the moon *Kaş. VU?D arış 'the warp' of a woven fabric; prima facie this word, arka:ğ, q.v., and arğaç are all Dev. N.s fr. a lost verb ar-, but some doubt is cast on this by the fact that it seems often to contain front vowels. Survives in NE Tel. örüş R I 1226; NC Kır. eriş; SW Osm. arış; XX Anat. eriş SDD 545. It should not be confused with arış 'the pole, or shafts of a cart' first noted in SC XVII Özb. Abu'l-ğāzī (P. de C. 13) and surviving in several NC, NW, and SW languages, which is a l.-w. fr. 2 es- 'to stretch' esp. a rope, cord, and the like. Survives only(?) in NE Tuv. At some unknown date a verb eş- 'to twist, twist together, tie' appeared, and some later user of the MS. of Kaş. became so confused between the two that he altered the S which precedes this verb, 1 es- and 1, 2 us- to Ş and also this verb to eş- and esil-, esiş- to eşil-, eşiş-. The two verbs are, however, clearly different, since Pal. 577 distinguishes between es-, Infin. ezer, 'to pull (meat off a bone, a pot off the fire)' and eş-, Infin. ejer 'to twist'. The earliest references to (4) eş- 'to twist', which s.i.a.m.l.g., are Xwar. XIV Qutb 61; Kom. XIV CCG; Gr.; and Çağ. XV ff. Vel. 60; San. 104v. 26. Xak. XI ol yışığ esdi: madda'l-ḥabl 'he stretched the rope' (etc.) Kaş. I 165 (ese:r, esme:k).

F ös- 'to grow' a common Mong. verb (Haenisch 128, Kow. 514) which s.i.a.m.l.g. as a Mong. l.-w., and is earlier noted as below. In the only two passages in which it has been read in Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. it is clearly an error, in U II 10, 24 for 1 ür-, q.v., and in Suv. 566, 3 where the correct reading is üzgen yağmur tökülür 'the destructive rain, pours down'; a similar phr. is correctly transcribed in U I 26, 15 (Suv. 517, 4). The only reason for doubting that this is a Mong. l.-w. arises in connection with PU ösür-, q.v.; if this is correctly read it might be a Caus. f. of ös-, but it is prob. an error. Çağ. XV ff. ös- ma'lūf şudan wa 'adat kardan 'to be accustomed to (something)' San. 74v. 24 (quotn., an erroneous translation derived from a misinterpretation of the quotn. tuğğan ösgen yérim 'the place where I was born and grew up' not 'to which I am accustomed'): Kom. XIV 'to grow, increase in size' ös- CCG; Gr. 184 (quotn.): Kıp. XV ös- ṭala'a'l-binā awi'l-şacar wa bi-ma'nā turubbā 'of a building or tree, to rise, grow taller; to be brought up' Kav. 9, 6; şabba wa ṭāla 'to grow, get taller' (uzan- and) ös- Tuh. 21b. 11; a.o. 24a. 1: Osm. XVII ös- 'to grow up' TTS I 749 (üs-).

PUD osğuç both this word and osku:k (osğu:k), included below are Hap. leg. They are obviously cognate Dev. N.s in -ğuç and -ğuk respectively, and the simplest explanation is to derive them fr. os-, q.v., but it is doubtful whether this is an ancient verb in this form and other transcriptions, esp. of osğuç, are possible. Apart from the difference in the quality of the vowels, 2 üş- would be an appropriate base. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. PUD ösür- if correctly read a Caus. f. of ös-, q.v.; but it occurs only once in the Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. phr. ünlerin ösürüp apparently 'raising their voices' in a text first published in U I 43, 17–18 and republished in U IV 10, 52–3; in the latter the second word is printed in italics as doubtful. It is almost certainly an error for üntürüp. If so there is no good reason for supposing that ös- is not a Mong. verb, used as a l.-w. in some Turkish languages.

D asurt- Caus. f. of asur-. Survives only(?) in NE Bar. azırt- R I 569: Xak. XI asurtğu: ot al-'aṭūs 'snuff' Kaş. III 442; n.m.e.

PUD asırtku: Hap. leg.; this word occurs in a section containing trisyllables ending in a long vowel, following asurtğu: and ağartğu: which are headed by the letter -Ğ- and preceding emirçge: which is headed by the letter -K- or -G- (kāf); it is itself headed by the letter -K- (qāf), the spelling in the MS. asırtğuk is therefore obviously wrong and must be corrected to asırtku:. There is a fatḥa over the alif, but no vowel sign on the second syllable. Morphologically the word is obscure; -ku: is a very unusual variant of the common suffix -ğu: and there is no semantic connection between the word and any known verb of suitable form. Xak. XI al-raculu'l-fatinu'l-muta'āqil, 'a clever, intelligent man' is called (earlier) asırtku: er *Kaş. 1 a:ş- 'to cross (a mountain, etc. Acc., later Abl.)', as opposed to keç- 'to cross (a river, etc.)'; also Intrans., e.g. of time, 'to pass'. 2 aş- 'to enlarge, increase (something Acc.)'. Pec. to Uyğ.; has sometimes been transcribed as-, but the spelling in TT VIII and (for aşıl-) in Man. Syriac script is conclusively against this. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. kŏŋüllin yürekin buyan eḏgü kılınçka üklitti aştı 'he enlarged (Hend.) his mind and heart by virtue and good deeds' U IV 22, 269 ff.; kut aşğalı sakınsar 'if he thinks of increasing the favour of heaven (to himself)' TT V 8, 70; (in a damaged passage) a:şa yéğ 'more and better' *TT VIII N.*6; o.o. Suv. 136, 20 (üklit-); 266, 6–8 (üste:-).

eş- Preliminary note. Kaş. gives two meanings 'to amble' and 'to pour (a dry substance)'; his third meaning seems to belong to 1 a:ş-. In the medieval period two more meanings appeared, 'to twist', which seems to represent a Sec. f. of 2 es-, q.v., and 'to dig, or row', which seems to belong to an old verb fortuitously not noted in the earlier period.

