F bağşı: l.-w. fr. As bağşı: is the most probable pronunciation of the Chinese phr. at the date when it was borrowed, the word was prob. so pronounced in Uyğ., where it is common, but as -ğş- is not a possible combination in pure Turkish words (see Studies, p. 169) it no doubt fairly soon became baxşı:. There is no trace of the word between Uyğ. and Kom. XIV/Çağ. XV ff., and it is prob. that when it re-appeared it had been reborrowed fr. Mong.; by this time it meant 'a scribe' and more specifically 'a scribe able to write in the Uyğ. (or rather Mongolian official) alphabet' (see Studies, pp. 175 ff.). F be:g originally 'the head of a clan, or tribe, a subordinate chief', and the like. C.i.à.p.a.l. from the earliest period, but almost certainly a l.-w. fr. Chinese po 'the head of a hundred men' (Giles 9,358; 'Ancient Chinese' (Karlgren' pwk). Survives with some phonetic changes (b-/p-; -e-/-é-; -ğ/-y) and alterations in meaning parallel to the alterations in social structure; e.g. in the Ottoman Empire it came to mean 'a junior administrative officer' and finally hardly more than a complimentary title given to members of the gentry. 1 bük- Kaş. gives two meanings (1) 'to bend, bow', and the like (Intrans.); (2) 'to feel aversion, be revolted by (something Abl.)', but later usages and the Pass. f. bükül- show that it was a Trans. V. w. the Object sometimes understood. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually in the first sense but w. an Object stated. Exceptionally NC Kır. distinguishes between bük- 'to bend' and bökö- 'to feel aversion', but it is unlikely that this reflects a genuine original phonetic difference between two verbs with different meanings. Cf. yükün-. Xak. XI ol meni: körüp bükdi: 'when he saw me he cleaved to the ground and was humble, hiding himself' (laṭā bi'l-arḍ wa'nxafaḍa mutakammina(n)); and one says ol aşdın bükdi: 'he was revolted (ṣabi'a) by the food, so that he loathed it and was disgusted'; and one says ol tava:rka: bükdi: translated 'his eye was filled (imtala'a) with wealth, etc.', i.e. 'he was greedy for wealth' *Kaş. DF beglig P.N./A. fr. beg.
DF beglik A.N. (sometimes used as Conc. N.) fr. beg. These two words must be taken together since to a large extent they have the same meanings, and in most texts the scripts are too ambiguous to make it possible to determine which word is intended. The P.N./A. usually means 'having the rank, or status of beg', less often it means 'having a chief, or a husband'. The A.N. originally meant 'the rank or status of beg', or 'fit to hold such a rank'. Later it came to mean 'a district governed by a beg'. Beglig now seems to be obsolete, but beglik with various phonetic changes (see beg) s.i.a.m.l.g. except NE with some changes of meaning, e.g. in NC Kır biylik is the normal word for 'a government' and SW Osm. beylik often has that sense. Türkü VIII tavğaç boḍunka: beglik urı: kul boltı: (corrected in II to kiltı:) 'they made your sons who were fit to be chiefs slaves to the Chinese people' I E 7, II E 7; similar phr. I E 24, II E 20; VIII ff. nelük ölgey ol begli:g ol 'why should it die? bol- originally 'to become (something)', implying a change of state, in contrast to er- 'to be (something)' with the contrary implication. From a fairly early date, however, bol- began to lose its distinctive character and verge, at any rate sometimes, towards 'to be', and when some tenses of er- became obsolete they were usually replaced by tenses of bol- (but see 1 tur-). C.i.a.p.a.l. For unknown reasons the b- was elided in some Western languages at an early date, prob. through an intermediate form with w-. Today ol- is the only form in SW Az., Osm. (but not Tkm.) and occurs sporadically elsewhere, but only under the influence of Osm.; otherwise the form is bol- with minor phonetic changes. Türkü VIII bol- is common and always implies a change of state; e.g. (the xağan died and) boğunı: küŋ kul boltı: 'his people became maidservants and slaves' I E 20, II E 17; it also occurs in the phr. yok bol- 'to cease to exist', e.g. türkü boğun yok bolmazu:n 'may the Türkü people not cease to exist' I E 11, II E 10: VIII ff. (the sun rose) kamağ üze: yaruk boltı: 'it became light everywhere' IrkB 26; bir tavılku: yüz boltı: yüz tavılku: miŋ boltı: 'one spiraea became a hundred, and a hundred spiraeas became a thousand' do. 32; a.o.o.: Man. nığoşak boltumuz 'we have become Hearers (l.-w.)' Chuas. 176; nede ötrü yok bolğay 'why will he cease to exist?' do. 169; antada késre ne bolğay 'what will happen after that?' do. 172; a.o.o. Uyğ. VIII the title of the author of the Şine-usu inscription was teŋri:de: bolmış él étmiş bilge: xağan 'the wise xağan who came into existence in (or from?) heaven and organized the realm' N 1; both bol- and yok bol- are common: IX oğlanım erde: marımınça: bol 'my sons, come to be like my teacher among men' Suci 9: VIII ff. (but if he loses the third) bolmaz 'he cannot' TT V 26, 109–10: Civ. bol- 'to become' is common; in such phr. as maŋa . . . bor kergek bolup 'since I needed, or came to need, wine', USp. 1, 3, the drift in meaning is beginning: O. bul- 'to find' with some extensions of meaning, 'to obtain' and the like. The relationship between this word and the synonymous 2 tap- is discussed in Clauson, Türkçe sözler üzerinde araştırmalar, Jean Deny Armağanı, Ankara, 1958, p. 68; briefly bul-, though common in the earlier period, now survives only in SW Osm., all other languages, even Az., Tkm. having tap-. baldır, etc. Preliminary note. Kaş. mentions five different words with these consonants variously vocalized, of which the last two present no particular problems. The first is mentioned twice, the second twice, and the third three times followed by the sentence wa hāḏihi'l-arba'a bi-işbā'i'l-bā' 'and these four have back vowels'; the problem is which four? The first word seems to be identical with the well-known word beltir, there is no difficulty about the difference between -d- and -t-, cf. baltu:, Kaş. baldu:; the 'four' therefore which have back vowels seem to be the second word, the two mentions being taken as identical, and the three occurrences of the third. These two words therefore, which are pec. to Kaş., can be taken as baldır. There is another well-known word baltır not mentioned by Kaş.

1 baldır Hap. leg.; cf. baldız. Xak. XI baldır oğul al-rabīb 'step-son' (or 'foster-child'?); baldır kı:z al-rabība 'step-daughter' (ditto) Kaş. I 456.

2 baldır Hap. leg., but perhaps a mis-spelling or Sec. f. of bıldır, which seems to be connected semantically. Xak. XI baldır tarığ al-zar'u'llaḏī ḫuriṭa fi ibtidā'i'l-rabī' wa ḏālika azkā lahu 'a crop which is sown in the beginning of the spring, and that is the most thriving sort'; and anything that is done at the first possible opportunity (fi ibtidā' awānihi) is called baldır; and one says baldır kuzı: for 'a lamb born at the beginning of the lambing season' (fi ibtidā'i'l-natāc) Kaş. I 456.

baltır properly 'the calf of the leg'; in some modern languages other adjacent parts of the leg. S.i.a.m.l.g. except SE(?) with some phonetic changes. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (on the second day it is in the heel) üç yapıda baltırda 'on the third in the calf' TT VII 20, 5–6: (Xak.) XIV Muh.(?) laḥmu'l-sāq 'the fleshy part of the (lower) leg' ba:ltır Rif. 142 (only): Çağ. XV ff. baltır güşt-i narm ki dar qalam-i pā bāşad 'the soft flesh on the shin-bone'; Naşīri mistranslated it as rān 'thigh' San. 127r. 2: Kıp. XIII al-sāq baltır (misvocalized baltar) Hou. 21, 6: XIV baltır laḥmatu'l-sāq İd. 36: XV al-sāq baltır Kav. 61, 7; Tuh., 18b. 13.

beltir 'the junction of two or more roads or rivers'. An early l.-w. in Mong. as belçir (Haenisch 14, Kow. 1116, the -ç- implies -t- not -d-). Survives in NE several dialects peltir R IV 1246; Khak. pıltır; Tuv. beldir. Uyğ. VIII (I spent the summer there, west of Iduk Baş) yavaş (VU) tokuş beltiri:nte: 'at the junction of the Yavaş and Tokuş (rivers)' Şu. E 9; a.o. S 10 (örgi:-): VIII ff. Bud. balık ortusında beltirde 'at a cross-roads in the middle of the town' PP 70, 5; o.o. U IV 8, 3 and 13 (U I 39, 3 and 13); Hüen-ts. 1939: Civ. tört beltirindeki toprak 'earth from the junction of four roads' H I 114; (if a man unfit to be a beg becomes a beg) beltir sayu berge salur 'he lays on the whip at every cross-roads' TT VII 42, 5: Xak. XI beldir ra'nu'l-cabal 'the crest or a mountain' (i.e, the point where the slopes on each side meet); one says ta:ğ beldiri: Kaş. I 456.

bıldır 'last year'; Radloff's suggestion that it is a crasis of the purely modern phr. bir yıl dır is, of course, preposterous. Survives in NE Alt., Tel. pıltır R IV 1315; Khak. pıltır; NC Kır., Kzx. bıltır; SC bultur NW Kaz. bıltır; SW Az., Tkm. bildir, Osm. bıldır. It is an open question whether SE Türki baldır/baldur, etc. Shaw 45; BŞ 55; Jarring 47 'before, formerly, earlier' is a survival of this word or 2 baldır but suggests that they may originally have been identical. Xak. XI bıldır al-'āmu'l-māḍī 'last year' Kaş. I 456: Çağ. XV ff. bıltur pār-sāl ditto San. 149v. 13 (quotn.): Kıp. XIII al-'āmu'l-māḍī bıltır Hou. 28, 7: XV ditto İd. 36; al-'āmu'l-awwal bal-ṭur(d) (sic) Bul. 13, 14: XV al-sanatu'l-māḍīya bıltır yıl Kav. 36, 12; sana (yıl wa) bıltır Tuh. 19b. 11; māḍī bıltır do. 35a. 9: Osm. XIV buldur in one text; XV ff. bıldır in several dicts. TTS II 136; III 89; IV 99.

VU buldur a reduplicated onomatopoeic of ɨ type common in Turkish languages; the only direct parallel seems to be NC Kzx. buldur buldur 'glittering' or 'rapidly, noisily' R IV 1853 (not in MM); cf. also SW Osm. güldür. Xak. XII a:ş kuḏuğka: tüşti: buldur buldur étti: 'the stone fell down the well and the noise of its fall rose like this onomatopoeic' (miṯl hādhi'l-ḥikāya) Kaş. I 456.

baldız 'a man's wife's younger sister'. Survives in this meaning in NW Kaz. and SW Az., Osm., Tkm., and also in NC Kır., Kzx. but according to MM 68 in Kzx. it also means 'younger sister' and even 'brother-in-law'. The last usage must be quite modern, but the use of the phr. eke baldız in Uyğ. directly parallel to éçi ini suggests that it was also sometimes used in the sense of 'younger sister' even in Uyğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Suv. 554, 15–16 (eke:): Xak. XI baldız uxtu'l-mar'ati'l-şuğrā 'a (man's) wife's younger sister'; a man's sister is called siŋil, not baldız Kaş. I 457; a.o. III 7 (yurç): XIII(?) Tef. 72 (eke:), 90: XIV Muh.(?) uxtu'l-mar'a ba:ldu:z Rif. 144 (only).

D?F bilet- Caus. f. of bile:-. Survives in SW Osm. Xak. XI ol biçe:k biletti: asanna (MS. here amarra, but asanna in a.o.) 'l-sikkin wa amara bi-imhāyihi 'alā'l-misann 'he had the knife whetted and ordered that it should be sharpened on the whetstone' *Kaş. D bulat- Caus. f. of bula:-; Hap. leg.? (see bula:-); the translation shows that this is a Caus. f. and the statement that the form was originally bu:laḍ- arises fr. a false analogy with Den. V.s in -ḍ-. Xak. XI ol ku:zı: bulattı: amara bi-ṭabxi'l-ḥamal ʿfī buxāri'l-qidr 'he ordered that the lamb should be cooked in the steam of the cooking pot'; also used of anything that is cooked in the steam of the cooking pot; bu:la:ḍtı: aṣl⟨uhu⟩ fa-ḥudifati'l-wāw taḫfifa(n) was the original form; then the (long) wāw was elided to shorten it (fa-udğima 'and it was contracted' is added between the lines, perhaps later) *Kaş. Man. avış tamu emgekin biltürtüŋüz 'you have made known the pains of the avici (Sanskrit) hell' TT III 58–9: Bud.

biltürmedin 'without informing' v.l. in TT VI 355 (bildüz-): Xak. XI ol maŋa: i:ş biltürdi: 'arrafanī'l-amr wa a'lamanihi 'he made the matter known to me and informed me of it' *Kaş. D bultur- Caus. f. of bul-; 'to make, or let (someone Dat.) find (something Acc.)'. N.o.a.b.; the parallel Caus. f. of bol- s.i.s.m.l. but is not noted before Kıp. XIV Id. 35 and perhaps Çağ. XV ff. San. 140v. 6, the translation given here, however, does not really suit either word. The entry in Bul. seems to belong here. Cf. bulduz-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (you have shown us . . . you have erected . . .[gap]) bulturtuŋuz 'you have made us find' TT III 55: Bud. tınlığ oğlanıŋa bulturayın nırvanığ 'let me cause (or help?) the children of men to find nirvāṇa' TT VII 40, 142: Kıp. XIV kaffā 'to give enough'(?) buldur- Bul. 77v.

D bulğama: Pass. Dev. N. fr. bulğa:-; 'gruel', lit. 'something stirred together'. In the medieval period replaced by parallel Dev. PUF bulğuna: Hap. leg.; no doubt a l.-w. Malğūna is a perfectly regular, but rare, Ar. Pass. ben the 1st Pers. Sing. Pron. 'I'. C.i.a.p.a.l. The vocalization is irregular, the Dat. having apparently always had back vowels. In the other cases the vowel was almost certainly -e-, but spellings with -é- are fairly common in some languages; it is possible that in some languages, as in the case of sen, the vowel became -é- when the word was used as a Predicate. The word was originally ben, but except in the Oğuz dialects became men by assimilation at an early date; it is one of the criteria for differentiating between Türkü VIII ff. Yen., and O. Kır. Ben now survives only in SW Osm., in all other languages, including SW Az., Tkm., it is now men. The original sound is preserved in Çuv. ep/epĕ 'I' Ash. III 20–1, but here too the base of the oblique cases is man do. VIII 190. Türkü VIII ben (beni:, beniŋ, baŋa:) is common, and the only form in T, and perhaps occurs in Ix. 27 (damaged); men (meniŋ) is the only form in I and II: VIII ff. men is common in IrkB; maŋa: *Toyok IV*v. 3 (ETY II 180): Man. mén (Predicate) Chuas. 135–6: Yen. men Mal. 28, 7; 29, 1; 32, 7: Uyğ. VIII ben occurs seven times in Şu. and men once: IX men three times in Suci: VIII ff. ba:r Kaş 's definition of this word as a Particle (ḥarf) connoting existence, or presence in a particular place, and as the opposite of yo:k, q.v., is very apt. It is in fact nearly always used as the predicate of a sentence, the subject being either stated or inferred. In this usage, therefore, it is of the nature of a Verb, but it cannot be conjugated and must be supplemented by an Aux. V., I er- or the like, if a mood or tense form is required. Its use as a Noun meaning 'existence' or 'property' (the latter meaning uncertain, if authentic, ? an abbreviation of barım) is unusual. C.i.a.p.a.l.; one of the three basic words in which the initial has become v- in SW Az. and Osm. (but not Tkm.), cf. bar-, bér-. Türkü VIII (because heaven so ordained and) özüm kutım bar üçü:n 'because I myself had the favour of heaven' I S 9, II N 7; similar phr. I E 29, II E 23; ol eki: kişi: bar erser 'since there are those two men' T 10; similar phr. T 30, 57; o.o. I S 10, II N 8; T 14: VIII ff. IrkB 18 (connoting existence; I bağış); o.o. do. 32, 57; Toy. 14 (with Gen. connoting possession, belgü:): Man. F bére: a measure of length; n.o.a.b., but a l.-w. in Mong. as bere (Kow. 1126) where it is taken as equivalent to Sanskrit yojana 'a mile of 8,000 yards'. Obviously a l.-w., which, as it is certainly not Chinese and does not look Iranian, is prob. Tokharian. Phonetically the only suitable equivalent is B prere; A pārra 'an arrow', which if taken to mean 'a bow shot', which is a unit of length at any rate in Çağ. (see atım), might have such a sense. This explanation is not, however, self-evident. Uyğ. VIII ff. ?D berü: (?bérü:) an Adv. used both of time and of space, meaning broadly 'to this side, on this side'. The phonetics of this word are obscure. So far as the first vowel is concerned the Türkü spellings of cognate words point more to -é- than -e-, and there are sporadic spellings with -é- later, but the evidence for -é- is not conclusive. The word does not occur in Türkü VIII (the word sometimes so read in T 26, 28 is evirü:) and the spellings of cognate forms in Türkü and Uyğ. are more easily derived fr. ber (?bér) than this word. It is, therefore, prob. that berü: is itself a der. f., a crasis of berrü:, that is ber (?bér) with the Directional Suff. -rü: and this is corroborated by the fact that it is often used in antithesis to VUD borça: Hap. leg.; Equative f. of 2 bo:r (?), which from the context must be something violent. V. Thomsen (Turcica 94, note 2) suggested that there was an old word bor meaning 'a storm', of which NE, NC bora- 'to be stormy' R IV 1662 was the Den. V.; and it has been suggested that SW Osm. bora 'a violent wind' is a later form. This is not wholly impossible, but it is more probable that Osm. bora is a corruption of Greek boreas 'north wind', and it is very odd that, if there really was a word bor meaning anything as ordinary as 'a storm', there should be no other trace of it. It is more likely that this is the Equative f. of 1 bo:r 'wine' with the implication that too much wine leads to disorder. Türkü VIII Türgeş xağan süsi: Bolçu:da: otça: borça: kelti: 'the Türgeş xağan's army advanced from Bolçu: like a fire or . . .' I E 37; II E 27.