1 eş- 'to amble'; survives only, with slightly altered meaning 'to run, hurry', in SW Osm. Türkü VIII ff. (I am the Road (or Spring?) God with the dappled horse) yarı:n kéçe: eşü:rmen 'early and late I amble along' IrkB 2: Xak. XI atlığ eşdi: xabba'l-fāris wa rakaḍa 'the horseman ambled (Hend.)' *Kaş. 2 eş- 'to pour (a dry substance Acc.)'. Perhaps survives in NE Khak. és- (of a cow) 'to yield milk' Bas. 64. Xak. XI ol kayırnı: eşdi: ahāla'l-raml 'he poured the sand'; also used for pouring flour into a sack and the like Kaş. I 166 (eşe:r, eşme:k).

3 eş- 'to dig; to row (i.e. dig water)'; not recorded before the medieval period, but no doubt existed earlier. S.i.a.m.l.g. for 'to row' except in SW and for 'to dig' only in NE Tuv. and SW Osm.; in the latter it connotes less vigorous digging than kaz-. Çağ. xv ff. éş- . . . (2) zamīn-rā kāwīdan 'to dig the ground', in Ar. tanqīr San. 104v. 26: Kom. xiv 'to row' eş- CCG; Gr.: Osm. xvii eş- 'to dig' TTS II 405.

PU?F eşgü:ti: 'a kind of Chinese embroidered silk brocade'. There is some difficulty about the actual form of this word, of which the -ğ- is fixed by the Türkü spelling. The best evidence should be in Kaş. where it appears under the heading fa'lūli; the form to be expected is eşgü:ti:, but the MS. actually has eşgürti:. The word is fairly common in Uyğ. Bud. and Civ. and is there consistently spelt eşgirti with minor variations of vocalization. The conclusion seems to be that it is a l.-w. of which the original form was eşgürti: but that the -r- was not clearly pronounced and was sometimes omitted. PUD ışıl- (?yışıl-) 'to become expert (at doing something Dat.)'. This V. is apparently cognate to yışığ (?ışığ), yışım and yışımlan-; there is no doubt, in spite of the erratic vocalization in the MS., that the whole group had back vowels, but it is not clear whether the original initial was ı- or yı-; as the Uyğ. form of yışığ was ışığ, the first is the likelier. VUD 2 i:şlen- (?işlan-) Refl. Den. V. fr. 2 iş (?ış); 'to be blackened with smoke'. Similar difficulties and confusions arise in regard to the vocalization and survival of this word as in the case of 2 iş, but broadly speaking it survives in the same languages and with the same phonetic changes. In Kaş. the position is further complicated by the fact that this verb, which probably had back vowels, and 1 i:şlen-, which almost certainly had front vowels, are treated in a single para., with the result that the Infin. is shown as -ma:k altered to -me:k or vice versa. In addition a later scribe familiar with modern forms of this verb like Osm. ıslen- altered the -ş-s to -s-. Xak. XI ev (VU) i:şlandı: laziqa'l-duxan bi'l-bayt wa aswadda minhu 'the smoke adhered to the house, and it was blackened by it'; also used of clothing and other things *Kaş. oyuk 'mirage, landmark', and the like; specifically Oğuz and with some common meanings with öyük, q.v., also specifically Oğuz. Clearly not identical with oyuk, Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. o:y-, 'hollowed out, a hole, cavity' first noted in Kıp. XV Tuh. 34b. 8; 48b. 8 and s.i.a.m.l.g.; both it and öyük may be Oğuz corruptions of some foreign word (cf. ören). Survives only(?) in SW Osm. oyuk 'scarecrow'; XX Anat. oyuk/hoyuk 'scarecrow; landmark, cairn', and the like, SDD 749, 1098 (höyük, 756, also has these meanings, inter alia); al-xayāl means both 'mirage' and 'scarecrow'. Cf. küsgük. Oğuz XI oyuk al-xayāl wa'l-iram 'mirage, landmark' *Kaş. D ayakçı: N.Ag. fr. 1 ayak: (1) 'one who makes cups, bowls, etc.'; (2) 'a cup-bearer'. Survives in SE Türki, Shaw 30, and NC Kır., Kzx. See Doerfer II 630. Xak. XI aya:kçı: (sic) al-qaṣṣā' 'a potter' Kaş. III 296, 23 (sırla:-); n.m.e.: XIV Rbğ. ayakçı 'cup-bearer' R I 208 (quotn.), 605 (aşçı:); Muh. al-ğaḍāyirī 'a maker of bowls' aya:ğçı: Mel. 58, 5; aya:kçı: Rif. 157: Çağ. XV ff. ayakçı 'cup-bearer' Vel. 39 (quotn.); ayakçı/ayağçı a word for 'cup-bearer' San. 57r. 5 (same quotn.).

D ayğu:çı: Dev. N.Ag. fr. ay-; lit. 'one who speaks, or issues commands', but in practice the title of an office. Türkü VIII in the phr. 'their xağan seems to be brave, and their ayğuçı: wise', T 10, 21, 29, the title, which refers to Toñukuk, is clearly a high one: Uyğ. X Bud. in the list of officials in the first Pfahl ış ayğuçı (PU) Avluç Tarxan, 13, 21, has a rather humbler position near the carpenter, and here seems to mean merely 'foreman of works'.

D ayağlığ P.N./A. fr. aya:ğ; originally 'enjoying respect'. Survives w. phonetic changes in NE Khak.; NC Kır., Kzx., and NW Kaz., Krım, usually meaning either 'compassionate' or 'pitiable, deserving compassion'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A M I 27, 2 (1 a:tlığ): Man. ayağlığ atlığ kapım 'my respected and famous father' TT III 2: Bud. ayağlığ bolmak dyan 'the meditation (l.-w.) about becoming respected' TT V 10, 98; o.o. TT VII 40, 77 (2 ap); Suv. 446, 17–19: Civ. kişidin ayağlığ 'respected by (all) men' TT VII 17, 22.

D ayaklığ Hap. leg.(?); P.N./A. fr. 1 ayak. Xak. XI ayaklığ tevsi: xiwān ḏū qaṣ'a 'a tray for carrying bowls' (illustration of the meaning of -lığ) Kaş. III 50, 26; n.m.e.

D ayıklığ P.N./A. fr. ayık; n.o.a.b., apparently 'one who carries out a promise'. Xak. XI KB ayıklığ turur bu ölüm belgülüg 'death manifestly keeps its promises' (a famous man does not die before his time comes) 2286.

D ayukluk See 5 kö:k.

?ED uyuğluğ Hap. leg.; by its meaning a P.N./A. fr. u:ğ; occurs in a grammatical section as an example immediately after ayaklığ, q.v., and presumably a scribal error for u:ğluğ. Xak. XI uyuğluğ ev bayt ḏū ṭāqāt 'a domed tent' (i.e. one with curved wooden struts) Kaş. III 50, 27; n.m.e.

?ED uyukluğ Hap. leg.; this word has been read in USp. 79, a list of articles mainly töşek 'mattresses'; the phr. below comes after these entries and before a list of örtgün 'coverlets', and the transcription is based on the assumption that it is a P.N./A. fr. uyuk 'felt boot, woollen stocking' which exists in some NC and NW languages; see uyma:. It is unlikely to be connected with this word; it might perhaps be oyukluğ 'with a pattern of depressions, or incisions', or merely mistranscribed. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. bir tatarnıŋ uyukluğ kiḍiz 'one Tatars' . . . felt' USp. 79, 11–12.

S aykırı See arkuru:.

D ayağsız Priv. N./A. fr. aya:ğ; originally 'not enjoying respect'. Survives in much the same languages as ayağlığ with the opposite meaning to that word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. U II 77, 19 and 86, 36 (uçuz); TT VII 40, 77 (2 ap).

Tris. V. AYĞ-

D ayığla:- Den. V. fr. 4 ayığ (añığ); 'to dishonour'; used in antithesis to ağırla:-. Pec. to Uyğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. köni kértü nom ayığladım tandım erser 'if I have dishonoured and denied the rightful true doctrine' Suv. 134, 11–12; a.o. do. 137, 1.

(D) ayla: 'thus, like that'. The original form must have been ayla:, see aylok, but it survives only as SW Az. ele; Osm. öyle; Tkm. eyle; the date of the vowel change is undiscoverable. In the medieval period an alternative form alay appeared in NW and still survives, with minor alterations in NE Bar. R I 353; NC Kır. (Kzx. olay) and some NW languages (others have şolay from oş alay). This latter form looks like a crasis of anlayu:, Ger. of a Den. V. fr. an.... If so, ayla: is perhaps a metathesis of this word, since the current theory that it is a crasis of an... and ile (birle:) is open to the objections that it is semantically inappropriate and that there is no evidence that birle: had become ile anywhere before XIII. Oğuz XI ayla: kaḍalika 'thus'; one says ayla: kılğıl 'do thus' (kaḍā) *Kaş. D ayım 1 a:y with 1st Pers. Poss. Suff.; lit. 'my moon', but often used, like teŋrim, as a Noun for 'beautiful, or distinguished, woman'; the transitional stage is seen in Kaş. where the Poss. Suff. still had its ordinary meaning but a:y is already used metaphorically. Survives in SE Türki BŞ 10; NC Kır. and some SC dialects. Xak. xi sattı meniŋ a:yımı: bā'a xādimī bi-ğayr iḏnī 'he sold my servant without my permission' *Kaş. D oyma: Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. o:y-; s.i.a.m.l.g. usually meaning 'engraved or decorated work'. This seems to be the word used in a cryptic para. in IrkB about gambling. As in many Turkish games, the play consisted in putting pebbles or counters in 'holes' (1 o:y in this para.) and oyma: er, which obviously means 'a gambler', might mean literally 'a man who makes holes for the game'. Türkü viii ff. IrkB 29 (ur-).