?D bark perhaps Den. N. fr. ba:r; 'movable property, household goods'; hardly ever used by itself, nearly always in the phr. ev bark 'dwelling and household goods'. barak 'a long-haired dog'. Survives in NC Kir., Kzx.; some NW languages and SW Osm. in its original meaning and sometimes more generally for 'shaggy, long-haired' of other animals, rugs, etc. See Doerfer II 728. Xak. XI barak 'a long-haired (ahlab) dog'; the Turks believe that when a vulture (al-nasr) gets old it lays two eggs and incubates them; and out of one of them there hatches this dog which is called barak, and is the swiftest and the best hunter of all dogs, and out of the other a chick, and this is its last brood ' *Kaş. ?D burkı: 'wrinkled'; n.o.a.b. The morphological relationship between this and other connected words is obscure; burkığ and burkıt- look like Dev. N. and Caus. f. of burk- and burkur- like a Den. V. fr. this word. The two groups can be joined only by assuming that this word is a Dev. N. fr. burk- 'to be wrinkled'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. koxşa:k bu:rkı (spelt pu:rké) bolor 'he becomes weak and wrinkled' *TT VIII I.*4: Xak. XI anything which has wrinkles (ğuḍūn) in it is called burkı: ne:ŋ, for example a frowning face (al-wachu'l-'abūs) with a wrinkled forehead *Kaş. D bırkığ Hap. leg.; (of a horse, etc.) 'a snort'. Presumably Dev. N. fr. bırk- or bırkı:-; the only cognate word is bırkır-, q.v., and there are the same morphological problems as in the case of burkı: q.v. NE Tuv. bılğı 'snort' is presumably a corruption of this word. Xak. XI bırkığ 'the snort (naxīr) of a horse or donkey'; one says at bırkığı: Kaş. I 461.

D burkığ Hap. leg.; completely unvocalized and the b- undotted (but, being between bırkığ and başla:ğ, must be b-). See burkı:, presumably Dev. N. fr. burk-. Xak. XI burkığ inziwā'u'l-cild wa ğayrihi 'a wrinkle in the skin, etc.' Kaş. I 461.

E barğan See bazğan.

D barkın (?barkı:n) Dev. N./A. fr. bar-; the word is in a section of which the heading 'fu'lān/fi'lān variously vocalized', requires a long vowel in the Suff., which seems to be unique but is presumably a Sec. f. of -ğı:n. Pec. to Xak. Xak. XI barkın kişi: 'a traveller (al-raculu'l-musāfir) whom nothing turns aside from his objective' Kaş. I 440: KB (I treat all people alike, whether they are my son, or a neighbour, or stranger) kerek barkın erse keçigli konuk 'or a guest passing through and determined to push on' 817; kişi barkını 'a man who has travelled widely' 4326; a.o. 4727.

CF burxan compound of Chinese fu (Giles 3,589) and presumably xan. The Chinese character was the one chosen to transcribe Buddha, and was pronounced approximately bur in NW China in VII–VIII. This word, corresponding properly to some phr. like Buddharājā, was the one chosen to represent Buddha in the earliest Turkish translations of Buddhist scriptures, which must have anteceded the appearance of Manichaeism among the Turks, and was taken over by the Manichaean missionaries to translate words like 'prophet' applied e.g. to Mani himself. In the Moslem period, like 2 but, q.v. it came to mean 'idol' and still survives in one or two NE languages purkan R IV 1386; Tuv. burğan 'God' and in NC Kir. epics burkan 'idol'. See Doerfer II 732. Türkü VIII ff. Man. burxan, usually in the Plur., is common in Chuas., e.g. teŋri yalavaçı burxanlar 'God's messengers, the burxans' 64–5, 69; 'the burxans and the pure Elect' 133; the god Zurvan, the sun and moon gods, the mighty god and the burxans 173–5; teŋri Manı burxan M III 15, 7 (i): Uyğ. VIII ff. VU bo:rğu:y 'trumpet'; the phonetics are chaotic and it may well be a l.-w. Kaş. alone has final -y; Muh. may point to -o- and Kom. points to -u- in the first syllable, but it survives in some NE and NW languages as birğı/pırğı and in SW Az., Osm. as boru. See Doerfer II 735. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. borğu 'trumpet' in Maitrisimit, see 'Ali 51: Xak. XI bo:rğu:y (in a section for words ending in a long vowel followed by -y) 'the trumpet' (al-ṣabbūr) which is blown *Kaş. C birök Adv. or Conjunction; bi:r with ök (2 ok) attached. A word of very indefinite meaning used at or near the beginning of sentences; v. G. (ATG, para. 417) translates it 'nun, aber' ('well, but, however'); but it is doubtful whether it had even as precise a meaning as this. Except for one occurrence in Türkü, it seems to occur only in Conditional sentences, sometimes in the phr. apam birök (see apaŋ). It is therefore often translated 'if', but this sense is inherent in the Verb even if birök is absent. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. Man. birök follows a finite Verb and seems to qualify a Ger. in -üp followed by another finite Verb M I 6, 1; it begins a Cond. sentence TT II 6, 20; 10, 93: Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. apam birök followed by Cond. sentence TT III 64: Bud. birök introducing a Cond. sentence is common TT IV 6, 25; V 26, 92–3; 28, 121; VII 40, 22 etc.; *VIII B.*1, etc.: Civ. every major para. in TT I begins birök . . . atlığ ırk kelser 'if the hexagram named . . . appears'; a.o.o.: XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict. ju huo 'if' (Giles 5,668 5,316) birök me U I 56 (s.v. birök).

D bürük Pass. Conc. N. fr. bür-. Survives in SE Türki bürük 'pucker, gather' Shaw 48 (only). It is an open question whether börek, 'a stuffed pancake', is also a later form of this word. It has no other obvious etymology, but is consistently spelt with -ö- in SC XIX Xiva Vam. 246; several NW languages: SW Osm., Tkm. Xak. XI bürük 'any circular draw-string' (xayṭ mudawwar) like that in the mouth of a leather food bag or the top of the trousers and the like Kaş. I 385: (Kıp. XIV börek 'pieces of dough stuffed with meat'; and when it is eaten on a skewer it is called siş börek Id. 30; similar entry, adding 'if stuffed with sugar called çeker börek' Bul. 8, 12).

berge: 'a whip'; an old word ending in -ge:. It is suggested in TT IV, p. 18, note B47 that it is a l.-w. fr. Latin virga 'a rod, stick' obtained through Middle Pe. but there does not seem to be any trace of the word in Pe., and the theory is improbable. N.o.a.b., completely displaced by the syn. word kamçı:, q.v. Cf. kağıl. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. temir berge 'an iron whip' TT V 10, 93; o.o. TT IV 10, 7 (and see note thereon) etc. (beğük), Suv. 5, 23 (biregü): Civ. kamçı bérge yép 'being flogged' USp. 55, 34; a.o. TT VII 42, 5 (beltir): Xak. XI berge: 'a rod or whip (al-qaḍīb wa'l-sawṭ) used to flog thieves or drive donkeys' *Kaş. D bé:rgü: Dev. N. fr. bé:r-; 'something which ought to be, or is, given'. Survives in SW Osm. vérgü/vergi 'gift, tax'; Tkm. bergi 'debt'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (I bought a skin of wine) sekiz sıtır kümüş bérgüke 'at a price of 8 sıtır in cash' Fam. Arch., l. 114: Xak. XI bé:rgü: al-dayn 'a debt'; one says anıŋ maŋa: bi:r at bé:rgü:sı:ba:r 'he owes me one horse' Kaş. I 427: Xwar. XIII(?) (he made friends) yaxşı bérgü birle 'with goodly gifts' Oğ. 122; a.o. 195.

bürge: an old word ending in -ge:; 'flea'. An early (XIV) l.-w. in Mong. (see Haenisch, Sino-mongolische Glossare I (ADAW, 1957), p. 13, No. 179); survives as bürge and the like in SE Türki; NC Kır., Kzx.; SC Uzb.; NW Kk. and in SW Osm. pire, Tkm. büre. There is an irregular form NW Kaz. borça; Krım. Kumyk bürçe; Nog. bürşe, and see below, perhaps an abbreviated Dim. f. Xak. XI bürge: al-barğūṭ 'flea'; and a light-hearted fickle (al-ṭayyāş) man is called bürge: kişi: *Kaş. PUD bürgü:ç Hap. leg.; spelt yergü:ç in the MS. but its position between boğraç (P.N.)

and bösgeç indicates initial b- and the meaning shows it to be a N.I. fr. bür-. There are many words in SW xx Anat. with this meaning and termination der. fr. syn. verbs, see e.g. evirgeç SDD 559. Xak. XI bürgüç 'a piece of wood (xaṣaba) shaped like a sword used to turn bread in the oven' *Kaş. bürkür- (?p-) 'to spurt, gush'. Etymologically connected with bürkek. Morphologically difficult; it is possible that this is an Intrans. Den. V. and bürkek a Den. N. fr. burk (?p-) which might be an onomatopoeic for the sound of spurting. The modern forms mostly lack the final -r-. Survives in NE Alt., Tel. pürkü- pürkür- 'to splutter' R IV 1399; Khak. pürgür-; SE Türki pürkü- BS; pürk- Jarring; NC Kır., Kzx. bürk-; SC Uzb. purka-; NW Kaz. börk-; Kk., Kumyk bürk-; Nog. bürkü-. Xak. XI kö:k bürkürdi: dacanati'l-samā' 'the heavens poured down rain'; and one says yuğuçı: to:nka: su:v bürkürdi: raṣṣa'l-qaṣṣāru'l-mā' 'alā'l--ṯawb li-yabullahu 'the fuller sprayed water on the garment to moisten it' (irregular; the Verb is Intrans., perhaps an error of the author's for bürkürttı:); and one says ka:n bürkürdi: 'blood gushed (na'ara) from the wound' *Kaş. ?D birle: 'with'; Grønbech in Der türkische Sprachbau, p. 35, describes this and üçün, üze:, and teg as the four old Turkish Postposns. also used as Advs.; he analyses it as bi:r with 'emphatic' Particle -la:, but there is no other trace of such a Particle. The word is obviously very old, and it seems more reasonable to analyse it as an abbreviated Ger. of a Den. V. fr. bi:r, birle:- which occurs as a V. meaning 'to unite' (Trans.) in Xwar. XIII(?) a.o.o. The -r- began to be elided at an early date, producing the f. bile, but in some modern languages this has been further abraded and words quite unlike the original have resulted; a long list of these forms will be found in N. F. Katanov, Opyt issledovaniya uryankhaiskogo yazyka, Kazan, 1903, p. 151. Broadly speaking in NE the word survives more or less unchanged as in Tuv. bile or grossly deformed as in Khak. mınan; in SE Jarring records birle/bile/vile/birlen/bilen/vilen; NC Kır. men/menen; Kzx. ben/pen/men; SC Uzb. bilan; in NW all the forms found in NC as well as more conventional ones; SW Az., Osm. ile; Tkm. bile/bilen. As a Postposn. birle: has much the same meanings (comitative, instrumental) as English 'with'. At some unknown date, but as early as Xak. it came to be used as an Adv. meaning 'even', and in Osm., while as a Postposn. it is ile, as an Adv. it is still bile, see Deny, Grammaire de la langue turque, Paris, 1920, para. 437. Türkü VIII birle: 'with' occurs in a simple comitative sense, e.g. eçim xağan birle: 'with my uncle the xağan' I E 17, II E 15, or with the indirect Obj. after verbs like 'to come to an agreement' I S 4,

II N 3 (tüzül-) and süŋüş- 'to fight' I E 35; I N 1: VIII ff. burun lit. 'the nose' (of a human being or animal), 'the beak' (of a bird) and the like; hence 'a protruding natural feature, headland, peak (of a mountain)'; hence metaph. 'in front, preceding', and by a further development 'preceding in times, previous'. S.i.a.m.l.g., but not everywhere in the full range of meanings. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. burnında boz bulıt ünür 'a grey cloud rises from her nose' M II 11, 19: Bud. körtle burunı 'her beautiful nose' U IV 30, 50; (the elephant) burun éligin işletip 'putting the hand of its trunk to work' TT V 24, 51: Civ. bu kişi burunda etöz emgenmiş 'this man at first had a painful body' TT VII 28, 46; biznıŋ burun bérgüçi (a servant) 'whom we gave previously' USp. 14, 9: Xak. XI burun al-anf 'the nose'; burun ra'su'l-cabal 'the peak of a mountain'; one says ta:ğ burunı:: and 'the first (al-awwal) of anything' is called burun; one says ol mendin burun bardı: 'he went ahead of me' (qudāmī);

VU?D buruŋ Hap. leg.; it is possible that this is merely another meaning of bürüŋ which follows it, though the semantic connection is not obvious, but the fact that the second is described specifically (and exceptionally) as 'with front vowels' suggests that they were pronounced differently. This word can hardly be derived fr. bu:r- Xak. XI buruŋ al-ğalwa li'l-ramy 'the distance of a bow-shot'; one says buruŋ attı: 'he shot a (full) bow-shot' Kaş. III 370.

D birinç Ordinal f. of bi:r; 'first'. As Kaş. points out, relatively rare, since at all times other words have tended to be used in this sense, e.g. in the earlier period ilk/ilki:, baştınkı:, etc. and in modern languages the Ar. l.-w. awwal. It is, however, the only word for 'first' after a ten, i.e. eleventh, twenty-first, etc. S.i.a.m.l.g., except NE, in the longer form birinçı: and the like, which displaced birinç before XIV. Xak. XI birinç ne:ŋ 'first' of something; a regular form but rarely used (luğa qiyāsīya qalīlatu'l-isti'māl) *Kaş. Suff. burunğısı: (bırıngısı:) Kav. 67, 11 ff.; in a para. on the Ordinals in Tuh. 61b. 1 ff. it is said that neither birinci nor onuncı can be used by themselves because -inci means 'following' and neither 'one' nor 'ten' can follow a previous number, but birinci can be used in such expressions as on birinci; in 3b. 10; 62b. 1 awwal is translated ilk.

F bars (p-) a very early Iranian l.-w., but from which Iranian language it was taken is uncertain. Properly 'leopard' but in Turkish apparently also used for other large felines. One of the animals of the 12-year animal cycle and so, at any rate in this context, an early l.-w. in Mong. S.i.m.m.l.g., but when, as in SW Osm., the form is pars no doubt a recent borrowing fr. VU bursla:n Hap. leg.; the text of Kaş. is rather incoherent but it seems prob. that this is merely a jingle to arsla:n and not an independent word. Xak. XI bursla:n al-babr fī ḥaqīqati'l-luğa strictly speaking 'tiger', hence one says arsla:n bursla:n 'lion and tiger': bursla:n a masculine Proper Name; wa yacūz an yakūn bursla:n *taba'a(n) li'l-arsla:n li-annahumā yuḏkarān ma'a(n) wa lā yufrad bursla:n 'bursla:n may be used following arsla:n because they are mentioned together, but may not be used by itself; and the best explanation (al-aṣaḥḥ) is that it is "tiger", li-annahu law kāna taba'a(n) lamā cāza tasmīyatu'l-racul bihī, because if it was (only) a jingle then it could not be used as a Proper Name, because one does not say hāḏā'l-şay' ḥasan as one can say ḥasan basan (i.e. basan is a mere jingle and cannot be used otherwise)' Kaş. III 418.

?F borsmuk (?p-) 'a badger'. In this form the word occurs only in Kaş., where it appears in a chapter devoted to Dissyllables containing three consecutive consonants, but is mis-vocalized. Its form is quite un-Turkish and it is almost certainly a l.-w., perhaps fr. Tokharian where the initial would necessarily have been p-. S.i.a.m.l.g., see Shcherbak, p. 139. An unusually large number of modern forms start w. p- including NE Khak. porsıx: NW Kk. porsık, Kumyk porsuk: SW Az. porsuğ; Osm. porsuk. The aberrant Tkm. form torsık also has an unvoiced initial. These are all consistent w. the theory that it is a l.-w. w. initial p-, and so suggest that the modern V. borsı-/porsı- 'to smell foul' is a back-formation fr. this word and not its origin. An early l.-w. in Mong. as basa 'also, then, thereafter' (Haenisch 13). Survives only(?) in NE several dialects R IV 1193; Khak. paza; Tuv. baza used (1) as a Conjunction between two words 'and'; (2) as an Adv. at or near the beginning of a sentence 'also, in addition, once more' (perhaps a reborrowing fr. Mong.) and NW Kaz. basa R IV 1527 where it is used at the end of a sentence after the Suff. -la/ -na, and means something like 'indeed, in fact, really'. Türkü VIII üç Oğuz süsi: basa: kelti: 'three Oğuz armies came to attack us' II E 32; teŋri: Umay ıḍuk yér suv basa: bérti: 'the goddess Umay and the sacred land and water crushed them for our benefit' T 38: Uyğ. VIII ff. D basıt- the oldest Caus. f. of bas- with the less common quasi-Pass. meaning; 'to allow oneself to be attacked, etc.' N.o.a.b. Cf. bastur-, bassık-, basur-. Türkü VIII (stay where you are; organize reconnoitring patrols and lookout posts properly) basıtma: 'do not let yourself be taken by surprise' T 38: Uyğ. VIII ff. D bastık- Pass. f. of bas- with the rare Suff. -tık- (cf. bulduk-) which should perhaps be explained as the Emphatic f. in -k- of basıt-. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. PU böşük a word, like tüŋür, concerned with inter-clan marriage customs. In the end both words came to mean no more than 'a person who actually is, or properly could become, a relation by marriage', but in the Mong. translation of the same text as that translated in TT VI the phr. corresponding to tüŋür böşük in l. 308 is quda anda which is explained as follows in San. 284r. 5, quda is 'a tribe to which daughters are given in marriage' and anda (which also means more generally 'friend, companion') is 'a tribe from which daughters are taken in marriage'. If the parallel is exact böşük must originally have had the latter meaning. It also occurs in the phr. adaş böşük and bağır böşük both meaning 'blood relations and relations by marriage'. This word is not mentioned in the useful summary of terms of relationship, L. A. Pokrovskaya, 'Terminy rodstva v tyurkskikh yazykakh' in Istoricheskoe razvitie leksiki biz 1st Pers. Plur. Pronoun, 'we'. C.i.a.p.a.l. Two usages can be distinguished (1) as Subject of the sentence, in which case it comes at or near the beginning of the sentence, and, if followed by a Verb in the 1st Pers. Preliminary note. Initial ç- is not very common in Turkish as an original initial. Although there is good evidence that both unvoiced ç and voiced c existed in the medial and final positions, there is no evidence that there was ever a voiced initial c-, see Studies, pp. 167, 170. There are many Secondary initial c-s,* ç-ɣ and* j-s in some modern languages, usually representing an original* y-, less often an original s- or t-, with some interchange between the three. Conversely in some languages ç- has become ş-. There are in Mong. and Pe. a good many words with initial c- which have become l.-w.s in Turkish and have erroneously been regarded as native Turkish words.

Civ. çaw is common in USp. and, like ch'ao, seems to mean sometimes an actual currency note and sometimes 'expressed in notes and not coin' (kümüş), e.g. 12, 5 altı yüz yastuk çaw 'notes for (or a sum of) 600 yastuks'; 12, 6 bu çavnı 'this sum'; 15, 8 yégirmi yastuk çuŋ tuŋ baw çaw 'notes for twenty yastuks in heavy current copper coin' (Chinese ch'ung t'ung pao, Giles 2,880 12,294 8,720); the word transcribed çuv in 54, 9 etc. is the same word: Çağ. XV ff. çaw 'an oblong piece of paper which circulated instead of gold in the dominions of the Mongol xans with a special mark and the name of the pādişāh inscribed on it'. They conducted business with it. Waṣṣāf in the second volume of his History in an account of the çaw which were current in the reign of Gayxatū Xan says that the shape and appearance of the çaw were as follows: around the face of an oblong piece of paper were written a number of words in Chinese characters, and at the top 'lā ilāh illā Allāh, Muḥammad rasūlu'llāh, a metallic coin' and below that was written irmeçin nurçi (a corrupt Mong. phr.) in an oval below the centre; they were in denominations from half a dirham to ten *dīnār*s and have become obsolete San. 209v. 10.