D uyma: Pass. Conc. N. fr. uy-; n.o.a.b.; the ref. to 'felt boots' clearly links this word with the modern NC word uyuk 'felt boot, woollen stocking', and possibly with uyukluğ, q.v., and so fixes the vowel of this verb as u-. ?F éyin (sic, as in TT VIII, not iyin as spelt hitherto) pec. to Uyğ. (but see 1 yır). Its meanings are discussed at length in v. G. ATG, para. 296; although sometimes used as an Adv. in such phr. as éyin kezigçe, it is normally a Postposn. following a noun in the unsuffixed or Dat. case and meaning 'because of, according to, in accordance with', and the like. It is therefore practically syn. w. the Khotanese Saka Postposn. iñi, see S. Konow, Primer of Khotanese Saka, para. 95, and is prob. a l.-w. fr. that word. This is more satisfactory than v. PUD uyar this word has been read in two O. Kır. IX ff. and one Türkü VIII ff. Yen. inscription, Mal. 10, 17, and 28; for the text of the last see E inilgü:. This last passage and Mal. 10, 2 yüz er kadaşım uyarın üçün stand together; in both uyar could be an Aor. of u:- used as a Noun to mean 'ability'; 'because of the ability of my hundred kinsmen' and, in 28, 4, 'because of the ability of my elder and younger brothers', but in that case the word might well be uyur, q.v. This explanation does not suit Mal. 17 where the word has been read three times uyar kadınım üçün 17, 2; uyar beğimke: . . . uyar kadaşımka: 17, 3; this text is a very unsatisfactory one, and it would not be too difficult, epigraphically speaking, to correct the word to ö:z; 'for the sake of my own relations by marriage'; (I have been parted from) 'my own beg . . . and my own kinsmen': Talas IX ff. (?) Talas II 5 (see özge:).

D uyur presumably Aor. of u:- used as a Noun; 'capable, powerful', and the like, cf. uğa:n and see uyar. Türkü VIII ff. üyür some kind of small seed, 'millet' or the like. The Brahmi (TT VIII) spelling uyuri would normally be read üri or uyuri but is the only convenient way of writing üyüri in this alphabet. In the Uyğ. script the word is sometimes spelt üyür, sometimes uyur and sometimes uyr, ?for üy(ü)r. The Xak. form ügür is unexpected and prob. represents the same word in a different dialect. There is disagreement about the meaning of kaz üyüri:; Müller in a note in Pfahl. 14 says that in an unpublished text (T III 56–4) it corresponds to Chinese su mo 'Perilla ocymoides' (Giles 10,320 7,969), and v. G. in a note in TT VIII 68 that in Suv. 476, 12 it corresponds to Chinese chieh tzŭ 'mustard seed' (Giles 1,525 11,317). N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. 1 ö:z basically the intangible part of human personality 'spirit' as opposed to the tangible body, hence the early compound word etöz, q.v., 'a live body', lit. 'flesh and spirit'; from this it came usually to mean no more than 'self' (generally with Poss. Suffs.), but sometimes 'the interior part of an organism, pith, marrow', and the like. It is not always easy to catch the exact sense in some passages, but 'self' is the commonest meaning, and often in this sense it is combined with kentü, usually as kentü: ö:z, less often ö:z kentü. An ancient word surviving in Çuv. as var 'centre, middle', Ash. V 166. S.i.a.m.l.g., but rare in NE where it is ös/üs. Türkü VIII öz 'self' is very common, esp. in the forms özüm 'I myself' and özi: 'he himself'; in II S 11 çıntan ığaç kelürip öz yar[gap] 'bringing sandalwood trees . . .' it perhaps means 'the heart wood of a tree'; in T 34 bilge: Toñukuk añı:ğ ol öz ol (see añı:ğ) it is prob. an error for uz: VIII ff. öz 'self', with Poss. VU?C or S özök Kaş.'s explanation is possible, but it is perhaps a Sec. f. of 1 özek, with the vocalization altered to suit the etymology. Çigil XI özök laqab li'l-nisā' 'a Proper Name for women'; hence one says altu:n özök naqīyatu'l-nafs ka'l-ḏahabi'l-xāliṣ 'with a soul as pure as pure gold', and ertini: özök ṣāfiyatu'l-badan ka'l-durra 'with a body as pure as a pearl'; because the peerless pearl is called erdini: and is contracted (sic, see ertini:); this Proper Name is used of Çigil women; its origin is ö:z al-nafs and the kāf i.e. -ök) attached to a word to mean 'precisely that thing'; hence one says ol erni ök keldür 'bring that man (and not someone else)'; with words with back vowels and those containing qāf or ğayn ok is used instead *Kaş. INITIAL LABIAL PLOSIVES

Preliminary note. The initial labial sounds in the Turkish languages were discussed at length in a paper of that name (Studies, p. xvii) and the conclusions there reached are summarized in Studies, pp. 171–2. Briefly they are as follows: (1) there were originally in pre-VIII Turkish both voiced and unvoiced initial labial plosives, b- and p-, but the latter had disappeared nearly everywhere by VIII, and is now found only in a few words in some languages in the Oğuz group, which was unusually conservative in some matters; (2) contrary to this tendency, some Oğuz languages converted the initial b- in three words ba:r, bar-, and bé:r-, and words derived from them into v- at an early date; (3) m- was not an initial sound in native Turkish words in pre-VIII Turkish, but evolved by a process of retrogressive assimilation in most languages, probably during VIII, in words containing a nasal sound later in the word. In this case, too, the Oğuz languages were conservative and retained the original b-, which is also found sporadically in Türkü VIII, and VIII ff. Yen., and in Uyğ. VIII, Şu. only. Where the later nasal was n or ŋ the position is quite clear, 'I' is ben in the languages just mentioned and men elsewhere. But where the nasal was ñ the position is confused by the fact that in most words this ñ had become y before the word comes to our notice. Exceptionally we can be sure that 'dung' was bañak because, in addition to the Uyğ., Xak., etc. form mayak, Kaş. records an Oğuz form baynak, but in the case of a word like muyğak the original form buñğak can only be inferred.

In the present section all words are indexed with initial b-; where there is evidence from the Oğuz languages that it was originally p-, (p-), or in doubtful cases (? p-) is added after the word. Where a word containing a nasal is noted only with initial m-, it is indexed in that form, but the original form with initial b- is listed here with a cross-reference, but where the original b- survives somewhere, even if only in a modern language it is indexed in that form.

D baça:k N.Ac. fr. baça:- 'a (religious) fast'. A Turkish l.-w. in Mong. as baçak (Kow. 1081) and also maçak (Kow. 1996) which shows that it must also have been used in Uyğ. Bud. Salemann, who was unaware of the etymology and true meaning of this word, suggested that it was a l.-w. fr. Sogdian p'šyk 'hymn', a word which does exist as a l.-w. in Turkish, see paşık, and Benveniste accepted this in Journal asiatique, vol. 236, 2, p. 184, but it is an error. N.o.a.b. bat Preliminary note. There is no doubt about the existence of an Adv. bat (?pat) which was originally a pure onomatopoeic (see Kaş.), and came to mean 'quickly' and the like. There is no reason to doubt the authenticity of a second bat noted in Kaş., and prob. surviving in NC Kır. Finally there are two or perhaps three early occurrences of what seems to be a different word which may survive in NE Tuv.

1 bat (?pat) originally an onomatopoeic for the sound of a falling object hitting the ground, but normally used as an onomatopoeic meaning 'quickly, hurriedly'. Survives in NE Tuv. pat 'extremely' (e.g. tired) Pal. 328; SE Türki pat 'quickly, soon' Shaw, BŞ, Jarring; NC Kır. bat ditto; SC Uzb. bot ditto; SW Osm. pat ditto, and onomatopoeic. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (the child) bat tüşer 'is soon born' H I 23; bat edgü bolur 'he quickly recovers' do. 28; o.o. TT VII 28, 28 (oŋal-); 28, 37: Xak. XI one says bat kel, like the expression (VU) şap kel in telling (someone) to hurry (bi'l-isrā'); and for the sound (li-ṣawt) of anything light which falls bat tüşdi: ('it fell with a plop') Kaş. I 319: Çağ. XV ff. bat zūd wa sari' 'quick, quickly (quotn.); bat bat zūd zūd San. 119v. 13: Xwar. XIII bat 'quickly' 'Ali 47.

2 bat perhaps survives in NE Kır. bat 'glue, paste'. Xak. XI bat al-ṭacīr 'the thick juice of pressed dates' Kaş. I 319.

3 bat the first two quotns. below come fr. inscriptions of which the text is very dubious, but if rightly read may be the word which survives in NE Tuv. pat 'worthless, insignificant' Pal. 328; the third quotn. may have 1 bat in an unusual meaning. Türkü VIII (gap) yavız bat biz azığ üküsüg körtig er[sig]ti: süle[li]m 'we are in a bad way and worth very little; you have seen how few (we are) and how many (they are); let us take the field bravely' Ongin 7: O. Kır. IX ff. (gap) bat ermiş öldim 'I was worthless and died Mal. 10, 11; Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (if a man has offended the *beg*s and they contemplate killing or torturing him, their swords and saws(?) and whips break into small pieces and) neŋ bat kılu umaz 'they cannot do him harm'(?) Kuan. 27.

bét 'the (human) face'. Rare in the early period being syn. w. 2 yü:z but survives with this and extended meanings, 'cheek, the surface (of water)', etc., as bét/bet in NC Kır, Kzx.; SC Uzb; several NW languages and in SW Osm. in the phr. bet beŋiz 'complection'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (tantric) bir yegirminç isak(?) atlığ uzik ol bétl üze urğu ol 'the eleventh is the letter called isak (?); one should put it on one's face' TT VII 41, 2–5: Çağ. XV ff. bet rū wa 'ariḍ 'face, cheek' San. 119v. 19.

bit originally 'louse', but also used for 'bug' and other parasites, including those on stored products. S.i.a.m.l.g. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man.-A tonnuŋ biti 'body (lit. clothes') louse' M I 8, 14: Xak. XI bit al-qaml 'louse'; and the worm (al-dūd) which attacks wheat is called tarığ biti: Kaş. I 320: XIV Muh. al-qaml bi:t Mel. 74, 6; Rif. 177: Kom. XIV 'louse' bit CCI; Gr.: Kıp. XIII al-baqq wa'l-fasāfis 'bug' (kandala:) Tkm. beşik bitl that is 'the cradle louse' (qamlu'l-mahd) Hou. 11, 20 ff.: XIV bit al-qaml Id. 28; Bul. 11, 6: XV ditto Tuh. 29a. 8.