VU?F çatu: Hap. leg.; this is the original form of the word in the MS.; the wāw was turned into a qāf by a second hand, and it has so far been indexed as çatuk, cf. botu:. Morphologically it could be a Dev. N. fr. çat-, but as this would be semantically suitable only for the Sec. meaning 'knife-handle' it is prob. a Chinese l.-w.; the second syllable looks like t'ou (Giles 11,441) often used as a suffix to form Conc. N.s. Xak. XI çatu: 'the horn of a sea creature (qarn samak baḥrī) imported from China'; it is also said that it is the root of a tree ('irq ṣacara); knife handles are made from it, and poison in food detected by it; broth or other food is stirred with it in a bowl, and the food (if poisonous) boils without (being put on) a fire; or this bone is put on the bowl and sweats without there being any steam *Kaş. The initial must be k- (kāf misread as cim maftūḥa, cf. çekek for çeçek where the opposite error occurs); the second consonant lies between rā' and nūn, and as there is a superfluous 'tooth' in the word was prob. -s-. Kes-, q.v., sometimes means 'to levy, or assess, taxes'; -be: is not a Turkish Suff. but kesbe: might be a Sec. f. of kesme:, which does not occur in the meaning given, but etymologically could. Çigil XI çatı:ba: (?kesbe:) 'the word for a fine (rahn) which the headman of a village ('ārifu'l-qarya) collects from anyone who does not turn out to dig a canal or the head-works of a subsidiary channel' (al-nahr wa ra'si'l-ṣirb) *Kaş. text to match the translation. Xak. XI çetke:n 'inānu'l-licām 'bridle rein' Kaş. I 443.

1 çık- 'to go out; to come out'. S.i.a.m.l.g. with a wide range of extended meanings esp. in SW. It is no doubt fortuitous that neither çık- nor çıkar- are noted before XI. The theory propounded in Oğ., p. 27, note 27 that that is a crasis of taşık- is quite unconvincing. Xak. XI er evdin çıkdı: 'the man went out (xaraca) of the house (etc.)' *Kaş. çok- originally (of a bird) 'to swoop down (on something Dat.); to peck, peck out' with various extended meanings. S.i.a.m.l.g.; the modern phonetics are confusing; it is nearly always lengthened to çokı-/çoku- (şokı-/şoku-, etc.) but in NC Kır. both çokı- and çukı- occur with slightly different shades of meaning and in Kzx. şok- and şuk-. There do not seem to be any other genuine occurrences of -u- in the verb (both Uzb. -ŭ- and Kaz. -u- represent earlier -o-) but there is what seems to be a Dev. N./A. in -r meaning 'hole, cavity, depression; hollowed out, deep' which first appears in Çağ. San. 214r. 6 and Kıp. Id. 44; Tuh. 11b. 12; 12b. 11 and s.i.a.m.l.g. as çukur (şukur, etc.). See Doerfer III 1099. This must surely be der. fr. this Verb; so too is SE Türki çokur 'pitted with small-pox', unless this is a Sec. f. of çotur. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. PP 2, 8 (u:d): Xak. XI kuş çokdı: 'the bird swooped' (inqaḍḍa) *Kaş. çakır 'blue, blue-grey' prob. originally of the eyes, later used more generally. S.i.s.m.l. In Osm. this word was also used, generally in the phr. çakır doğan, for 'the merlin, stone falcon, Hypotriorchis aesolon' fr. It was adopted by the Manichaean missionaries, with other Buddhist technical terms, to translate 'commandment', but in Buddhist terminology was often also used more vaguely to translate 'good behaviour', Sanskrit śīla, see TT VI, p. 66, note 157; it was adopted, for some obscure reason, as the name of the 12th month of the Uyğ. calendar, see Doerfer II, 627. Türkü VIII ff. cigin/çikin Preliminary note. There is some confusion about words of this form. There was almost certainly in the medieval period a Dev. N. fr. çig-, çigin 'a knot' noted in XIV Rbğ. R III 1958 (quotn.) and Cağ. XV ff. Vel. 242, although San. 220r. 24 says, rather unconvincingly, that this is a mistranslation. This word now seems to be obsolete. There was also a word çigin meaning 'the upper part of the shoulder between the neck and the shoulder-blade' (Red.) (perhaps etymologically the same word in the sense of 'the part which ties the neck to the shoulder-blade') noted in Cağ. Vel. 242, San. 220r. 22, current in Osm. fr. the earliest period and still current there and in Tkm., and in Az. as çiyin. Kaş. lists two words of this form meaning respectively 'a kind of plant' and 'a kind of silk fabric'. San. has two parallel entries, but in each case quotes alternative forms with -e- in the first syllable, which suggests an original -é-. In the latter case the word survives with -i- so this is unlikely. In the former San. lists different plants with -k- and -g- in the middle. As no such plant names seem to survive, the number of plants involved, and the pronunciation, remain obscure.

D çalığ N.Ac. fr. çal-. In Kaş. this word is entered not in its proper alphabetical order but as an appendage to soruğ; it is not, however, likely to be a later addition to the text. PU çülig this word has been read in Türkü VIII I E 4, II E 5 in the list of countries which sent representatives to Éştemi Xağan's(?) funeral; it begins 'from the east, where the sun rises' Bükli: (PU) Çülig el Tavğaç Tüpüt, etc. Henning in 'The Date of the Early Sogdian Letters', BSOAS XII 601 ff. showed that Bükli: meant 'Korea'; Tavğaç is of course 'China' and Tüpüt 'Tibet'; as the list is presumably in a strict geographical order, the entry between Korea and China must be some unidentified 'realm' (el) between Korea and China, perhaps one of the minor kingdoms in Korea. The word looks like a Chinese representation of some name like ch'ü li(g). It has been read as çöllig and explained as a P.N./A. fr. çöl meaning 'belonging to the steppes', but this is impossible since çöl is a Mong. word which is not traceable as a l.-w. in Turkish earlier than Çağ. 1 çar in the onomatopoeic jingle çar çur, which survives in SW Rep. Turkish in such phr. as çar çur et- 'to squander, dissipate'. The phr. was no doubt colloquial and is not noted in the Osm. dicts. See şar, which is said to be a Sec. f. of çar and is an onomatopoeic with a slightly different meaning. This entry is appended to that of şar, and so is out of its alphabetical position in the MS. Xak. XI one says ol çar çur yé:di: 'he eat everything that he found and left nothing' Kaş. I 323.

2 ça:r in the phr. ça:r çarmak which seems to be a mere jingle, perhaps in children's language; pec. to Kaş. Xak. XI 'young children' (al-darādiqu'l-aṭfāl) are called ça:r çarmak Kaş. III 148; (between çaxşa:k and çığruk) ça:r çarmak al-darādiq wa'l-aṭfāl; one of them is a jingle (iṭbā') of the other; çamrak is an alternative form (luġa fihi) I 469.

1 çer Hap. leg.; it is hard to see what ḥikāya means here; it can hardly mean 'onomatopoeic', perhaps 'a word used only to form Den. V.s'. Cf. çerlet-, çerlen-. Xak. XI çer 'a ḥikāya for great bodily weight' ('an ṯiqali'l-badan); hence one says er çerlendi: 'the man's body was heavy' (ṯaqala). A Xākānī word Kaş. I 322.

2 çer Hap. leg.; 'time'; cf. ö:d̲; it is possible that this was the Oğuz equivalent of ö:d̲, which is not recorded in any Oğuz language except XX Anat., but if so it was displaced by l.-w.s like waqt and zamān at an early date. Oğuz XI çer al-waqt 'time', hence one says bu: çerlikde: kel 'come at this time' (i.e. 'now') Kaş. I 323.

3 çer (?cer) Hap. leg.; it is prob. that this is merely an Oğuz form of yé:r 'place', and that Kaş. gave it this meaning owing to the erroneous belief that it is connected with çerig, a word almost certainly older than the Oğuz sound-change y- > c-. Oğuz XI çer 'the opposite of something' (qubālatu'l-şay'); hence one says anıŋ evi: bu: çerlikde: 'his house is opposite this thing' (sic, but ?'his house is in this locality'); hence çerig is used for 'the two battle ranks' (ṣaffayi'l-ḥarb) because they confront one another (yataqābalān) Kaş. I 323.

1 çır an onomatopoeic; survives, with slightly different shades of meaning in NC Kır. çır and SW Osm. çır Red. 743 (only); it is possible that SW Osm. çır/çir 'sparrow' is an extended meaning of this word, and that the Çağ. word below has the same meaning. Xak. XI çır 'an onomatopoeic for the sound (al-ṣawt) produced by tearing (min mazq) a garment, etc.; hence one says anıŋ to:nın çır yırttı: 'he tore his garment with this sound' (muṣawwita(n) lahu) Kaş. I 323: Çağ. XV ff. çır 'the name of a bird which flies about in large flocks' (fawc fawc) San. 218r. 2 (quotn.).

VU 2 çır Hap. leg.; 'fat'; the words used to translate it suggest a rather more solid commodity than ya:ğ; al-dasam seems to mean 'dripping' or more generally 'fat', al-şaḥm is usually 'suet', but al-simḥāq normally means 'the pericranial membrane', here perhaps more generally 'membrane', and al-samn is more usually 'clarified butter' than 'fat' proper. In the absence of any known connecting link the resemblance to Russian zhir 'fat, suet' is prob. a mere coincidence. Xak. XI çır 'fat' (al-dasam); one says eşiçte: çır yo:k 'there is no fat in the pot'; its origin is 'the membrane on suet' (al-simḥāq mina'l-şaḥm); hence one says bu: ette: çır yo:k 'there is nothing in the way of suet or fat (şay' mina'l-şaḥm wa'l-samn) on this meat' Kaş. I 323.

1 ço:r a Turkish title rather rare in Turkish texts and perhaps commoner in the Chinese records where it is represented by cho (Giles 2,421). It is stated in the Chiu T'ang Shu (see Liu Mau-tsai, Die chinesischen Nachrichten zur Geschichte der Ost-Türken (T'u-kiue), Wiesbaden, 1958, p. 158) that Kutluğ Xağan, before he became xağan, was a hereditary toğun çor, and his brother, who became Kapğan Xağan, is always called by the Chinese Mo-cho (see op. cit., passim) which appears in Tibetan script as hBug-Cor, and perhaps represents Bögü: Ço:r. There is also a reference (op. cit., p. 170) to the 'Çor of the five To-lu (Tölis) tribes of the Left Wing of the Ten Tribes (i.e. the Western Türkü)'. A ço:r therefore seems to have been something less than a xağan and more than a beg, perhaps the head of a small confederation, cf. elteber, 1 irkin. As regards the pronunciation, the Middle Chinese pronunciation of cho, though uncertain, is likely to have been nearer chor than chur and the Tibetan transcription çor points in the same direction. Türkü VIII (VU) Tadık Çor I E 32; Tardu:ş Inançu: Çor I N 13; Kül Çor the leader of the Tarduş begs II S 13; Işvara: Tamğan Çor Yabğu: Ongin 4; Ix. is a memorial to Küli Çor and VU çur Pec. to Kaş. Xak. XI çur çur 'an onomatopoeic for the sound of milk falling from the udder into the pail'; also used of any liquid when it makes a noise (ṣawwata) *Kaş. 'the gurgling sound of a camel's udder') I 485.

VU çür Hap. leg.; cf. asığ, which seems to have displaced this word completely. Cf. çürlet-, çürlen-. Xak. XI çür al-manfa'a 'advantage, profit' Kaş. I 323 (and see çürle:-).

tavğaç the name of a Turkish tribe transcribed in Chinese t'o po (Giles 11,336 9,335; Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese t'ak bat); the emperors of the Yüan Wei Dynasty which ruled China fr. A.D. 386 to 535 belonged to this tribe, and the Türkü, who presumably first came into contact with China during this period, called China Tavğaç. Apart fr. the references in Chinese texts, the name is first mentioned in literature by a Byzantine chronicler, Theophanes Simocatta, who wrote in the second quarter of VII and mentions Taugast (pronounced Tavgast) as 'a famous city inhabited by the people called Tourkoi' (see Gy. Moravcsik, Byzantoturcica, Budapest, 1943, II 255). This form proves that the word was at this period pronounced Tavğaç and should be thus transcribed in the Türkü texts. The first vowel in TT VIII is -u- and this was prob. the original pronunciation, since SW -o- often represents an original -u-, cf. toğ- for tuğ-, but later forms like topalak may represent an earlier topolğa:k. Uyğ. VIII ff. tavar (d-) originally 'livestock', a meaning which comes out clearly in the phr. eḍ tavar 'inanimate and animate property' (see eḍ), and from an early date, since livestock was the commonest form of property in Turkish society, 'property' in general and even specifically 'merchandise, trade goods'. As Ar. māl is equally ambiguous, the exact meaning in some medieval texts is obscure. An early l.-w. in Mong. as tabar (Haenisch 143) and Russian as tovar, both in the second sense. The first was prob. reborrowed in NE Alt., Leb., Tel. tabar R III 966 and the second in several modern languages in the Soviet Union; but the word seems to survive genuinely in SE Türki tavar 'silk goods, trade goods (generally)'; SC Uzb. tovar (perhaps the origin of the Russian word); NW Kk. tawar 'goods' and SW Osm. davar 'livestock'. Uyğ. VIII türgeş karlukığ (sic, ?irregular Gen.) tavarın alıp 'I seized the livestock of the Türgeş and Karluk' (pillaged their dwellings and returned home) *Şu. D tapış- Recip. f. of 2 tap-; lit. 'to find one another', hence 'to meet'. S.i.s.m.l. in several meanings of which this is the commonest. See Doerfer II 847. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. boḍun birle tapışıp 'consulting with(?) the community' USp. 24, 4; tuşup tapışıp 'meeting (Hend.)' do. 43, 5; (my Chinese boy has disappeared) kaç künde tilep tapışmadın turur [gap] 'I (or we) have looked for him for several days but not found him' do. 116, 3–4; taşdın ünse tavar tapışur 'if he goes abroad, he finds wealth' TT VII 28, 27–8; o.o. do. 16, 49 (in these instances there is no visible Recip. meaning): Çağ. XV ff. tapış-(-ur) buluş- 'to find one another' Vel. 161 (quotn.); tapış- (spelt) Recip. f. hamdigar-rā yāftan 'to find one another' San. 151r. 12: Kom. XIV 'to discuss' tabuş- CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIV ţapış- (-b-) talāqā 'to meet one another' Id. 61.

D tavış- Recip. f. of tav-; the only authority for the existence of these words is the passage in Kaş. below; it is perhaps significant that Kaş. uses taşarrafa also in the translation of tevir-, but apart fr. the difference in vocalization there are great difficulties about deriving tevir-, with its close association with evir- fr. tev- and the association between the two words is prob. fortuitous. It is equally difficult semantically to derive tavış fr. tav-. Xak. XI (those two are constantly selling and buying (satışğa:n alışğa:n) merchandise), and in another dialect (luğa) one says satışğa:n tavışğa:n, taken fr. the words sattı: bā'a 'he sold', and tavdı: taşarrafa 'he was in possession of' Kaş. I 518–9.

D tepiş- (d-) Recip. f. of tep-; 'to kick one another'. S.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI ol meniŋ birle tepişdi: rākalanī bi'l-ricl 'he competed with me(?) in kicking' Kaş. II 87 (tepişü:r, tepişme:k); a.o. II 113, 16.

D teviş- Hap. leg.; Recip. f. of tev-; consistently spelt tüviş- in the MS., ?in error. Xak. XI ol meniŋ birle: et tevişdi: 'he competed with me in arranging (fī naẓm) the meat on the spit' also used for helping and for other things Kaş. II 102 (tevişü:r, tevişme:k).

tevşe:-, tüvşe:- Preliminary note. The vocalization of these V.s and their Der. f.s is chaotic; they should perhaps be reversed; tüvşe:- and its Pass. f. precede tevşe:- and its Pass. f. in the MS., but the Caus. f. of the latter precedes that of the former.

?D tevşe:- Hap. leg., but see tevşet-, etc.; Den. V. fr. teviş, perhaps a Dev. N. fr. tev- in the sense of 'interlocking'. Xak. XI yı:p kamuğ tevşe:dı: 'the thread was all tangled (taşawwaşa) and mixed up (ixtalaṭa) so that the end of it (ra'suhu) could not be found' Kaş. III 286 (tevşe:r, tevşe:me:k).

VU?D tüvşe:- N.o.a.b.; presumably Den. V. fr. VU tüviş. Xak. XI anıŋ teri: tüvşedi: (sic) 'he was beaded with sweat (taḥabbaba 'araquhu) because of working' Kaş. III 286 (tüvşe:r, tüvşe:me:k): XIV Muh.(?) ibtalla 'to be moist, soaked' tüvşe:- (-f-; unvocalized) Rif. 102 (Mel. 21, 15 öli:-).

D tevşet- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of tevşe:-. Xak. XI ol yı:pığ tevşetti: 'he tangled (şawwaşa) the thread when he could not find the end of it' Kaş. II 336 (tevşetü:r, tevşetme:k).

VUD tüvşet- Hap. leg.; this is mutilated in the MS.; the following sentence is added after the Infin. of tevşet-, but it should clearly be a separate para. Xak. XI ol anıŋ terin tüvsetti: (tevşetti:) 'he made him work (a'yāhu) until he was beaded with sweat', also (kadālika) Kaş. II 336.

D tevşel- Hap. leg.; Pass. f. of tevşe:-; Xak. XI yıp tevşeldi: (tevşüldi:) 'the thread (etc.) was tangled (iltāṭta) owing to its being handled a great deal' Kaş. II 236 (tevşelü:r, tevşelme:k, spelt tüvşel-).

VUD tüvşel- Hap. leg.; Pass. f. of tüvşe:-; the collocation with uvşal- which is ultimately der. fr. uvuş, confirms the theory that this verb is der. fr. tüviş which, taking all the meanings together, seems to have meant 'a small pellet, bead of sweat' and the like. Xak. XI etme:k uşaldı: tüvşeldi: (tevşeldi:) 'the bread (etc.) was crumbled' (futta); uşaldı: is the main Verb (aşl) Kaş. II 235 (tüvselü:r, tüvşelme:k, spelt tevşelü:r, tevşülme:k).