1 bo:ḍ prob. originally 'stature, the size of a man'; but from the earliest period it also clearly means 'a clan', the Sing. of boḍun, q.v.; the meaning underlying the latter is perhaps 'lineage' that is the size of a clan as a number of natural families. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in NE bot/pot/pos/poy, elsewhere usually boy, usually 'stature', but in NE 'self'; the meaning 'clan' is rare, but survives in SW Osm. See Doerfer II 812. Türkü VIII (the Türkü people (boḍun) died, disintegrated, and were destroyed) Türkü şiri(?) boḍun yerinte: boḍ kalmadı: 'no clan remained in the country of the fortunate(?) 2*bo:ḍ 'colour' or the like. This word seems to be the original form of boy in Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. and the basis of 1 boḍu:-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. kara boy 'black coloured' M II 11, 18 (emig).

E 3 bo:ḍ 'bustard' follows 1 bo:ḍ in Kaş. III 121; it is an obvious error for to:ḍ, q.v.; the following entry bo:ḍ monçuk presumably contains a similar error.

1 bu:t (bu:d) properly 'the thigh'; sometimes more generally 'the leg', 'the hind legs (of an animal)', and the like. The original -d, which could in any case be inferred fr. the long vowel, survives in SW Az. bud and the oblique cases (budu, etc.) in Osm. and the long vowel in Tkm. bu:t. S.i.a.m.l.g.; cf. uḍluk. Uyğ. VIII ff. (Bud. but kötürmeçe tınlığ oğlanıŋa 'for the sons of men who walk on their legs' TT VII 40, 141–2 is thus transcribed in the text, but the word is more likely to be boḍ 'having a bodily form'): Civ. kolın butın sızlatur 'it makes his arms and legs ache' TT VII 25, 2; kayu kişi[niŋ ḳolı] butı başı yomğı tepreser 'if a man's (arms,) legs, and head all twitch' do. 34, 2–3: Xak. XI bu:t al--faxid 'the thigh' *Kaş. F 2 but the normal rendering of 'Buddha' in Uyğ. Bud. is burxan, but but, prob. a l.-w. fr. the Chinese rendering of Buddha, fo (Giles 3,589; Ancient Chinese b'juət in Karlgren's Grammata Serica, No. 500 l.) occurs in namo but the Uyğ. rendering of the Sanskrit formula namo Buddhāya 'homage to the Buddha in TT IV 14, 69; VII 40, 3 etc. But in the passages below is more likely to be a l.-w. fr. Pe. than Chinese direct, but the Pe. word itself is likely to be a l.-w. for Chinese prob. through Sogdian, dating from the time when there were Buddhist temples in the Sogdian-speaking areas. Cf. burxan. See Doerfer II 716. (Xak.) XIII(?) At. öz elgin but étip iḍim bu tédi 'making an idol with his own hands he said "this is my lord" ' 124; Tef. but/but burxan 'idol' (also but xāna 'idol temple') 112: Xwar. XIV but 'idol' Qutb 38.

VU 3 bu:t (?bu:d) pec. to Kaş.; the meaning common to his two translations seems to be something like 'a valuable object'. Xak. XI bu:t the word for any 'large and precious turquoise' (fayrūzac) hung on the forelocks (al-nawāṣī) of the sons and daughters of notables; hence one says kız bu:t urdı: (MS. urı:dı:, but waḍa'at requires urdı:) waḍa'ati'l--cārīya ḍālika 'the servant maid put on that object' (presumably on the child, not herself): bu:t the word for the provision (mīra) made for anyone who brings a gift or present from a notable; for example if one man gives a horse to another, the groom is given a dīnār or a sheep, and such a sheep is called bu:t Kaş. III 120.

VU böḍ 'a royal throne'; N.o.a.b. In I S 1 the first passage quoted appears as bu öḍke: olurtım, but this seems to have been an error and is changed in II N, the later inscription. Türkü VIII (I Teŋri: teg Teŋri:de: bolmiş Türkü Bilge: Xağan) böḍke: olurtım 'have taken my seat on the throne' II N 1 (I S 1 'at this time', see above); bödke: özüm olurıp 'I myself, sitting on the throne' II E 2; böḍke: körügme begler-gü yaŋıltaçı:sız 'will you *beg*s, when you look to the throne, misbehave?' I S 11; II E 8.