D tevşen- Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of tevşe:-; lit. 'to entangle oneself (with something)'. Xak. XI er ı:şta: telim tevşendi: (tevşindi:) 'the man occupied himself (i'tamala) with the affair and was very active' (taḥarraka kaṭīra(n)) Kaş. II 241 (tevşenü:r, tevşenıme:k, spelt tevşünü:r, tevş.nme:k).

D tapşur- Caus. f. of tapış-; 'to hand over, entrust (something Acc. to someone Dat.). S.i.a.m.l.g., except NE?, with the same meaning. Kaş. is the only authority for the Sec. f. tapçur-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. Budaşırı baxşıka tapşurup bérdimiz 'we have handed over the property to Buddhaśrī the baxşı' USp. 14, 16; a.o. do. 17, 16: Xak. XI men oğulnı: ana:sıŋa: tapçurdum 'I have attached (alḥaqtu) the boy to his mother and made him her companion' (alṣaqtuhu bihā (MS. bihi)); the original form (al-aṣl) of the -ç- was -ş-; also used in other contexts *Kaş. (D) tavışğa:n 'hare'; an old animal name ending in -ğa:n. This word has a very long history; it was a pre-VIII l.-w. in Kitan as (PU) taoli, see V. S. Starikov and V. M. Nedelyaev, Predvaritel'noe soobshchenie o deshifrovke kidanskogo pis'ma, Moscow, 1964, p. 10, fr. which it passed into Mong. as taolai (Haenisch 145); these words represent, of course, the L/R Turkish form tavılğa:n. It was one of the animals of the twelve-year cycle in Turkish and Mong. Survives in SE Türki tawşkan, etc. Jarring, p. 297, and in several SC, NW, SW languages, see Shcherbak, p. 136. The SW Az. form is dovşan and in Osm. and Tkm. both t- and d- are noted, the former prevailing; initial d- is therefore improbable. In other languages the word for 'hare' is koyan (ʔkoḍan). See Doerfer II 966. Türkü VIII keyik yéyü tavışğan yeyü 'eating wild game and hares' T 8: VIII ff. IrkB 44 (üŋüş-): Uyğ. VIII tavışğan yıl 'in the Hare Year' *Şu. tevey (d-) 'camel'. There is real doubt about the original form of this word; the oldest recorded form is teve:, but it became an early, First Period, l.-w. in Mong. as temeyen/teme'n (Haenisch 148; Studies, p. 234) which presupposes a final -y. Kaş.'s main entry, III 225, is spelt clearly tevey and occurs in a Section headed 'fa'al, fa'il, fa'ul with various vowels on the second consonant', the third being alif, wāw or yā'. Nearly all the words in the Section end with long open vowels, e.g. tapa:, tapı: and it could be argued that tevey was intended to be an 'Arabic' spelling of teve: like ma'nā, which also has a final yā', but this is improbable in itself and inconsistent with the simultaneous spelling of the Oğuz form deve: with final alif. It seems clear therefore that Kaş. meant the word to be pronounced tevey, and this was prob. the original form. S.i.a.m.l.g.; see Shcherbak, p. 103; the NW

Bashkir, Tat. and SW Az., Gagauz, Osm., and Tkm. forms mentioned there all begin with d-, which was prob. the original initial. See Doerfer II 1015. Türkü VIII T 48 (egri: teve:): VIII ff. teve:si:ɲerü: barmi:ş '(a man) went to his camels' IrkB 5; a.o. do. 46 (2 titig): Uyğ. VIII ff. 1 tat the basic meaning of this word, which is translated very variously, seems to have been not so much 'stranger', which is 1 ya:t, as 'an alien', prob. a subject, but in any case inferior. tét-, tıḏ-, tıt-, tit- Preliminary note. It is reasonably clear how many Verbs of each of these forms there are, but, as they are usually graphically indistinguishable, it is often difficult, and in damaged passages like U III 25, 15 (i) and TT III 112 impossible, to determine which Verb is concerned.

D 1 tét- (d-) Caus. f. of té:- with the idiomatic use of Caus. as Pass.; 'to be said to be, to be called'; almost always in the form tétir 'is said to be, is called'. Pec. to Uyğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. eḏgü tétyük nomluğ [ertinig] 'the precious doctrine called "good" ' TT III 108: Bud. tétir is very common in texts like TT V 4 ff., e.g. tiz yokaru bélke teği suv uluğ tétir 'from the knee up to the waist (the element of) water is said to be predominant' do. 4, 4; o.o. TT IV 4, 3; VII 40, 71; Suv. 110, 6; PP 11, 4; 38, 8; 74, 6; tétirsiz 'you are called' U I 23, 11: Civ. tétir is common in texts like TT VII 14.

2 tét- (té:t-) pec. to Xak., but cf. té:tik, té:til-, tétin-, tétrü:; it is difficult to fit the first two in semantically with the rest, and they may be derived fr. some other V., perhaps téti:-. Xak. XI kul begke: tétti: 'the slave resisted (or opposed, qāwama) the beg' (followed by two illustrations of tétrü:) *Kaş. VÜ 2 tit- (ʔtöt-) 'to ache, throb'; pec. to Kaş. where it occurs twice in different spellings. The main entry opens the list of words of this form, is vocalized with ḍamma and has the Infin. in -ṁa:k, but the Dev. N. is vocalized with kasra and ends in -ig. The -ig can hardly be a mistake and, since Infin. terminations tend to be erratic, it can be taken as certain that this V. had a front vowel, but the position of the main entry before tut- suggests that the ḍamma is correct and the word may have been töt- or tüt-. Xak. XI ba:ş tötti:(?) D ta:tığ (in Kaş. under the heading fā'il) Dev. N. fr. ta:t- (tat-) rather than tatı:-; 'taste, flavour', often with the implication of 'a pleasant taste'. This is the only form of this word in the early period and it still survives as tatu: in NE, NC, but fr. the medieval period a syn. word tat appeared, which survives in all other language groups. to:ḏun (hitherto transcribed tuḏun, but the Chinese transcription indicates to:ḏun, cf. totok); a Türkü title of office. S 2 ta:ğ See tak (Xak.).

tak in the early period occurs only in association with muŋ (buŋ) 'sorrow, distress', but seems to mean something like 'need'. N.o.a.b.; the tak which has various meanings in several modern languages cannot be satisfactorily connected with this word. See Doerfer II 860. Türkü VIII ff. tı:ğ the colour of a horse's coat; the Ar. words used to translate it are apparently imprecise, but the colour seems to have been some kind of 'roan', dark or light. N.o.a.b. Türkü VIII ff. tığ at IrkB 50; a.o.? do. 39 (tétrü:); in Toyok 11 (ETY II 58) tı:ğ ta:ş 'a brown (?) stone' is associated with the moon (this document is based on a Sogdian document with Man. associations): Xak. XI tı:ğ at al-faras bayna'l-aṣqar wa'l-kumayt 'a horse with a coat between roan (bay, sorrel, or chestnut) and reddish brown (or dark bay)' *Kaş. 1 to:ğ 'dust'; an early l.-w. in Mong. as to'osun (the -sun a common Mong. ?D 2 to:ğ the basic meaning seems to be something like 'obstructed; obstruction, barrier', and the like; if so perhaps a Dev. N./A. fr. to:-, and also perhaps the origin of a word meaning 'barren' (of an animal, i.e. ? 'with an obstructed womb') which survives as NE Sag., Şor toğ R III 1157; Koib., Sag. tuğ do. 1430; NC Kır., Kzx. tu:. Türkü VIII (we marched for ten days) yantakı: toğ evirü: 'skirting the

F tu:ğ 'a royal emblem', that is essentially some kind of drum or standard; in the early period it is not easy to decide which is meant. Acc. to Kaş. the standard was a silk flag (no doubt an idea derived fr. China), but the traditional Turkish standard was a horse's tail or a bunch of horsehair. No doubt a l.-w. fr. Chinese tu 'banner, standard' (Giles 12,056; Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese dok), see Doerfer II 969; the vowel in Chinese was originally -o- and became -u- at some date which is uncertain but presumably before the Turks borrowed the word, since there is no evidence of a pronunciation to:ğ in Turkish; on the other hand in the case of totok, which occurs in Tibetan as todog (see Doerfer II 874), the borrowing prob. occurred before similar sound changes took place in this word. An early l.-w. in Mong. as tuġ (Haenisch 153); s.i.a.m.l.g. as tuğ/tuw (NW Kk.)/tu:. Uyğ. VIII (I said 'let us start a campaign') tuğ taşıkar erikli: 'just as the standard was setting out' *Şu. D tokaç 'a loaf or cake'; Kaş. may be right in linking this word with tok; if so, it is a Dim. f. Survives with the same meaning in SE Tar. toğaç R III 1160; Türki tokaç; SC Uzb. tūkaç. D tuğtur- (d-) Caus. f. of tuğ-, q.v.; survives in SE, SC in the normal meaning 'to give birth to' and in NC Kır. This is in accordance with the rule, which is that if a verb is a Caus. f. without the attachment of -t- (ilhāqu'l-tā') then when a -t- is attached to it it makes it Causative in such a way that the Object (al-maf'ūl) is operated upon by two Subjects (al-fā'ilān), one of whom gives an order and the other performs an act; for example su:v içürdı: aṣraba'l-mā' 'he gave (someone) a drink of water', but if one says su:v içtürdı: (sic, but ?içürtdı: in the original text) it means 'he ordered someone else to give (someone) a drink of water'; again ol anı: boğdı: means 'he strangled him', but if one says boğturdı: it means 'he ordered someone else to strangle him'; there is the same difference of meaning in Ar. between laqaṭa and alqaṭa and naqaṭa and anqaṭa, where the addition of a- makes the verb Causative with two Subjects (fā'ilān) operating on the Object Kaş. II 173 (tuğturur, tuğturma:k; MS. boğturur, boğturma:k; it is prob. that it was a copyist, and not the author, who made nonsense of this para.; the translations of içür- and içtür- are identical in Kaş.; there is no other trace of içürt-, which is clearly the form required by the words iḏā ulḥiqat bihi'l-tā').

te:g (d-) Postposn. 'like'; together with üçün, üze: and birle: one of the 'four old postposns.' discussed in K. Grønbech, Der türkische Sprachbau, Copenhagen, 1936, p. 35. When attached to the oblique stem of ol it soon became fused with it as antağ, q.v.; later it became similarly fused with the oblique stem of 1 bu:. S.i.a.m.l.g. except SW where it is replaced by other words like Osm. gibi (kib); the vowel varies between -e- and -a-, and the final between -g and -y, but the initial is consistently d- everywhere. Türkü VIII teŋri: teg 'god-like' I S 1, I N 1, a.o.o.: Uyğ. VIII ff. The commonest is teg, and some of 'our Turks' change the t- to d- when it is (attached) at the end of a word; e.g. 'his tongue is like a sword' dili: kı:lı:ç değ; 'this is as sweet as honey' bu da:tlu: dur ba:l değ Mel. 18, 4; ti:li: . . . teg; sü:çüg teg Rif. 96: Çağ. XV ff. the word is mentioned several times in San. as an adāt-i taşbih 'Adv. of comparison'; the forms quoted are dég 17r. 24 (quotns.); 226v. 3 (quotns.); tég 198r. 15: Xwar. XIII(?) teg (or deg?) is common in Oğ., e.g. aḍakı uḍ aḍakı teg 'his legs were like an ox's legs' 12: XIV tég 'like' Qutb 176; teg MN 5, etc.; Nahc. 263, 15; 387, 15: Kom. XIV 'like' dek/dey CCG; Gr. 82 (quotn.): Kıp. XIV deg miṯl 'like' Id. 49.

tek Preliminary note. There was certainly a word tek meaning 'only', which is not mentioned in this meaning by Kaş.; it seems likely, however, that his translation 'for no particular purpose' is a misunderstanding of it. There was also certainly a word tek meaning 'silent(ly)' which is generally used to qualify tur-, and must be carefully distinguished fr. tik which is similarly used. There is a modern word in NC Kzx. teg/tek 'family, origin', which Radloff, certainly in error, read in some early texts; in Türkü VIII ff. Yen. Mal. 28, 1 the correct reading is prob. tegme: 'all'; in Xak. XI KB the readings are all due to scribal errors in the Vienna MS., in 344 akran teki for evren başı; in 950 tegin for teŋin and in 1630 teginde for beginde. A word tek 'under' first mentioned in Cağ. XV ff. San. 157v. 24 and surviving in several modern languages looks like a corruption of Ar. taḥt, which is the word used to translate it in San.

1 tek 'only'; survives with some extended meanings, 'alone, solitary, odd (not even)' in NC Kzx., several NW languages and SW Az., Osm., Tkm. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. bir tek . . . tek bir öḍun 'only once . . . on one single occasion' Kuan. 90–1; tégin alkunı taplamadı tek taluy öğüzke kirmişig tapladı 'the prince did not approve any (of these proposals), and only approved of going to sea' PP 15, 2–3; a.o. Hüen-ts. 253 (seç-): Xak. XI tek kalima wa ma'nāhu bi-lā qaṣd 'a word meaning (the phr.) without any particular purpose'; hence one says tek keldim 'I have come without any particular purpose'· *Kaş. 2 tek 'silent, silently'; normally used to qualify a verb, generally tur-. Survives in such phr. in NC Kır.; SC Uzb.; NW Kk., Nog.; SW Osm. ?F tik (d-) 'straight; vertical, upright'; hence (of a cliff) 'precipitous' and the like. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE?; in SW Az., Osm., Tkm. dik; almost the only word in Kaş. which preserves the original d-. A l.-w. in Pe., Doerfer II 1005. As he points out, practically syn. w. Chinese chih (Giles, 1,846, Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese ḍjək), and prob. a l.-w. fr. it. Its relationship to Mong. çike (Kow. 2175) is obscure, on balance it is perhaps more likely to be a l.-w. fr. Turkish than direct fr. Chinese, although the unvoiced initial and the fact that the Mong. word has Sec. meanings peculiar to Chinese point rather in the other direction. Xak. XI 'when a thing is vertical' (iḍā'ntaṣaba'l-şay' qā'ima(n)) one says dik turdı: *Kaş. PU 1 tüg (? d-) Particle meaning 'several, many' placed before high numbers; perhaps best explained as an alliterative jingle before tümen subsequently used also before miŋ, but this does not explain the d- in Kaş. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. tük (sic) tümen tınlıglarığ kutğartıpız 'you have saved many myriads of mortals' TT III 67: Bud. tüg tümen kişiler Suv. 587, 1: Xak. XI düg miŋ mā bayna'l-ulūf 'several thousand'; one says düg miŋ yarma:k 'several thousand dirhams' *Kaş. E teki the existence of a word of this form (in the Index tégi) meaning 'family' in Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. is suggested in USp. with a refce. to Radloff's similar suggestion regarding tek (see Preliminary note thereon), but it is clear that this is an error arising fr. misunderstood uses of the Den. Suff. -teki, e.g. (if I die before paying the debt) Nomkulınıŋtekiler bile köni bérsünler 'let the Nomkulıs also honestly repay it' USp. 1, 8; cf. (if I die before paying the debt), inim kasuk evtekiler bile köni bérsünler 'let my younger brother (PU) Kasuk together with those in his house honestly repay it' do. 7, 7–8; the latter is a revised text, Radloff in USp. read Kusukınıŋ tekiler and there is no doubt that the -nıŋ- in 1, 8 is also an error for ev, and that a similar error occurred in other parallel passages in USp. 8, 10, 34, etc.

PU tigi: 'a sound'. Kaş.'s etymology, though no doubt false, suggests that the second consonant was -g-, the first vowel might be -é-. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. Suv. 166, 6 (çoğı:): Civ. yağız yérde tigi ündi: 'a sound rose from the brown earth' TT I 90; süzük suv tigisi 'the sound of clear water' do. 135: Xak. XI tigi: 'a sound' (dawī) heard at night; the Turks believe that the spirits of the dead assemble once a year at night and go to the places (al-amṣār) where their bodies were when they were alive, and visit their relations (ahālihā), and that anyone who hears that sound at night dies. This is widely known (maşhūr) among the Turks. The word is spelt with a kasra on the tā', but in my view it would be more correct (acwad) with a fatḥa (bi'l--naşb), because when a woman, who has been given in marriage, visits her family one says tegdi: keldi: 'she has come visiting' (zā'irata(n)) *Kaş. VUD tögi:(d-) Dev. N. fr. D(F) tégit Plur. in -t of tégi:n, q.v.; the only other word which forms a similar Plur. is tarxan and there is no doubt that both these titles were borrowed fr. some earlier language (see tarxan), and that the Plur. (F) tégin (or ? tégi:n) a very old title, like tarxan, q.v., inherited fr. some earlier non-Turkish language, as shown by the fact that it had the non-Turkish Pl. f. tégit, q.v. In the Türkü period it meant 'prince' in the limited specific sense of 'a son, or grandson, of a ruling xağan'; after that period it was used in a much less restricted sense as a title of honour of diminishing importance, but did not survive the Mongolian invasion. Its history is discussed at great length in Doerfer II 922 (which contains some errors) and more briefly in Bosworth and Clauson, 'al-Xwārazmī on the Peoples of Central Asia', JRAS, 1965, p. 7. It is noteworthy that both Kaş. and San. give wholly erroneous accounts of its origin. Türkü VIII the prince commemorated in I was Kül Tégin, younger son of Élteriş Xağan; both I and II were drafted by Yolluğ Tégin, the atı: ('grandson or nephew') of Bilge: Xağan (see I S 13; SW; II SW) who was himself a tégin (see I E 17, II E 14) when his uncle succeeded his father as xağan; four tégins attended the funeral of Küli Çor Ix. 24: Uyġ. VIII Ozmış Tégin xan bolmış 'Ozmiş Tégin became xan' Şu. N 9 (N.B. the last Türkü xağan): VIII ff. Then this noun was made an exclusive appellation (sima maḥḍa) for the sons of the Xāqāns and is combined with the names of birds of prey, e.g. Çağrı: tégi:n, that is 'a prince (tégi:n) with the strength of a falcon' (al-bāzī); küç tégi:n 'strong prince'. This name was transferred from slaves (al-mawālī) to the sons of Afrāsiyāb because they respected their fathers and whenever they addressed or wrote to them they said or wrote 'your slave has done so-and-so' depreciating themselves and exalting their fathers. After that they were known specially by this name; but the word remained as the name of a slave when it was combined with something which was clearly distinguished from them (i.e. princely names) Kaş. I 413; o.o. I 355 (tégit); 357 (begeç); III 368 (toŋa:): (KB kayusı tégin beg, 4068, is an erroneous conjecture by Arat; the MSS. indicate rather kayusı kül erkin): XIV Muh. (?) D tolp (d-) crasis of tolup Ger. of to:l-, and perhaps merely a shortened scription for that word which does occur occasionally in the same sense; 'all, whole, completely'. Since tolu is sometimes used in much the same

PU?F töleç n.o.a.b.; in Uyğ. spelt tölç; morphologically inexplicable, since although there is some semantic connection with F 2 töle:-, -ç is not a possible suffix either in Turkish or Mong. Both Uyğ. occurrences are in very late documents relating to the same man, (PU) Turı, which contain several l.-w.s. The meaning seems to be 'free, gratis, without payment'. Uyğ. XIII(?) Civ. töleç kuruğ kalmayın 'let me not remain unpaid and without the land' (?) USp. 24, 10 (this seems to be the meaning, but the whole document is very obscure);

D tölet n.o.a.b.; the context suggests the meaning 'cushion' or the like; apparently a Dev. N.; there is obviously no semantic connection with 1 or 2 töle:-, and the word seems rather to be derived fr. töle:- as an l/r form of töşe:-, cf. tül/tüş Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (food to eat, clothes to wear) olurğuluk orunın töletin töşekin 'a seat, cushions, and mattress to sit on' Suv. 513, 13; a.o. *TT VIII D.*12 (orun).

D tıldaːğ/tıltaːğ (d-) Dev. N. fr. tıldaː-; prob. with -lt- in Uyğ. and -ld- later; the meaning is very elusive; in some Uyğ. passages 'cause, reason' suits the context best, in others perhaps 'pretext', which is nearer the etymological meaning of tıldaː-. N.o.a.b., but NE Tob. tıldak 'eloquent', R III 1333, seems to be a parallel Dev. N./A in -k. Became an early l.-w. in Mong. as şiltağ/şilta'a (< çıltağ) 'reason, cause' (Haenisch 140); this word was then reborrowed in this form but with meanings more akin to those in Xak., in Çağ. D tölet- (d-) Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of 1 töleː-; Kaş.'s explanation of the origin of the word would be applicable to a Caus. f. of tüleː-; either he confused the two words or some words have fallen out. Oğuz XI ol koːy töletti: natacati'l-ğanam (error for nataca) 'he helped the ewe to lamb'; aṣluhu isqāṭi'l-'aqīqa mina'l-ṣa'r 'its origin is making the hair fall out' *Kaş. D tıldaː-/tıltaː- (d-) Den. V. fr. tıl; regarding the phonetics see tıldaːğ; etymologically this should mean 'to use the tongue', but in practice it seems usually to mean 'to make excuses, to seek pretexts', and the like. Survives only (?) in NC Kır. tilde- 'to abuse'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. D taltur- (d-) Caus. f. of tal-; s.i.s.m.l., usually as taldur- 'to tire out, exhaust', but SW Osm. daldır- means 'to plunge (something Acc.) into water'. Xak. XI ol anı: urup talturdı: 'he beat him until he almost fainted' (kāda an yuġṣā 'alayhi) *Kaş. D teltür- (d-) Caus. f. of tel-; survives in SW Osm. deldir-. Xak. XI ol taːm teltürdı: 'he ordered the piercing (bi-ṯaqb) of the wall' (etc.); the second tā' is changed from dāl (MS. lām), as they say in Ar. qatara and qadara with the same meaning (quotns.); a dāl may be changed from tā', and a tā' (MS. bā') from dāl (quotns.) Kaş. II 174 (teltürür, teltürmeːk).

D tiltür- (d-) Caus. f. of til-; s.i.s.m.l.g., usually as tildir-. Tildür- in Kaş. follows tuldur- so presumably belongs here, although semantically it is nearer teltür-, but the text is in some disorder and it is followed by biltür-, tamtur-, etc.; the scribe was obviously confused between -t- and -d-, but biltür- is misplaced in any event. Xak. XI er yarında:k tiltürdi: 'the man ordered that a strap (lit. strip) should be cut' (bi-qaddi'l-qidd); also used of anything when it has been cut in strips (qudda), e.g. leather, and the like *Kaş. D toltur- (d-) Caus. of f. to:l-; 'to fill'. S.i.m.m.l.g.; in SW Az., Osm. doldur-; Tkm. do:ldur-. Xak. XI ol ayak tolturdı: 'he filled (amla'a) the cup' (etc.) *Kaş. PUD tültür- Hap. leg.; the passage occurs in a list of the unpleasant results of sin; the spelling is quite clear in the MS.; v. l. C. suggests that it means 'to make (someone) dream', connecting it with tül, this is possible only by assuming a homophonous V. and N. of this form, but there is no other trace of VU tül- or this verb, and no convincing sense is given by assuming that either this word or tuldur- is mis-spelt. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. tüş üze olurup (so read) tültürür (the demons) 'sit on your chest and ?' M II 11', 12–13.

VUD toldra:- Hap. leg.; this verb is listed in a Chapter devoted to disyllables, in a small section containing three other verbs all of which are onomatopoeics; the vocalization is chaotic; in the case of this verb the l and d carry cazms in the Perf. but are unmarked in the other tenses; in the case of the other verbs the third consonant usually carries a kasra, but this seems to be an error. Prima facie a Den. V. fr. toldır, possibly onomatopoeic 'to clatter away' or the like. Oğuz XI bo:y (mis-spelt to:y) toldra:dı: tafarraqa'l-nās min kull cānib 'the people scattered in every direction' *Kaş. D tıllığ P.N./A. fr. tıl; 'having a tongue'. S.i.m.m.l.g. usually w. a preceding qualifying Adj., 'having a . . . tongue'; but tillig in some NE languages means 'eloquent' and SW Az., Osm., Tkm. dilli 'glib, voluble'. Xak. XI yavla:k tı:lığ bé:g 'a foul-mouthed husband' *Kaş. VUD tuluk Hap. leg.; the meaning can only be conjectured; the editors suggest a connection with modern words of similar form meaning 'wine-skin' and the like, no doubt der. fr. to:l-, but this is not very plausible; the meaning seems rather 'barrier', or the like, which is a possible meaning for a Pass. Dev. N./A fr. tul-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. It is difficult to see the semantic connection of the Xak. word with this, but it is connected with the meanings of other der. f.s. Xak. XI anything 'spun or twisted' (maftūl mudawwar) is called talku:; hence a 'twisted cord' is called talku: yışığ. *Kaş. D tolğa:ğ (d-) Dev. N. fr. tolğa:-; lit. It is possible that the Uyğ. word was a parallel Dev. N. in -k, tolğa:k, which would have the same meaning, and most modern forms seem to go back to this word rather than tolğa:ğ; they include NE Şor tolğak; Khak. tolğax; Tuv. dolğak 'twisted, intertwined,' and the like; SE Türki tolğak 'birth pangs'; NC Kır. tolğo:/tolğok ditto, and 'the act of twisting; pressing, urgent' Kzx. tolğak ditto; SC Uzb. tūlğok 'birth pangs'; NW Kh., Nog. tolğak ditto; SW Az. dolağ; Osm., Tkm. dolak 'puttees'. Uyğ. VIII ff. VUD tolğar- Pec. to Kaş.; the vocalization and etymology of this verb are most obscure; of the six occurrences the first syllable is vocalized tal- six times with the alternative (two vowel signs) tol- once, nevertheless considering the meanings tol- is almost certainly right; the second syllable is -ğur- four times and -ğır- twice. The word can hardly be a Caus. f. since it is Intrans., and the likeliest explanation is that tolğa:- is a Trans. Den. V. and this verb an Intrans. Den. V. from tolığ in which case the correct form of this verb should be tolğar-. Xak. XI köŋlüm tolğardı: 'my constitution (nafsī) was almost thoroughly upset (read tatamawwac for tatahawwac in MS.) when it was revolted (laqisat) by eating putrid food' (tolğarur, tolğarma:k): art başı: tolğardı: 'a snowstorm rose (qāmati'l-damaq) over the head of the pass' (etc.) *Kaş. VU(?D) 1 tulum the only meaning in Xak. is 'weapons, military equipment'; fr. the medieval period onwards the only meaning, except when it is a Sec. f. of tuluḡ, is 'a skin container, inflated skin used as a float', etc. It is, of course, poss. but not very likely that these are two different words. In both cases the word might semantically be regarded as a N.S.A. fr. tol-, but it is consistently pronounced tulum in all the modern languages in which it survives and is a l.-w. in this form and the second meaning in Mong. ?D tılmaç (d-) 'interpreter'; prima facie der. fr. tıl, but morphologically obscure since -maç is otherwise a Dev. F talu:y (?d-) originally specifically 'the sea', later used for any large body of water. A Chinese l.-w. In 'Nachworte zur Inschrift von Tonjukuk' (in Radloff, Die alttürkischen Inschriften von Mongolei, zweite Folge, St-Pétersbourg, 1899) p. 18, Hirth made the plausible suggestion that it represented the Chinese phr. ta 'great' (Giles 10,470) and lei (Giles 6,843 w. the 'water radical' attached). This lei (Middle Chinese lywi i.e. ?lui) was a medieval name of the Sang-kan River in Chih-li (NE China) down which the Türkü advanced in their raids towards the sea in late VII. As they had never before approached the sea they may well have thought that it was the Great Lui River. An early l.-w. in Mong. as dalay (Haenisch 31) perhaps borrowed direct fr. Chinese. 1 tamğa: an old word ending in -ğa:; not semantically connected with 2 tamğa:; originally a 'brand' or mark of ownership placed on horses, cattle, and other livestock; it became at a very early date something like a European coat of arms or crest, and as such appears at the head of several Türkü and many O. Kır. funerary monuments, see L. P. Kyzlasov, 'Novaya datirovka yeniseiskoi pis'mennosti' (Sovetskaya arkheologiya, 1960, III) and 'O datirovke pamyatnikov yeniseiskoi pis'mennosti' (do. 1965, III). Dis. V. DMR-

VU?D 1 tomur- (of the nose, etc.) 'to bleed'; n.o.a.b. This meaning would be very appropriate for a Caus. f. of tam-, and it is tempting to regard this as a Sec. f. of tamur-, particularly since the word is occasionally so vocalized in Kaş., but there is no doubt that the first vowel was rounded, and a sound change -a->-o- is unlikely at this period even before -m-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. kan tomurmakka em 'a remedy for nose bleeding' H I 126, 129 (specifically the nose, in both cases the remedy is inserted in it); a.o. do. 181 (bertin-): Xak. XI er burnı: tomurdı: 'the man's nose bled' (ra'afa) *Kaş. VU?D 2 tomur- prima facie Caus. f. of VU tom-; 'to cut in a rounded shape'. Hap. leg. (but see tomrum, tomruş-) unless it survives in NE Tel. tomır- 'to cut through (a log)' R III 1238. The first vowel is uncertain; SW Osm. tomruk 'a bud; a boulder; a lump of wood' seems to be a Pass. Dev. N./A. fr. it, and this, taken with the Tel. V. would point to -o-, but in Osm. 'the rounded beak (of a bird)' is pronounced tomşuk, whereas in all other languages, including Tkm., it is pronounced tumşuk, and this looks like a parallel Dev. N. fr. tumış-, Recip. f. of tum-. Xak. XI (following 1 tomur-) and one says er yığa:ç tomurdı: (kasra as well as ḍamma on mīm) 'the man cut a piece of wood in a rounded shape (qata'a . . . mudawwara(n)) like the base of a column' *Kaş. VU 3 taŋ onomatopoeic in the phr. taŋ toŋ; pec. to Kaş.? The vowel in the main entry is ḍamma, but see daŋ. Xak. XI taŋ (or toŋ?) toŋ etti 'the heavy thing made a noise (taşawwata) when it fell on a solid object' Kaş. III 356; a.o. III 357 (daŋ).

VU 4 taŋ (?téŋ) Hap. leg.; the vowel is fatḥa, but this word comes after 1 and 2 toŋ where ḍamma or kasra might be expected; perhaps a l.-w. Xak. XI taŋ 'any building (binā') which once existed, of which the superstructure (MS. 'amātuhu, ? read 'imāratuhu) has disappeared and the foundations (aşluhu) remain as a high mound (tall)'; it is the foundations of any ancient town (MS. qâhandar, read quhandiz) and the like Kaş. III 356.

?F 5 taŋ Hap. leg.; almost certainly a l.-w.; 'sieve' is normally élgek. Arğu: XI taŋ bi'l-ishā' 'with a back vowel', al-munxul 'a sieve' Kaş. III 355.

VU?F 6 taŋ occurs several times in commercial documents in Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. as a measure of capacity for seed cotton; it must have been a fairly large measure since in USp. 2 the rent of a piece of ground for growing cotton was 'ten taŋ kebez', and USp. 70, 6 (bütgür-) relates to a transaction involving borrowing four taŋ kebez in the spring and returning seven in the autumn. Perhaps to be connected with Pe. tang 'a donkey load', but this word also means 'half a load', and in this sense looks like a l.-w. fr. 1 teŋ, q.v. It is, however, unlikely that 1 teŋ should be read in these Uyğ. passages.

1 teŋ (d-) basically 'equal' (to something else), hence 'equivalent' (to something else) and, of the two pans on a pair of scales 'level' (equal to one another). S.i.a.m.l.g.; in NE Tuv.; SW Osm., Tkm. deŋ. A l.-w. in various foreign languages including Pe. (see Doerfer II 941) where in the forms tang/dang it acquired the special meaning of 'half a load' on an animal's back (i.e. one equal to the other half), hence more generally 'a load, or package'. With these forms and meanings these Pe. words were reborrowed by some modern Turkish languages, e.g. Rep. Turkish denk. While there is no reasonable doubt that the Chinese word têng was a l.-w. in some early languages, see 2 teŋ, the theory that it was also the origin of this word (see Doerfer, loc. cit.) is untenable since the meanings are quite different. Türkü VIII ff. Yen. yağ[ıka:] teğmi:ş sü teŋi: yeti: bin oğlan erti: 'the (size of the) army which attacked the enemy was equal to seven thousand young men' Mal. 26, 8.; bodu:n téŋin bili:r erti 'he knew the value (?) of the people' do. 32, 3 (both readings very dubious): Uyğ. VIII ff. F 2 teŋ a word which seems to mean 'kind, sort' occurs in several early texts. It is plausibly suggested in TT VI, p. 90, s.v. teŋ, that in these passages it is a l.-w. fr. the synonymous Chinese word têng (Giles 10,877). The following passages seem the clearest cases of this word, but there are prob. others where it has been mistaken for 2 taŋ and thus transcribed. Türkü VIII ff. Man. TT II 8, 58 (oyun): Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. teŋ adınçığ erteni yinçü 'various kinds of jewels and pearls' PP 34, 1–2; o.o. of teŋ adınçığ do. 71, 5; Kuan. 149.

E 3 teŋ a word so transcribed and translated 'marsh(?)' (Brockelmann), 'lake' (Atalay) has been read in a verse in Kaş. I 528, 9–10; it is not vocalized; it is very unlikely that a word with this meaning should be a Hap. leg. Kaş.'s translation of the verse is 'it describes wild fowling and says "when the goose (should be "duck") saw me in that pool (al-ğudar) with a blunt arrow, this bird (the kaşğalak) dived into the water" '. It will be noticed that the last word of the first line (ata:r in the MS.) is not translated. The likeliest explanation is that al-ğudar is a scribal error for al-ğadā and that the verse read taŋda: bile: körse: meni: ördek öte:r kalva: körüp kaşğalakı suvka: bata:r 'the duck seeing me at dawn quacks; the kaşğalak seeing (my) blunt arrow dives into the water'.

tı:n (d-) Kaş. has two main entries tın 'breath' and tı:n 'rest', but it is unlikely that the distinction in length is semantically valid since elsewhere 'breath' is consistently spelt tı:n (note also that there are two main entries for 'bridle', tin and tı:n). Indeed it is likely that the same word was used for 'breath' and 'rest' (i.e. stopping to take breath). It is significant that this is one of the rare cases of a homophonous N. and V. and that the V. is translated both 'to breathe' and 'to rest'. The two words have therefore been treated as identical. Tın 'breath', sometimes by extension 'spirit, life', survives in all NE languages; NC Kır. (also dım); NW Kaz., Kk. NE Tel. (R III 1342), Khak. also have a word tım 'silent' which seems to be a Sec. f. Türkü VIII ff. Man. tın tura teŋri 'the God of the Zephyr'(?) Chuas. 34, etc. (see 1 tura:): Uyğ. VIII ff. VU tıŋ Hap. leg.; meaning doubtful. It has been suggested that this is the basis of tıŋla:- but this is very dubious. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. ti:n the exact meaning is doubtful; the likeliest is 'halter', or 'leading-rein', but 'bridle' and 'rein' cannot be excluded. Survives in NE several dialects (R III 1360), Khak., and Tuv. (dın). Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. to:n (d-) 'garment, clothing'. S.i.a.m.l.g., in most modern languages for 'outer garment, overcoat'; in SW Az., Osm. don; Tkm. do:n. It has been usual for some years to describe this as a l.-w. fr. Saka ṭauna 'clothing', but it is unlikely that the Turks would have had no native word for 'clothing', and there are difficulties about the initial sound; the resemblance is therefore prob. due to coincidence. Türkü VIII (tonsız, q.v.): VIII ff. 2 tın- (d-) 'to speak'; specifically Oğuz, and perhaps merely an idiomatic use of 1 tın- in the sense of 'to breathe a word'. Survives in SW Az. dın- 'to speak, say' and Osm. tın- generally used in the Neg. f. tınma- 'to pay no attention, pretend not to see or hear'. Oğuz XI (after 1 tın-) and the Oğuz when they tell a man to stop talking (*nahat . . . XIV to XVI TTS I 201; II 293; III 191; IV 218: (XVI in the entries of 1 tın- in Vel. 197–8 söyle- 'to speak' is consistently given as the first translation before diyle-; this is an error, the word was not Çağ. in this sense); XVIII tın- . . . and, in Rūmī, suxn guftan wa ḥarf zadan 'to speak, talk' San. 200v. 20.

VUD ton- 'to be closed, fastened', and the like; prima facie Refl. f. of to:-, but survives in most NE dialects as tun- R III 1439 in this sense. tanu:- this V. presents some difficulties, since it is hard to reconcile its various meanings; there may in fact have been two almost homophonous V.s, tanu:- (d-) 'to suggest, recommend, discuss', and the like, and tanı:- (t-) 'to be acquainted with (someone)', the latter not noted before XV. The evidence points strongly towards -a- in the first syllable, but the main entry in Kaş. has -o- and the word perhaps occurs once in this form in Uyğ. Civ. The suggestion in TT III, p. 26, footnote 5, that this is a Dev. VU tınçı:- 'to be, or become, putrid; to smell foul'. There is some doubt about the first vowel; in the main entry, it is shown twice as -ı- and once unmarked; in II 281, 12 it is -o-/-u- but perhaps only because the word rhymes with yunçı:-; in III 303, 11 it is -ı-, but a philological note is added in which it is given as -a-; and in the Co-op. f. it is three times given as -a-. N.o.a.b. Xak. XI et tınçı:dı: 'the meat putrefied, smelt bad' (aṣalla) *Kaş. (this seems to be corrupt, there is no other trace of final -a:- in this Verb).