butı:- 'to prune' (a tree, etc.). This was no doubt the original vocalization of this verb, cf. butık, but it became buta- early in the medieval period. böḏl:- 'to dance'. An l.-w. in Mong. as böci- (Kow. 1220, Haltod 311) which fixes the first vowel as -ö-, not -ü- as usually transcribed, but suggests that the original form was bödl:-; this links with the fact that in Kaş. this word, though spelt bödl-, is indexed under -D, see beḏü:-; but this form, if authentic, must have been a dialect pronunciation. Survives only in several NW languages as biyl-; the NC forms Kır. biyle- Kzx. bile- are Den. V.s fr. biy (bödig, q.v.). Uyğ. VIII ff. PU?F bütü:ge: this seems to be the only Turkish word for 'egg-plant' which is not certainly a l.-w. All modern Turkish languages use some form of the Pe. word, sometimes in its form as a l.-w. in Russian baklazhan, except SE Türki which has çeyze a corruption of Chinese chia-tzŭ. This suggests that this word, too, is a l.-w., prob. Iranian. The use of būta in the translation in San. suggests that the author held this view. The Kıp. meaning, which prob. represents a different word, survives in NW Kaz. büteke/bütege 'bird's gizzard' R IV 1898. Xak. XI bütü:ge: al-bādincān 'egg-plant' *Kaş. PUF bitmül one of several words for 'long pepper' going back ultimately to Sanskrit pippala, which survived almost unchanged in bibli: (?pipli:), q.v. There is an intermediate form PU pitpiti in Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. H I 7, 15, 35, 159, which is probably taken fr. some Iranian form of the word lying behind Pe. pilpil (Ar. filfil). D batma:n Dev. N. fr. bat-; etymologically 'something which sinks' (i.e. in the scales); actually a unit of weight. In the early period it was used both for liquids and solids, and judging by the contexts in which it is used cannot have been very large, perhaps about 2 pounds avoirdupois. S.i.m.m.l.g. with a very wide range of values; e.g. in SE Türki Shaw puts it at anything between 320 and 1280 lb., BS 57·3 kilos (about 113 lb.) and Jarring 573·44 kilos (about 1,130 lb.); in SC Uzb. Borovkov says that it varies from 72 to 396 lb.; while in SW Osm., Redhouse says, it varies fr. 5½ to 22 lb. Uyğ. VIII ff. D boḍun Plur. or Collective f.(?) of 1 bo:ḍ, cf. eren; lit. 'clans', in practice a semi-technical term for 'an organized tribal community, a people', in the sense of a community ruled by a particular ruler; hence, esp. in such phr. as kara: boḍun, 'the common people' in antithesis to the supreme ruler, and the subordinate tribal or clan rulers, the begs. Very common in the early period but n.o.a.b. Kaş. mentions a form boyun as current in languages in which -ḍ- had become -y-, but there is no record of the word in this sense, although it is common meaning 'neck'. Türkü VIII boḍun is perhaps the commonest word in the inscriptions; it occurs (1) by itself; (2) in the expression used by a ruler boḍunım 'my people'; (3) preceded by an ethnic name, which may be either Turkish or foreign, e.g. Türkü boḍun 'the Türkü people'; Tavğaç boḍun 'the Chinese people' (practically equivalent to 'the Chinese Empire') I S 4, 5 etc.; Soğdak boḍun 'the Sogdian people' I E 39; (2) and (3) both occur in toku:z oğuz boḍun kentü: boḍunım erti: 'the Tokkuz Oğuz people were my own (subject) people' I N 4. The later meaning occurs in kara: boḍun 'the common people' II E 41 and Türkü kara: kamağ boḍun 'all the Türkü common people' I E 8–9, II E 8, and is even clearer in I E 6, II E 6 (üçün): VIII ff. Man. türk boḍun TT II 6, 10; uluğ kiçig kamağ boḍun 'all the people great and small' do. 8, 65; begke kara boḍunka do. 8, 69: Yen. kara: boḍun Mal. 32, 6; a.o.o.: Uyğ. VIII boḍun in all usages is common in Şu., e.g. kentü: boḍunım E 2; türkü boḍun N 8 and kara: égil boḍunığ 'the common, ordinary people' E 2: VIII ff. III* 169: KB boḍun is very common, it sometimes means 'the people' as a community but more often 'people' as individuals, e.g. (the Prophet) boḍunda talusı kişide keḍi 'most excellent of people and best of men' 34; boḍun tili 'people's tongues' 194; bayudı boḍun 'the people (the community) became rich' 291: XIII(?) At. boḍun talusı 257; bir ança boḍun 'a few people' 123; 421 (ur-); Tef. boḍun is common translating al-qawm, al-ahl 'the people', al-aḥzāb 'groups of men', etc. 109 bozun ditto (once?) 110.

badar (padar?) onomatopoeic for the sound of footsteps and the like. Survives only(?) in SW Osm., Tkm. patır patır, same meaning. Cf. English patter. Xak. XI badar badar yügürdi: 'adā wa sumi'a li-'adwihi ḥafīfa(n) 'he ran and (the sound of) his footsteps was heard faintly' Kaş. I 360 (MS., in error, yadar yadar); a.o. I 349 (çalk).

F patır Sanskrit pātra 'a bowl', received through Sogdian p'ttr. N.o.a.b. Became a l.-w. in Mong. as badir (Kow. 1070); badar (Haltod 273) specifically for 'a monk's begging bowl'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. PUF butar Hap. leg.; this is the first entry in the section headed -R and precedes badar; the first letter is undotted but must be bā and carries a ḍamma, the second has two faint dots and is unvocalized; this section is not free from scribal errors (see badar) and judging by the meaning, it is likely that Kaş. actually wrote papur. Xak. XI butar ṭūṭu'l-bardi 'the papyrus reed' Kaş. I 360.

S bütrü: See bütürü.