?E tançğala-/tançkıla- this V. has been read in the two passages below, and it was suggested in TT III, p. 26, footnote 5, that it is a Freq. f. in -ğala- of tanç-. Such Freq. f.s do exist in some modern languages, but seem to be unknown in Uyğ. There can be little doubt that this is merely tançu:la:- mistranscribed. Uyğ. VIII ff. D töŋdi: pec. to Kaş.; morphology obscure, as in the case of öŋdi:; comparison with töŋre: suggests that it is a Den. N.; töŋit- is at first sight a Caus. f. of töŋ-, but its Caus. f. töŋder- suggests that it was originally toŋıḍ- and also a Den. formation; on the other hand töŋüş- is clearly the Co-op. f. of töŋ-. Neither töŋ nor töŋ- have survived, and it is possible that originally both existed in parallel cf. tın/tın-, toŋ/toŋ-. The basic meaning in any event is 'opposite, upside down'; and the like. Xak. XI KB (that is the way this old world works, that is its traditional custom) kerek öŋdi tutğıl kerek töŋdisi 'either accept its traditional custom or take the opposite' 1547, 4720.

D tanut- Caus. f. of tanu:-, q.v.; with various meanings. S.i.m.m.l.g. as tanıt-, properly 'to make (someone) acquainted with (someone else),' but also 'to make (something) known'. Xak. XI ol maŋa: sö:z tanuttı: amaranī bi-īṣā'i'l-kalām li-ğayrī 'he ordered me to convey the command (or recommendation) to someone else' Kaş. II 312 (tanutu:r, tanutma:k): Çağ. XV ff. tanıt- Caus. f. şināsāndan 'to make acquainted' San. 162v. 2 (quotns.).

VUD teŋit- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of teŋ-, q.v.; in the MS. the first vowel is -e- everywhere. Xak. XI er okın teŋitti: 'the man launched (a'lā) his arrow upwards in the direction of the sky' Kaş. III 396 (teŋitü:r, teŋitme:k, corrected fr. -ma:k).

D tonat- (d-) Caus. f. of tona:- Den. V. fr. to:n. Tona:-, which is not noted in Turkish before XV, Çağ. San. 185v. 7, but was old enough to become a XIII l.-w. in Mong. as tono- (Haenisch 151), could etymologically have two opposite meanings 'to put clothes on (oneself or someone else)' and 'to strip clothes off (ditto)'. The two early occurrences are both in the latter sense, and the V. survives for 'to rob' as tona- in NE Khak., NC Kzx. and tono- in Kır., and as tonna- (? for tonla-) in Tuv., but NE Şor tona- means 'to dress oneself'. Most of these words have a Caus. f. Xak. XI ol meni: tonattı: 'he dressed me in a garment (albasanī'l-ṯawb) as a gift from himself' Kaş. II 312 (tonatu:r, tonatma:k; its origin is to:n ıdtı: 'he sent him a garment'): Osm. XIV ff. donat- (occasionally tonat-) (1) 'to dress, fit out (someone)'; (2) 'to cover with abuse'; (3) 'to equip' (e.g. a ship); fairly common TTS I 218; III 205; IV 237.

D tünet- (d-) Caus. f. of tüne:-; 'to put (someone) up for the night'. S.i.s.m.l. in this meaning. Xak. XI ol konukuğ evde: tünettı: 'he put up (abāta) the guest in the house for the night' Kaş. II 312 (tünetü:r, tünetme:k): XIII(?) At. tünetür tünüŋni künüŋ kéterip 'he makes your night dark, taking away your sun (or day?)' 15: Tef. Makkanı tünetti 'he spent the night in Mecca' 318.

D töŋit- (töŋıḍ-) n.o.a.b. but see toŋta-; for the etymology see töŋdi:; as the Caus. f. töŋder- means 'to invert' and the like this V. is presumably Intrans. meaning 'to bow down, bend down, move downwards', and the like, başın in the quotns. below being in the Instr. and not the Acc. with Poss. Suff. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. PP 19, 4 (1 baş): Xak. XI er başın töŋitti: 'the man lowered (ṭa'ṭa'a) his head' (etc.) Kaş. III 396 (töŋitü:r, töŋitme:k; spelt töŋüt- everywhere): KB yétigen kötürdi yana baş örü töŋitti yana yıldrık ağır naru 'the Great Bear raised its head upwards again; Procyon(?) and Sirius(?) moved downwards again' 6220.

E toŋta- has been read in the passage below but certainly mistranslated. The letters to and tmş are quite clear, the slim letter between them is not. It cannot be a front -s-/-ş- as Radloff originally suggested, both because it would be out of place here and because there is no known V. tosat-/toşat-. Malov's 1959 reading tokta- is impossible both because there is no room for -k- and because tokta- is a Mong. l.-w. which did not occur in Turkish before XIII at earliest. The obvious course is to read it as toŋıt- and take it as an alternative form with back vowels of töŋıt- parallel to the Uyğ. form with back vowels of töŋder-. Türkü VIII (when I ascended the throne the Türkü people, who were expecting to die soon) öğirip sevinip toŋıtmış közi: yügerü: körti: 'rejoicing and being glad raised their downcast eyes and looked up' II E 2.

D tantur- Caus. f. of ta:n-; survives in some of the same languages. Xak. XI ol maŋa: alımın tanturdı: aḥadanī'l-dayn 'he made (or allowed) me to disclaim his debt' Kaş. II 176 (tanturur, tanturma:k).

VUD teŋtür- Hap. leg.; Caus. f. of teŋ-, q.v.; the tā' is vocalized with ḍamma in the Perf. and fatḥa elsewhere. Xak. XI ol kuş teŋtürdi: azcala bi'l-ṭayr wa bi'l-nabl 'he set the bird, or the arrow, in motion' Kaş. III 397 (teŋtürür, teŋtürme:k; cf. the translation of teŋür-).

D tındur- (d-) Caus. f. of 1 tın-; survives in some of the same languages, usually meaning 'to cause to rest'. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (the prince led the old guide to an island) ötrü tınturğalı sakıntı 'and then thought that he would let him rest' PP 36, 8; bir öḍün sönmez tınturmaz emgetirler (the pains of hell) 'torture him without abating or letting him rest for a moment' TT VI 446–7; a.o. TT X 95 (damaged): Xak. XI ol meni: tındurdı: awqa'anī fi'l-rāḥa wa acammanī 'he allowed me to rest and released me from work'; its origin is the word tı:ndı: tanaffasa 'he breathed' Kaş. II 176 (no Aor. or Infin.): Xwar. XIV (VU) tındur- 'to pacify, allow to rest' Quṭb 193; tindür(-gil) 'to bring (a boat) to rest' Nahc. 378, 14.

S toŋtar- See töŋder-.

VUD tondur- Caus. f. of ton-, q.v. regarding the first vowel. Survives as tundur- in several NE languages and NC Kır., Kzx. but the semantic connection with the latter is dubious. In Kaş. the word is listed among V.s with -d- as the penultimate letter, but spelt in the MS. with -t-. Xak. XI ot anıŋ kö:zin tondurdı: (tonturdi:) 'the drug made his eye shut' (ğaṭṭā 'aynahu); also used of anything which covers (or conceals, satara) something *Kaş. D töŋder- Caus. f. of töŋıt-; 'to turn (something) over, to invert', and the like. In Uyğ. the word is consistently spelt toŋtar- (or toŋdar-) although töŋıt- had front vowels in that language and this V. has front vowels everywhere else. Survives with the same meanings in NC Kır. töŋkör-; Kzx. töŋker-; SC Uzb. tünkar-: NW Kaz. tünter-; Kk. töŋker-; Nog. töŋter-; SW Tkm. düŋder-. Uyğ. VIII ff. ?FD tıŋla:- (d-) Den. PU taŋa:n the first letter is undotted and unvocalized in the main entry, which immediately follows the heading -N in a list of words containing three consonants of which the second is -ŋ- and the first anything except y-; as for practical purposes b- never precedes -ŋ- in Xak., the word can hardly be anything except taŋa:n. In the second occurrence the first letter is y- but this is certainly an error. The translation suggests that it was 'a hooded crow, Corvus cornix', or 'a jackdaw, Corvus monedela'. In modern languages these birds are called ala (alaca, etc.) karğa. Xak. XI taŋa:n al-aṣqa' mina'l-ğirbān 'a white-headed crow', that is one of which only the head is white' *Kaş. teŋri: a very old word, prob. pre-Turkish, which can be traced back to the language of the Hsiung-nu, III B.C., if not earlier. It seems originally to have meant 'the physical sky', but very early acquired religious overtones and came to mean 'Heaven' as a kind of impersonal deity, the commoner meaning in the earlier texts. It was the normal word for 'God' in Man. and Bud. texts and was retained in this sense in the Moslem period, although it is rare in KB, where the normal word for 'God' is bayat, and was later largely displaced by l.-w.s like Allāh and xudāy. An early l.-w. in Mong. as teŋgeri (Haenisch 148, Kotv. 1697; but often spelt tŋri, as in Turkish, in religious texts and always déŋri in the ḥP'ags-pa texts). S.i.a.m.l.g., in NE often in the Mong. spelling, in SW Az., Osm., Tkm. taŋrı:, this is prob. an old Oğuz pronunciation, but it is impossible to discover when the change occurred; a l.-w. in Pe. see Doerfer II 944, where it is discussed at great length. Türkü VIII teŋri: is common; in üze: kök teŋri: asra: yağız yer kılındukda: 'when the blue sky above and the brown earth below were created' I E 1, II E 2 it clearly has a physical sense, but this is rare; it is more often used in a religious sense, e.g. teŋri: yarlıkaduk:ın üçü:n 'because Heaven so commanded' I S 9, II N 7, and even as a sort of tribal deity in üze: Türkü teŋri:si: 'the Heaven of the Türkü on high' I E 11, II E 10: VIII ff. teŋri: is fairly common in IrkB, both in a physical sense, e.g. (a hawk) teŋri:din (sic) koḍı: . . . kapmi:ş 'swooped down from the sky' 44; and in a religious sense, e.g. ala: atlı:ğ yol (or yul) teŋri: men 'I am the god of the road (or the spring) riding on a dappled horse' 2: Man. teŋri (consistently spelt tŋri in all scripts) is very common; in yér teŋri yok erken öŋre 'when earth and heaven did not yet exist' Chuas. 162–3 it has a physical sense, but nearly always means 'God' or 'divine': Yen. üze: teŋri: yarlıkadı: Mal.

?E tenri:- Hap. leg.; this V. occurs in a Chapter in which the order of words should be determined by (1) the last consonant; (2) the second consonant (3) the first consonant; following savra:-, sekri:-, semri:-, sanrı:-, and preceding kevre:-, kökre:-, külre-; there are in any event errors in the arrangement and from time to time after (1) the order seems to be determined more by (3) than by (2); in any event tenri:- could not properly follow sanrı:- or precede kevre:-. The second consonant is fairly clearly -n- in the facsimile, but in a word which was almost certainly unknown to the scribe this might well be a miscopying of -f-, for -v-; tevri:- would in fact suit the meaning well, if taken as cognate to tevür- although the morphological connection is obscure. Xak. XI anıŋ başı: tenri:di: axaḍa ra'sahu ka'l-duwār 'something like dizziness attacked his head', that is when sleep overcame him and he resisted it and there resulted a feeling of ants crawling in his head for lack of sleep *Kaş. teŋiz (d-) first actually noted in XI when it replaced talu:y, q.v., which disappeared at that date, but so old that it existed in the L/R language from which Hungarian tenger 'sea, ocean' was borrowed; originally prob. any 'large body of water', whether static, like a lake, or moving, like a large river; later specifically, and finally exclusively, 'the sea'. As al-baḥr, the Ar. word habitually used to translate it, is equally ambiguous it is impossible to trace the exact evolution of meaning and difficult to determine the precise difference between teŋiz and kö:l, q.v., except that the latter seems to have had a narrower meaning. S.i.a.m.l.g. only for 'the sea', except in some NE languages which use talay, reborrowed fr. Mong., in this sense; in SW Az. deniz; Osm., Tkm. deŋiz. ta:r- 'to disperse, or divide up (something)', and the like. N.o.a.b. The supposed Sec. f. tara:- is rather dubious, and may be based on nothing more than the fact that tara:-, q.v., has a vaguely cognate meaning. tir- (d-) the basis of tirig, tirgür-, tiril-; its exact nature is obscure; as it had a Pass. f. it was presumably Trans. and meant something like 'to bring to life, revive', but in that case the status of the Caus. f. tirgür- with precisely that meaning is obscure. S töre: See tö:r and törü:.

törü: (törö:) 'traditional, customary, unwritten law'; one of the basic political terms of the Turkish pagan period. It was closely associated with i é:l and xağan in the sense that it could not exist without a 'realm' as its sphere and a 'ruler' to administer it. It was adopted as a religious term both by Buddhist and Manichaean missionaries in the sense of 'a rule' subordinate to the prescriptions of the true doctrine or religious law, no:m, q.v. In Xak., where it was still common, it meant 'custom, customary law', as opposed to the religious law of Islam (al-şarī'a) and prob. also to the arbitrary decrees of rulers. It became an early l.-w. in Mong. as dōre/töre. It is not clear whether the form töre current fr. the medieval period onwards, and still surviving in some NW languages including Kar. T., R III 1250, and SW Osm. is a direct survival of the old word or a reborrowing fr. Mong. and some confusion arises from the fact that it is homophonous with the word for 'prince' and the like in these and other languages, see tö:r. Certainly in Osm. its true origin was so far forgotten that in Sami 449 it is spelt tura and described as a l.-w. fr. Hebrew torah. See 1 toku:. two basic meanings (1) 'cultivated land', which is somewhat attenuated in the phr. tarığ tarı:-, almost syn. w. tarı:-; (2) 'the produce of cultivated land', usually some kind of grain. Survives in NE Khak. tarığ 'sowing', as in spring sowing, sowing area; Tuv. tara: 'crop, grain crop, cereals, millet'. Elsewhere tarı in most languages; NC Kır. taru:; SW Az., Osm., Tkm. darı means 'millet'. In modern times confused with Pe. dārū 'medicine, drug', which has come to mean 'gunpowder' and is a l.-w. in the last sense in several languages, usually as tarı. F tarka:(/talka:) 'bitter, sour', and the like, lit. and metaph. No doubt a l.-w. fr. some Indo-European language and cognate to the syn. Pe. word talx. In TT III, p. 27, note 39 it is pointed out that in two unpublished Uyğ. D turğa:k (d-) Conc. N. fr. 1 tur-; lit. 'constantly standing', in practice 'watchman, sentry'. An early l.-w. in Mong. as turğağ (Haenisch 155), specifically 'the day watch' (the 'night watch' being kebte'üil a Mong. word); also in Pe., Doerfer II 882. Survived until XVII (Abū'l-Ğāzī), but no longer in use. Xak. XI KB künün turdı turğak tünün yatğakın 'he stood sentry by day and at night on the night watch' 608; (the gate-keeper must get up early and take charge of the gate) kéçe taŋda turğaknı tepretmese 'he must not remove(?) the sentries at dusk and dawn' 2536.

D turkuğ Hap. leg., but cf. turkuğlan-, turkın-; presumably abbreviated Dev. N./A. fr. turuk- in the sense of 'being unable to move for shyness'. Xak. XI turkuğ al-ḥayā' fī'l-amr 'shyness, or diffidence, about something'; one says ol mendin turkuğ ⟨boldı:⟩ şāra minnī ḥayīy li-fī'l badā minhu 'he was shy of me because of what he had done' *Kaş. S.i.m.m.l.g. Xak. XI tarğıl yılkı: 'any animal with black and white stripes (xuṭūṭ) like freckles (al-namiş) on its back' is (called) tarğıl; this Adj. I* 482; (under 'the Suff. -l') 'anything black and white or speckled' (al-abraqu'l-a'ram) is called ṭarğıl, derived fr. the V. tarıldı: 'the thing was separated' (tafarraqa), as if black and white were mixed (imtazacā), and then one was separated from the other I 15, 7: Osm. XIV, XVI ṭarğıl 'spots, spotty, dappled'; in two texts TTS I 679; IV 742.

F tarxa:n (?darxa:n) a title of great antiquity, prob. pre-Turkish discussed at great length (14¼ pages) in Doerfer II 879. In spite of his scepticism, Prof. Pulleyblank's theory in 'The Consonantal System of Old Chinese', Asia Major, N.S. IX, 1962, p. 91, that it represents the Hsiung-nu title of their supreme ruler, shan-yü (in Old Chinese dān-ɣway* for darxan) seems the best explanation yet of its origin. Like tégin it forms its Plur. in -t, tarxat, for tarxa(n)t. It is likely that in this word the Runic and Uyg. k represented x, cf. the form in Kaş. In Turkish it had ceased to be the supreme title and was not even, like tégin and şad, peculiar to the royal family, but it was still a high title, and prob. carried administrative responsibilities. In this sense it cannot be traced in Turkish after XI. It became an early l.-w. in Mong. as darxan (Haenisch 32, Kow. 1676) where it meant not much more than 'a person exempt from ordinary taxation', and later merely 'artisan, craftsman'. The occurrence in Çağ. is no doubt a reborrowing fr. Mong. Türkü VIII (in the list of persons to whom the inscription is addressed; my younger brothers, sons, united clan, people, in the east the şadapıt begs) yırya: tarxat buyruk begler 'in the west the tarxans, officials, and begs I S 1; otherwise only a component in P.N.s Inançu: Apa: Yarğan Tarxan I W 2; Apa: Tarxan II S 13; [gap] Taman Tarxan Toñukuk Boyla: Bağa: Tarxan (described as buyruk 'officials') II S 14; the last also in T 6; Işvara: Tamğan Tarxan Ongin 4: VIII ff. Bud. USp. 23; this is a brief fragment of which no continuous translation is possible; some words are certainly mistranscribed; tarkanıp is read in l. 1; this might be a misreading of tarkınıp or as Malov suggests in a note, tarğarıp.

türk originally a N. meaning 'the culminating point of maturity' (of a fruit, human being, etc.), but more often used as an Adj. meaning (of a fruit) 'just fully ripe'; (of a human being) 'in the prime of life, young, and vigorous'. It has been suggested that this word is identical with the ethnonym Türk and really means 'strong' in a general sense. The latest exposition of this theory is in Doerfer II 888, an article of over 11 pages giving a history of the ethnonym and unfortunately containing several errors. The case against the theory, which is based on the facts that the original form of the ethnonym was Türkü and that türk is never used in the generalized sense of 'strong', is in Studies, pp. 84 ff.; see also Clauson, 'The concept of "strength" in Turkish', Nemeth Armağanı, pp. 93 ff., Ankara, 1962. D tarım N.S.A. fr. ta:r-; lit. 'a single act of dispersing'; Hap. leg. as a common N. but familiar as the name of a river. (VU) Usmı: is perhaps the pre-Turkish name for it. Xak. XI tarım 'branches (a'ḍād) of a river which flows into swamps and quicksands'; Tarım the name of a place on the frontier of Uyğur near Kuça: called Tarım (sic); a river flows through it; the river is called by the same name *Kaş. S (D) terim a royal title or form of address; a l.-w. in Pe., see Doerfer II 1000. In spite of his scepticism, Pelliot's suggestion that this is a crasis of teŋrim, q.v., is the most plausible explanation of this word. Uyğ. VIII ff. turma: Preliminary note. This word occurs in Uyğ. in contexts which suggest that it means 'an offering', prob. of food. In this sense it seems to be an Intrans. Dev. N. fr. 1 tur- in the sense of something which is set before a god. Elsewhere it means 'radish' both in Turkish and Pe. and other languages, see Doerfer II 897. It survives in one or two NW languages; elsewhere it has been displaced by Pe. turp. Doerfer is prob. right in suggesting that, in view of the resemblance between the two words and the impossibility of finding a Turkish etymology for the word in this sense, it is a l.-w.