PU?F batrak 'flag, banner, standard'. First occurs in Uyğ. as part of the panoply of demons in association with various l.-w.s of Sanskrit origin and probably itself a similar l.-w., possibly received through Sogdian. It has no obvious Turkish etymology, and its phonetic history is obscure. The Uyğ. alphabet is too ambiguous (b/p, ḏ/ḏ/t) to make its Uyğ. pronunciation certain; the second vowel was rounded but this is unparalleled elsewhere. The Xak. spelling was certainly batrak, the main entry preceding that of buçğak; it was originally the same elsewhere, but some later user of the MS. added two dots below the tā, and this caused the spelling bayrak in the printed edition. By Çağ. the word had in fact become bayrak and this is the form in all modern SE, SC, NW, and SW languages in which the word survives; there must therefore have been, subsequent to Xak., an evolution batrak > badrak > baḏrak > bayrak, the intermediate stages of which are lost. See Doerfer II 727, 824. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (the demons holding in their hands) trzul (PU) batruk 'tridents (Sanskrit triśula) and flags' U IV 8, 9; trzul (PU) batruk vjırlığ tokımak 'tridents, flags, thunderbolt (vajra) maces' do. 8, 39–40; trzul (PU) batruk çkir bındıpal 'tridents, flags, wheels (cakra), and lances (bhindipāla)' do. 20, 236–7: Xak. XI batrak 'a lance (maṭrada) with a piece of silk at its head which a champion uses as a badge (yatasawwam) on the day of battle' Kaş. I 465; ağdı: kızıl batrak 'the red flag (al-'alam) was raised' III 183, 6; a.o. II 205, 2 (talpış-): Çağ. XV ff. bayrak (spelt) 'alam-i kūçik 'a small flag'; also 'the winning-post' (qaṣabu'l-sabq) in a race San. 128r. 6.

VUD boḏrak Hap. leg. in a rather well-preserved inscription. Mal. identifies this with a Çağ. word botrak (P. de C. 161, not in San.) 'scattered', but this is impossible since that word is der. fr. botra- which is not Turkish but a corruption of Mong. bōte'ere- (Kow. 1231, Haltod 309). Perhaps der. fr. 1 bo:ḏ, but -rak is normally attached to Adjs. not Nouns. O. Kır. IX ff. (I have been parted) bıŋ boḏrak yuntım sizime: 'you, my thousand sturdy(?) horses' Mal. 45, 8.

?F bitrik pec. to Xak.; no doubt the basic meaning is 'pistachio nut' and a l.-w. fr. some Iranian language, cf. Pe. pistih. Xak. XI bitrik bazru'l-mar'a 'clitoris'; Arğu: XI bitrik al-fustuq 'pistachio nut' Kaş. I 476.

F baḏram 'merriment' and the like, hence 'a feast'. No doubt an Iranian l.-w., cf. Pe. baḏrām 'a delightsome place' (Steingass). S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE as bayram (in NC Kır. mayram; Kzx. méyram) as the Turkish equivalent of Arabic al-'īd 'a (Moslem) feast'. See Doerfer II 823. Xak. XI baḏram al-surūr wa'l-ḍaḥika bayna'l-qawm 'general merriment and laughter', and the ground (al-arḍ) when it is covered with flowers and blossoms, is called baḏram yé:r arḍ naziha 'pleasant ground'; I do not know what its origin (aṣluhu) is because I have heard it from the lips of Persians (al-furs), but the Oğuz call 'the (Moslem) feast day' (yawma'l-'īd) bayram that is 'a day of pleasant merriment'; the -ḏ- being changed to -y- as is their custom; it is a genuine word (luġa maḥḍa, i.e. pure Turkish?) in this sense Kaş. I 484; a.o. I 263, 11 (avın-): XIII(?) Tef. bayram 'religious feast' 89: Çağ. XV ff. bayram al-'īd San. 128r. 7 (quotn.; also 'a kind of cotton fabric like 'Irāqī linen but finer' (quotn.); there is no other trace of this meaning): Oğuz XI bayram al-'īd; I reckon that it is an alteration of the popular word (qawlu'l-nās) baḏram meaning 'merriment and enjoyment'; the (Moslem) feast day is a day of merriment. The pagans do not have a feast day or consequently a word for it; if there was one, all the Turks would know it, but the only ones who know this (word in this sense) are those who have turned -ḏ- into -y- in their language Kaş. III 176: Xwar. XIV bayram 'the (Moslem) feast' MN 20, etc.

PUD buturğa:k Dev. N. in -ğa:k (connoting habitual action); there is no verb butur- and this would be much more easily explained as tuturğa:k der. fr. tutur- but R IV 1857 records a NC Tara word buturğak 'a tree which has split and is bound round to save it from collapse', so the form may be correct although Radloff's Tara entries are rather suspect. Xak. XI buturğa:k 'a thorn tree (şawk) shaped like a pistachio tree (al-fustuq), which has thorns (ma'ālīq) which catch the clothing, etc. *Kaş. (F) bağa:tu:r by origin almost certainly a Hunnish (Hsiung-nu) Proper Name, and more specifically that of the second Hsiung-nu shan-yü (209–174 B.C.) whose name was transcribed by the Chinese as Mao-tun (Giles 7,699 12,221; Old Chinese prob. something like mog-tun). The word occurs only once in the early period and then still as a P.N. but was an early l.-w. in Mong. as ba'atur (Haenisch 11)/bağatur (Kow. 1058), primarily as an element in P.N.s, e.g. Yesügei Ba'atur (Haenisch 184) but also as a common noun meaning 'picked warrior'. It is prob. that the transition from name to noun took place in Mong.; Turkish had other words like alpa:ğut with this meaning. The word reappears in Turkish in the medieval period generally in forms with medial -h- which suggest that the immediate source was Pe. S.i.s.m.l. in SE, NC, SC, and NW as batır/batur, R IV 1511–15, which seem to be direct borrowings fr. Mong. See Doerfer II 817 and Studies, p. 19. Türkü VIII ff. atım Bağa:tu:r Çiğşi: 'my name is Bağa:tu:r Çiğşi:' *Tun.