D 1 turma: Dev. N. fr. 1 tur-; lit. 'standing'; 'an offering'. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. TT VII 16 is a fragment of a text prescribing the offerings to be made to various divine personages. Ll. 7–16 listing the offerings to be made to the planets is headed aşları erser 'as for their foods'; these offerings are vegetables and dairy products. Ll. 17 ff. listing similar offerings to be made to the yakşas is headed yakşalarnıŋ turmaları erser; (and after preaching this sūtra) yavğan turma [gap] egsügsiz(?) yétgürgeli 'offering plain offerings without stint(?)' (to the four divine mahārājās—i.e. the yakşas) Suv. 26, 19–20; tört maharac teŋrilerke turma ötüneyin 'I will offer offerings to the four divine mahārājās' do. 27, 12–13.

?F 2 turma: 'radish'. Xak. XI turma: al-fucl (MS. ficl) 'radish'; hence al-cazar 'carrot' is called sarığ turma: that is 'yellow radish', and the people of Arğu: call it gé:zri: taken fr. the Pe. word for 'carrot', gazar, substituting front vowels (rakkakūhu); the Oğuz call it (VU) geşür, also taken from the Persians; when they mingled with the Persians they forgot some of their language and used Persian instead (various examples follow) *Kaş. D tarma:k Conc. N. fr. tarma:-; as that V. is a Den. V. fr. tarım the basic meaning must be 'something which branches out in several directions', but, perhaps because of its resemblance to tırŋak, it sometimes means 'claw', instead of 'a set of claws, a talon' which would etymologically be more correct. Survives in NE Şor tarbak 'leather glove'; Tel. tarmak

DF tsoyurka:- Den. V. fr. a Chinese word, prob., as suggested in v. G. ATG, para. 96, tz'ŭ 'kind, merciful' (Giles 12,406). An early l.-w. in Mong. as soyurka- (Haenisch 136, Kowe. 1407), which fixes the first vowel. The original meaning in Turkish was 'to have pity on (someone), to be compassionate'; in Mong. it came to mean more practically, 'to show favour to (someone), to reward'. It was reborrowed from Mong. in this sense in the medieval period but now seems to be obsolete everywhere. Mong. and Turco-Mong. Dev. N.s fr. this V. became l.-w.s in Pe., see Doerfer I 228–30, and one of these, soyurğal 'a grant of privileges' lingered on until recently in some Turkish languages. Uyğ. VIII ff. taş/ta:ş Preliminary note. Although Kaş. spells both 'outside' and 'stone' ta:ş, 'outside' is tas in Yakut. Pek. 2589 and daş in Tkm. and 'stone' is ta:s do. 2590 and da:ş respectively. It is clear that this represents a real difference in the original pronunciations of the two words, cf. 1 baş/2 ba:ş. The difference is further reflected in the facts that in SC Uzb. 'outside' is taş and 'stone' toş, that 'outside' in some NE and NW languages is tış/tıs and in modern Osm. dış while 'stone' is everywhere taş/tas/-daş, *and that in Çuv. 1 taş (? d-) normally an Adj. or Adv. 'outside', sometimes a N., 'the exterior, or outside (of something); something which is outside, courtyard, foreign country', and the like; the exact antithesis of iç. S.i.a.m.l.g.; in NE Tuv. daş; SW Tkm. daş; Osm. until about XVI daş/taş more recently dış. Türkü VIII (I had the tomb decorated) içi:n taşi:n (sic) 'inside and out' I S 12, II N 14: Uyğ. VIII içre: ben bulğayı:n temiş taşdındın (sic) [gap] 'he said "I will cause disturbances at home, and abroad . . ." 2 tü:ş (d-) 'dream'. S.i.m.m.l.g. with minor phonetic changes; düş in NE Tuv.; SW Osm.; dü:ş in Tkm. Cf. tül and Çuv. tĕlĕk. Xak. XI tü:ş al-ḥulum 'a nocturnal emission'; hence one says tü:ş körmiş oğla:n ṣabi muḥtalim 'a boy who has reached puberty': tü:ş al-ru'yā 'a dream'; hence one says tü:ş yö:rdi: 'he interpreted ('abbara) the dream' *Kaş. 3 tüş originally 'a halt on a journey'; thence, since a halt is normally made at midday, it came, via such phr. as tüş ö:dı: 'the time to halt', to mean 'midday' and s.i.a.m.l.g. in this sense. Some meanings of Çuv. tĕl belong here. There is sufficient similarity of meaning with tüş- in the sense of 'to dismount' to suggest that these are a homophonous N. and V. In spite of the alternative spellings in Kaş. the vowel was certainly short. Xak. XI tüş al-manzil wa waqtu'l-nuzūl ayḍa(n) both 'a halt', and 'the time to halt'; hence one says tüş ö:dı: 'the time to halt' *Kaş. D tişel- (d-) Pass. f. of tişe:-; s.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI orğa:k tişeldi: 'the teeth of the sickle were sharpened'; similarly one says tegirme:n tişeldi: 'the teeth of the mill-stone were sharpened'; also the teeth of a saw (al-minşār), and the like Kaş. II 128 (tişelür, tişelme:k).

D tuşa:l- (?d-) Pass. f. of tuşa:-; 'to be hobbled' and the like. The only occurrence in Kaş. is dubious, it is in a prov. quoted under tuşan-, and both the actual appearance of the word and the vocalization, where tuşa:lur would be expected, suggest that it is a correction of tuşa:nur by a later hand; but tuşal- s.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI(?) arslan kökrese: at aḍa:kı: tuşa:lır (sic) 'when the lion roars, the horse's legs are hobbled' (yataşakkal) *Kaş. D 1 taşla:- (d-) Den. V. fr. 1 taş; etymologically this V. could be either Intrans. 'to go out' (a meaning pec. to Kaş.) or Trans. 'to send out'. In the meaning 'to throw' taşla- (tasla-, tasta-) s.i.s.m.l., but it is an open question whether in this sense it represents this V. or 2 taşla:- in the lit. sense of 'to throw stones'; the two V.s seem to be distinguished in San., but the translation in Kav. clearly suggests that 2 taşla:- meant, in general, 'to throw'. Xak. XI er taşla:dı: iğtaraba'l-racul 'the man went abroad' Kaş. II 294 (taşla:r, taşla:ma:k): Çağ. XV ff. taşla- (-dı) at- 'to throw out' Vel. 169 (quotns.; in one taşkarı taşla- clearly implies an etymological connection with 1 taş); taşla- (1) bīrūn andāxtan 'to throw out' San. 156v. 7 (quotns.): Xwar. XIV taşla- 'to throw away' Qutb 173.

D 2 taşla:- (? d-) Den. V. fr. 2 ta:ş; 'to throw stones (at someone), to stone' and in some modern languages 'to pave (a place) with stones'. S.i.s.m.l., see 1 taşla:-. Xak. XI ol ıtığ taşla:dı: 'he threw stones (ḍaraba . . . bi'l-ḥıcāra) at the dog' *Kaş. D tişle:- (d-) Den. V. fr. tiş (1 tı:ş); 'to bite'. See tışlat-. S.i.a.m.l.g. as the normal word for 'to bite', but some NE, NW languages use ısır- as well or instead; SW Az., Osm. dişle-; Tkm. di:şle-. Uyğ. VIII ff. D tışlat- (d-) Caus. f. of tışla:- (tişle:-); the Infin. has quite clearly -ma:k, which suggests that in the original MS. of Kaş. all the cognate words had back vowels. S.i.s.m.l. Xak. XI ol anı: tışlattı: 'he ordered him to bite' (a'aḍḍahu bi'l-sinn) Kaş. II 343 (tışlatu:r, tışlatma:k; verse 'he sent a greyhound, ordering it to bite').

D tuşlan- (?d-) Refl. f. of tuşla:-; n.o.a.b. Xak. XI bi:r ne:ŋ bi:rke: tuşlandı: 'one thing was placed opposite (tawaccaha . . . naḥw) another and competed with it' (?; kāna bārāhu) *Kaş. tüz (d-) 'level, flat, even', with some extended meanings like 'equal'. S.i.a.m.l.g.; usually as tüz/tüs; SW Az., Osm., Tkm. düz; the Tkm. forms suggest that Kaş.'s alternative spelling tü:z is prob. an error, due to the voiced final. Türkü VIII (the rulers and ministers were wise and tough) begleri: yeme: boḍunı: yeme: tüz ermiş 'both their begs and their people were orderly' I E 3: Uyğ. VIII ff. toz- apparently a V. homophonous w. I to:z meaning 'to become dust, to volatilise', and the like. In the early period very rare and used only of odours. D tüzgerinçsiz formerly misread as two separate words tüz kerinçsiz, and discussed at length in TT IX, p. 20, notes 7–8; X, p. 15, note 96; clearly a Priv. N./A. fr. a Dev. ka: Preliminary note. Von G. was no doubt right in suggesting in TT X, p. 47 that ka: in the phr. ka: kadaş is a l.-w. fr. Chinese chia 'family' (Pulleyblank, Middle Chinese ka; Giles 1,139). Kaş.'s etymology of kadaş is therefore demonstrably wrong, and the question arises whether the word ka: 'vessel' was not invented to justify this false etymology. Kaş. is the only authority for the word, and it seems likely that if it really existed it, too, was a Chinese l.-w., but there is no obvious origin for it.

F 1 ka: 'family'; see above. Found only in the phr. ka: kadaş, which is n.o.a.b. The evolution of this phr. into kab kadaş, also n.o.a.b., is odd and perhaps due to the false etymology mentioned above. It should be noted that both elements in the phr. are declined separately. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. ka kadaş 'family and kinsmen' is common, e.g. ka kadaş oğul kız eḍ tavar 'family and kinsmen, sons and daughters, movable property, and livestock' U III 6, 2 (i); kamın kadaşımın do. 36, 35; kası kadaşı Suv. 5, 7; a.o.o.: Civ. ka kadaşka tartınğuçı bolur 'he becomes closely attached to his family and kinsmen' TT VII 37, 13 (note ka not declined); in the provisions in commercial documents prohibiting relatives from objecting to an agreement one typical list is éçim inim kam kadaşım 'my elder and younger brothers, my family and relations' USp. 107, 11; 108, 11; 110, 9–10: Xak. XI KB (a man must associate) kab (sic in MSS.) kadaşlar bile 3209; a.o. 3213: XIII(?) Tef. kab kaḍaşımnı (sic) 'my family and kinsmen'; kabı kaḍaşını 198: Xwar. XIV kab kadaşım Qutb 126.

?F 2 ka: 'vessel, container'; see above. N.o.a.b. Cf. ka:b. Xak. XI ka: al-ẓarf wa'l--wi'ā 'a vessel or container' but used only for vessels containing liquids; hence one says ka: kaça: ẓarf wa wi'ā as a Hend. Kaş. III 211 (followed by a para. on -ka: as the Dat. Suff.); (under tü:deş) hence (i.e. by using the Suff. -deş) one says kadaş for 'brother, kinsman' (li'l-ax wa'l-qarīb); the base is ka: and -daş is attached to it, the meaning is that both relatives come from the same vessel (ẓarf) that is their mother's womb I 407; a.o. III 238 (ka:ça:).

kı: Exclamation; Atalay in Kaş. III 212, note says that it is still used in Anatolia. Xak. XI kı: exclamation (ḥarfu'l-nidā) corresponding to the (Ar.) yā'u'l-nidā; hence one says kı: berü: kel 'hi! come here'; pronounced with a very long vowel (?; yumadd bayna'l-qāf wa'l-cārr) Kaş. III 212 (followed by a para. on -kı: as an affectionate Suff. attached to terms of relationship, e.g. ata:kı: yā ubayyā 'my dear father').

kop when qualifying a V. connotes comprehensive action; when qualifying an Adj. means 'thoroughly, completely'; when qualifying a N. means 'all'; *v. G. VU(D) kovı: n.o.a.b.; cognate to kovuk, kovğa: which seems to indicate that the first vowel was -o-; morphologically both could be Dev. VU?D kowuç Hap. leg.; the -w- suggests that the word is Oğuz; if so, prob. a crasis of kovğuç Dev. N. fr. kov-, meaning lit. something like 'persecution'; the alternative form kowuz, specifically described as Oğuz, looks like the Imperat. of a Caus. f. of kov- used as a Pass. Kaş.'s etymology is, of course, preposterous. Oğuz(?) XI kowuç aţar kull sa'fa mina'l-cinn 'the symptoms of demoniacal possession'; the victim is given treatment (yu'ālac), cold water is thrown in his face, and at the same time the words kowuç kowuç are recited, then he is fumigated with rue and aloes-wood (bi-ḥarmal wa 'ūd); I reckon that the word is taken from the expression kaç kaç 'go away and clear out, evil spirit' (uhrub wa firr yā cinnī): . . . kowuz alternative form of kowuç; an Oğuz word; hence one says yé:l kowuz bitigi: 'ūḍatu'l-cinn wa'l-sa'fa 'an amulet against evil spirits and demoniacal possession' *Kaş. kabak/kapak Preliminary note. Morphologically kabak Dim. f. of ka:b, and kapak Dev. N. fr. 2 kap- are quite different words. They are still distinguished phonetically in SW Az. (ğabağ/ğapağ) and Osm. (kabak/kapak) *but in early texts they are spelt and, in some modern languages, pronounced exactly the same, and it is not always easy to determine which word is intended. D kabarça:k, etc.; words of this general form are recorded in forms and with meanings so various that it is at first sight doubtful whether they can all be traced back to a single origin. If they can it must be a Dev. N. fr. kabar- and should mean etymologically 'blister, pustule', and the like. Such a word could be used metaph. for 'the carapace' of a tortoise, and perhaps even for 'box', but it is hard to see how it could have come to mean 'puppet, doll'. The modern words NE Alt. kabırçık; Bar. kabırdzak; Tel. kabırçak R II 451; NC Kır. kabırçık; Kzx. kabırşak all meaning 'fish-scale; mollusc shell; a thin layer (of ice on water, of skin on milk)' seem to be survivals of such a word, but show the unusual sound change -a->-ı- in the second syllable; how old the change is is uncertain, the vowel points in the MS. of Kaş. look like later additions. The situation is complicated by the fact that Mong. koboğor 'hollowed out', hence 'container, case, quiver' (the change in meaning may have arisen from confusion with koboğa/ koboğo, the Mong. form of kovğa:, q.v.)

D kaçığ N.Ac. fr. kaç-; lit. 'running away, flight'. S.i.s.m.l. in this sense w. some phonetic changes. Owing to an overliteral translation of some Sanskrit word it was adopted as a Buddhist (and thence a Manichaean) technical term corresponding to Sanskrit viṣaya 'an object of sensual perception'; similarly kaçığ orun was used for Sanskrit āyatana 'an organ of sensual perception', of which there were six (eye, ear, nose, tongue, body, and mind), corresponding to the six viṣayas. Uyğ. VIII ff. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually for 'good fortune, happiness', and the like, but in one or two languages, esp. in NE, it seems rather to mean 'soul, life force'. More or less syn. w. kıv, q.v. In two late Uyğ. D kutan- (kuta:n-) Hap. leg.; this V. which immediately follows 1 katın- is completely unvocalized and the second consonant undotted, but the -a:- in the Aor. shows that it is a Den. This seems to be merely a Sec. f. of Çağ. katra-, ditto, which is immediately a l.-w. fr. Mong. katari- 'to trot' (Kow. 781, Haltod 165) whether or not that is a native Mong. kaḏır 'grim, brutal, oppressive, dangerous', and the like. The close phonetic and semantic resemblance to Ar. qādir to which Kaş. calls attention has caused some confusion and it is consistently spelt kadır in the MS. of Kaş. but correctly as kaḏır in KB. Survives as kazır in several NE languages R II 379; Khak. xazır; Tuv. kadır. See kayır Preliminary note. The phr. kaḏır kış in Xak. suggests a connection with 1 ka:ḏ- but that V. is Intrans. and can hardly be the base of this word. See Doerfer III 1381. Türkü VIII Kaḏırkan yış ('mountain forest'), which is tentatively identified with the Khingan mountains, I E 2; do. 21, II E 17; do. 39 may contain this word (see Xak.), or kaḏırğan, q.v.: VIII ff. katır 'mule'. A l.-w. in Mong. as kaçir. Survives in SW Az., Tkm. ğatır; Osm. katır, but in all other language groups, except NE, where the word is unknown, the forms kaçır/kaşır and the like are reborrowings fr. Mong., see Shcherbak, p. 95. It would prob. be fanciful to see an etymological connection between this word and 1 kat- arising fr. the mule's mixed ancestry. L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1395. Xak. XI katır al-bağl 'mule' *Kaş. D kaḍrak (kaḍra:k) Conc. N. in -k fr. kaḍra:-, Den. V. fr. kaḍır, see kaḍran-; lit. 'something hard, rough', and the like. Survives as kayrak 'whetstone' in NC Kır., Kzx.; SC Uzb. (kayrok) and several NW languages (cf. bile:gü:). In NC Kır. it also means 'hard, unirrigated land', and in SW Osm. 'shifting sandy soil', which seems a further development of this concept, but in Osm. it now more often means 'slippery ground', perhaps owing to some confusion with 2 *ka:ḍ-. The translation in Kaş. is perhaps influenced by a supposed etymological connection with 1 kat. L.-w. in Pe. and Mong., Doerfer III 1599. Xak. XI kaḍrak (MS. kadrak) ma'āṭifu'l--cibāl wa maḥānihā 'folds and contortions in the mountains'; hence one says kat kaḍrak (kadrak) ditto *Kaş. kuḍur- See kuḍruk, etc.

VUD 1 kutur- 'to pour out, empty', and the like; prima facie a crasis of kuḍtur- Caus. f. of kuḍ-; it is, however, odd that it survives as kotar- with the same meaning in NW Kk., Nog. and for 'to dish up (a meal)' in SW xx Anat. SDD 964, since this suggests an earlier form kotor-. Xak. XI ol unuğ kuturdı: 'he poured (afrağa) the flour from one vessel into another' *Kaş. (D) 2 kutur- 'to be excessive, exceed reasonable limits' in various applications. Morphologically obscure but cognate to kutuz. S.i.a.m.l.g., usually 'to rave, be mad', and the like. Cf. Doerfer III 1439. Uyğ. VIII ff. D kaḍrıl- Pass. f. of kaḍır-; 'to twist (Intrans.); to be twisted (Pass.)'. S.i.a.m.l.g. usually as kayrıl-/kayırıl-. Xak. XI anıŋ bo:ynı: (mis-spelt bo:ynni:) kaḍrıldı: 'his neck twisted' (iltawā), also used when it is twisted by someone else (alwāhu ğayruhu); Intrans. and Pass. VUD 1 kutrul- Hap. leg.?; Pass. f. of 1 kutur-. Xak. XI su:v olma:dın (MS. alma:din) kutruldı: 'the water (or any other liquid) was poured (ufriğa) from the jar' Kaş. II 234 (kutrulu:r, kutrulma:k).

S 2 kutrul- See kurtul-.

D kaḍran- Hap. leg.; Refl. f. of kaḍra:-, which s.i.a.m.l.g. except SW as kayra-/kayıra- 'to whet, sharpen' and, less often, 'to gnash the teeth'. See kaḍrak. Xak. XI beğ aŋa:r kaḍrandı: 'the beg was furious (ḥarida) with him and his conduct and dealings with him were harsh' ('asura) Kaş. II 249 (kaḍranu:r, kaḍranma:k; these two with -d-); a.o. II 267 (kaḍırlan-).

D katrun- Refl. f. of katar-, lit. 'to turn oneself back'. The form suggests that the basic V. must have been katır- or katur-; n.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (when he saw the demons King Caştana) yürekin katrunup (assumed the form of the chief of the warriors) U IV 8, 15; v. G. translated 'steeling his heart', implying a Refl. f. of katur-; this may be right, though the word would be Hap. leg., but the narrative implies some change and 'changing his mind' seems likelier: Xak. XI küle:r er katrundı: 'the laughing man stopped himself' (laughing; imtana'a); its origin is changing one's mind about something (al-ḥarrān fī'l--amr); hence one says ol maŋa: yarma:k bé:rür erke:n katrundı: 'he was giving me money (etc.) and then changed his mind and refrained' (ḥarina wa'mtana'a minhu) Kaş. II 249 (katrunu:r, katrunma:k).

(E) kutrar- Atalay lists this as a Xak. word, but in fact Kaş. II 199, 21 ff. says that 'to save' might perhaps logically be kutrar- but is in fact kutğar- (kurtğar-) because kutrar-, particularly in the Aor. kutrarur would have had too many rs in it.

D kaḏrış- Recip./Co-op. f. of kaḏır-; both forms Hap. leg. Xak. XI ol menıŋ birle: boyu:n kaḏrışdı: 'he competed with me in twisting(fī layy) necks' (etc.); and one says ol ikki: sö:z kaḏrışdı: 'they two contradicted (or refuted, radda) one another's statements' *Kaş. VUD 1 kutruş- Hap. leg.; Co-op. f. of 1 kutur-. Xak. XI ol maŋa: ka:b kutruşdı: 'he helped me to empty (fī ifrāġ) the vessel' (etc.) Kaş. II 218 (kutruşu:r, kutruşma:k).

VUD koḏuru: Ger. of koḏur- used as an Adv. qualifying V.s and less often Adjs.; properly 'energetically, vigorously' and, more vaguely, 'extremely'. Pec. to Uyğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. munça koḏuru ınçıklayu 'lamenting so vigorously' U III 35, 27; a.o. 22, 17; koḏuru tıŋlaŋ 'listen attentively' TT VI 383; Kuan. 176; koḏuru taŋlançığ erürler 'are extremely marvellous' Suv. 348, 3; o.o. U II 7, 6 etc. (kolula:-).

VUD koḏurçuk Hap. leg.; Dev. or Den.(?) N. origin obscure; al-kayd is normally an A.N. meaning 'cunning, deceit', and the like, but must here be a Conc. N. meaning 'doll'. Cf. kabarçak. Xak. XI koḏurçuk 'a doll' (al-kayd), that is models in the shape of people (tamāṯīl 'alā ṣūrati'l-nās) which girls make to play with Kaş. I 501.

PUD kuḏurçak Hap. leg.; this word appears in a section headed fa'al'al of words containing five consonants of which one is -w- or -y-, e.g. bulğayuk, sarkayuk but is spelt kudu:çak or kuru:çak; the meaning suggests that it is a Dev. N. fr. kuḏur-, and the text perhaps originally had kuyu:rçak. Xak. XI kuḏurçak(?) al-'uṣ'uṣ 'the tail-bone, coccyx' Kaş. III 179.

F xağan a title of great antiquity taken over by the Türkü in the specific sense of 'an independent ruler of a tribe or people'. Its earlier history is discussed by Pulleyblank in Asia Major IX, Part 2, pp. 260 ff. It is first noted in an immediately recognizable form as a royal title of the Juan-juan and T'u-yü-hun round about A.D. 400, but Pulleyblank believes that a Hsiung-nu royal title hu-yü (Ancient Chinese γwax-γwāγ) mentioned in connection with events at the end of the 1st century B.C. is an earlier Chinese transcription of the same word. In Türkü and Uyğ. texts it is habitually transcribed kağan, but as both x- and k- would have been represented by the same letter in these texts it was almost certainly xağan. The relationship between it and xa:n, which is practically syn. w. it, is obscure; the two cannot morphologically be connected in Turkish but may have been alternative forms in the languages from which they passed to Turkish. It became an early l.-w. in Mong. as kağan/ka'an (Haenisch 54–6) and re-entered Çağ. in the latter form. It was Arabicized as xāqān at an early date and in that form remained one of the imperial titles until the dissolution of the Ottoman Empire. Türkü VIII xağan is very common; it is normally used of the Türkü ruler himself, but also of the Emperor of China, tavğaç xağan I N 12, the King of Tibet Tüpüt xağan I N 12, and junior members of the royal family installed as the rulers of subject Turkish tribes, Türgeş xağan, Kırkız xağan I N 13: Uyğ. VIII xağan was the title assumed by Uyğ. rulers when they became independent in A.D. 742 Şu. I N 1, etc.: VIII ff. Bud. aḍınçığ ıduk xağan xan süsi 'the army of our elect, sacred ruler (Hend.)' TT VII 40, 123–4: XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict. huang ti 'Emperor' (Giles 5,106 10,942) xağan Ligeti 160; R II 71: Xak. XI (under xa:n) it is the title given to the descendants of Afrāsiyāb, waḥwa'l-xāqān, it is used both in the short and the long form Kaş. III 157: KB xa:ka:n is the title given to the poet's patron 85–6, 102–4, 115: XIV Muh. al-malik 'king' xa:ka:n Mel. 50, 4; Rif. 145 (in margin xa:n): Çağ. XV ff. ka'an (also a Pe. word) xāqān wa xān Vel. 313 (quotns.); ka'an ṣāh-i ṣāhān 'king of kings'; in this connection the Mongols call their own supreme Emperor (pādiṣāh) to whom other *pādiṣāh*s are subject ka'an San. 263v. 8; xakan alternative form (murādif) of ka'an that is 'king of kings' (quotn.); and they call Emperors in general and the Emperor of China in particular xakan 222r. 23 (followed by a list of other royal titles).

?D ka:ğu:n 'melon'. S.i.a.m.l.g. except NE with great phonetic variations, but usually as kavun/kawun; morphologically could be a Dev. N. fr. ka:ğ- but except for xa:tu:n, which is a l.-w., this seems to be the only Turkish word with two long vowels, and it is perhaps also a l.-w. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (vegetables, fruit) ka:ğun *TT VIII K.*4: XIV Chin.–Uyğ. Dict. 'water melon' kağun Ligeti 160; R II 77: Xak. XI ka:ğu:n al-baṭṭīx 'melon' *Kaş. (D) kalı: the normal word for 'if' in Xak., used with the Conditional mood; occasionally means 'how?'; perhaps a later form of kaltı, q.v.; not traceable earlier than Xak., in which it is very common, or later than Muh. It has no connection with kal-, or kalı:sı:z, q.v., but perhaps has some primeval etymological connection with ka:ñu: and kaçan, q.v. Xak. XI kalı: a Particle (ḥarf) meaning kayfa 'how?', law 'if', and iḏā 'when, if'; (in a verse) kelse: kalı: katığlık 'if (iḏā) hardships and misfortunes come to you'; and one says bu: sen bu: ı:şığ kalı: kıldıŋ 'how (kayfa) did you do this?' (the first bu: seems superfluous); and one says sen kalı: barsa:sen 'if (law) you go' *Kaş. F kamağ (?xamağ) 'all'; an early l.-w. fr. Middle Persian hm'g (hamāg). The earliest indisputable evidence for initial k- is in the Man. Syriac script, the Runic and Uyğ. letters used might equally well represent x-, but there is no indisputable occurrence of x-. In the Man. Syriac and Uyğ. scripts the word is usually spelt in the Iranian form kmğ or kma:ğ; the form kamuğ with labial vowel attraction does, however, occur as early as Türkü VIII ff. Survives as kamık/xamıx in several NE languages and kamu in SW Osm. 2 ka:n See xa:n.

F xa:n a title at first practically syn. w. xağan, q.v., but later used mainly for a subordinate ruler; for the etymological connection between the two see xağan. There is no reasonable doubt that the original and normal pronunciation was xa:n. An early l.-w. in Mong. (Haenisch 59, Kow. 718); no longer a royal title, but still used as a title of honour in many Moslem countries, not all Turkish-speaking. Türkü VIII xan does not occur in I or II, but occurs six times in T in contexts where xağan, which also occurs in T, might have been expected, e.g. (the Türkü people) xanı:n bulmayın 'because they had no xan of their own' (parted from the Chinese and appointed a xan; then) xanı:n koḍup 'abandoned their xan' (and submitted again) T 2: VIII ff. xan olu:rupan 'a ruler, taking the throne' IrkB 28; o.o. do. 34, 63: Man. él(l)igler xanlar 'kings and rulers' M III 19, 14; él(l)ig Bögö Xan 'king Bögö Xan' TT II 6, 33; a.o. do. 10, 88: Yen. Tüpü:t xanka: 'to the king of Tibet' Mal. 29, 8; Kara: Xan do. 30, 4; 37, 1, prob. the eponymous founder of the Karakhanid dynasty; a.o.o.: Uyğ. VIII xan occurs six times in Şu. referring to foreign rulers, including Tavğaç xanı 'the Emperor of China' W 3: IX xanka: tap 'serve (your) ruler' Suci 9; a.o. do. 1: VIII ff. Man.-A uluğ él(l)ig teŋri xanı Ezrwa 'Zurvān the great king, the ruler of the gods' M I 25, 32; Kaşu xanı 'the ruler of Kaşu' do. 27, 6: Chr. él(l)ig xan Maşıxa teŋrike 'to the divine king (Hend.) the Messiah' U I 6, 16–17; a.o. do. 7, 2: Bud. erklig xan lit. 'independent ruler', the title of the lord of the underworld, Sanskrit Yama U II 33, 7 (this title had a long history in Turkish Buddhism and still survives in Mong. as erlig kan); (él(l)ig beg U III 68, 4–8), él(l)ig beg xan do. 11, xan do. 16; many o.o. in which it is often combined, or alternates, with él(l)ig: Civ. erklig xan eşigi 'the threshold of Yama' VII 13, 33–4; o.o. do. 29, 11; 30, 15; TT I 60 (busuş): XIV Chin.-Uyğ. Dict. chün 'ruler, prince' (Giles 3,269) xan Ligeti 161: Xak. XI xa:n al-maliku'l-a'zam minhum 'their (the Turks') supreme ruler'; anyone who is descended from Afrāsiyāb is given this title, *wahwa'l-xa:ka:n; both the long and the short forms are used Kaş. III 157; over 20 o.o. translated al-malik: Çağ. XV ff. xan means 'emperor' (pāḍişāh) and for this reason they call the emperors of the Turks xan; since the Sultans of Rūm are descended from the Türkmen people (él) they call themselves xan; after they captured Arabistān and the Hijāz they added to xan the title of sulṭān, which means 'emperor' in Ar. Now in Persia governors and notables of the realm (ḥukkām wa a'yān-i dawlat) are called xan; there can be no other reason than this for the fact that when the Sultans of Rūm as a sign of respect for their own *amīr*s and notables gave them an imperial (pāḍişāhī) title they called them paşa which is a shortened form of pāḍişāh. After the empire of Irān passed to the Ṣafawī dynasty they too, contrary to the wishes of the Sultans of Rūm, called the notables of their realm xan and lower placed persons sulṭān. After the Sultanate of Hind passed to the house of Gurgān they called themselves pāḍişāh, and the notables and chiefs of the realm they distinguished by the title of xan San. 222v. 1: Kom. XIV kan/xan 'emperor' CCI; 'king' CCG; Gr.: Kıp. XIII (in the list of Proper Names) temür xa:n 'iron king' Hou. 30, 7: XIV kan ('blood', also used for) al-malik Id. 74: XV sulṭān kan Tuh. 18b. 8; malik kan do. 32b. 3; 41b. 6.

1 kaŋ 'father'; the oldest Turkish word in this sense; it was gradually displaced in Uyğ. by ata: q.v. and did not survive into Xak. although kaŋdaş, kaŋsık did. Cf. 1 ö:g. Türkü VIII kaŋ is common in I and II, e.g. kaŋım Élteriş Xağan I E 11, II E 10: VIII ff. ögi:ŋe: kaŋı:ŋa: teğü:rmi:ş 'it brought him to his mother and father' IrkB 35; o.o. do. 58 (2 öt), etc.: Uyğ. VIII kaŋım xağan *Şu. 1 kı:n 'sheath, scabbard'. S.i.a.m.l.g.; although Kaş. lists both kın and kı:n, the second form, which survives in SW Tkm., was no doubt the original one. Uyğ. VIII ff. 2 kı:n (kı:ñ) 'punishment, torture', and the like; the variations in spelling point clearly to an original form kı:ñ, cf. 1, 2 ko:ñ. Survives in NW Kaz. kıyın 'punishment' R II 718 and prob. NC Kır., Kzx.: NW Kk., Kumyk, Nog. kıyın 'difficult, embarrassing, complicated'. E kıŋ in the phr. kıŋ közin in U IV 38, 128 is no doubt an error for kıŋır, as suggested in a note thereon; the supposed Instr. form kıŋın quoted therein is no doubt a misreading of that word.

D kanığ n.o.a.b.; prima facie a Dev. N. fr. ka:n-; the translation 'cheerfulness, satisfaction' suits this etymology well, but in IrkB it obviously means some kind of animate creature and may have this second meaning also in Kaş., perhaps 'a favourite, a favourite horse', or the like. Türkü VIII ff. kanığı: ölmiş köŋe:kі: (sic, read köne:kі:) toŋmі:ş kanığı: nelük ölgey ol beglі:g ol köne:kі: nelük toŋğay ol küneşke: olu:ru:r 'his kanığ has died and his pail has frozen. D kınığ N./A. Ac. fr. kın-; 'longing, desire', and the like. N.o.a.b. Uyğ. VIII ff. Man. (having eyes like copper and) kınığ [gap] TT IX 63: Bud. D konak/konuk (konok) Preliminary note. There is no reasonable doubt that etymologically the words meaning 'millet' and 'guest' and the like are identical, both representing an Intrans./Pass. Dev. N. fr. ko:n-, in the first case in the sense of 'something planted in the ground'. Both became early l.-w.s in Mong. as konok (konoğ) (Haenisch 66, Kow. 868), and survive in the same forms in modern languages, but it is more convenient to list them separately.

D 1 konak (konok) some sort of cereal, originally 'millet', of which there are several kinds, but now sometimes used for other sorts. The normal Ar. word for 'millet' is al-duxn (see üyür, tarığ), al-cāwars is a l.-w. fr. Persian gāwars, also 'millet', perhaps of a different kind. Survives in NE Tuv. xonak 'Timothy grass'; SE Türki konak 'maize'; NC Kır. konok 'Italian millet' (in some places 'maize; sorghum'); SC Uzb. kŭnok ditto; NW Kk. konak 'a particular kind of millet'. Uyğ. VIII ff. D 2 konak/konuk (konok) from an early period both (1) 'a guest, a person who comes to stay', and (2) 'the place where one settles down (usually for a short time), lodging' and the like. S.i.a.m.l.g., in NE konok/konık; NC Kır. konok; elsewhere normally konak; SW Osm. seems to be alone in having both konuk 'guest' and konak 'guest; inn; large house, official residence' and even 'a day's stage in a journey'. kır Preliminary note. There are two common words of this form meaning respectively 'high ground' and the like, SW Tkm. ğır, and 'grey', Tkm. ğı:r. Kaş. gives two other meanings which can hardly be connected with either word. In a number of modern languages kır also means 'edge', see R II 733, but this may be an extension of the first meaning.

1 kır originally 'an isolated mountain or block of mountains'; in this sense and more generally for 'high ground' s.i.a.m.l.g., but in some languages, including NW Nog., SW Osm. it hardly means more than 'plain, steppe, wilderness' without any connotation of height. L.-w. in Mong. kira (Kow. 2546) and Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1598. Xak. XI kır al-haḍba mina'l-cibāl 'an isolated mountain' *Kaş. (2) the Turks of Kāşğar use it for bulandī-i kanār-i kardū which is an expression for maraḍ 'illness' (meaning uncertain, lit. ?'the height of the edge of a knife' (?reading kārdū)) San. 295r. 4: Xwar. XIV kır occurs three times; (this world is like) kararmış kır 'mountains which have become dark'; (sometimes admiring her) kır teğ karakın 'eyes like ?'; kırdın kar 'snow from the mountains' Qutb 148: Kıp. XIII (between 'heaven' kö:k and 'sun' kün) al-falak kı:r Hou. 5, 2 (al-falak should here mean 'firmament', but there may be some confusion with its rarer meaning 'a rounded hill'): XIV kır ra'su'l-rābiya 'the top of a mountain'; and in Kıp. (sic) al-arḍu'l-ṣaḥṣāḥ 'level ground' Id. 70; al-arḍu'l-ṣaḥṣāḥ kır Bul. 3, 8: XV in Tuh. 7a. 12 kır is inserted in the margin opposite to barrīya 'desert, waste ground': Osm. XVIII kır . . . 2 kır (?kı:r) 'grey' and the like, particularly as the colour of a horse's coats. Survives in NE Koib., Sag., Şor kır R II 734; SW Az. ğır; Osm. kır; Tkm. ğı:r. 1 ko:r 'loss, damage', and the like. Survives in NE Tel. kor R II 550; Tuv. xora; and recently revived in SW Rep. Turkish but not an Osm. word. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. 2 ko:r apparently both 'the residue of sour milk used to make yoğurt' and '(baker's) yeast, leaven'. Survives in the first meaning in SW Tkm. ğor and in the second in NE Bar.; NC Kzx., Tara R II 549, and Kır. Xak. XI ko:r xamiru'l-rā'ib 'the solids in (sour) milk', that is the residue of curdled milk (ṣubāba mina'l--rā'ibi'l-mudrik awi'l-amiṣi'l-ḥāmiḍ) which is left in the bottom of a jar; then fresh milk is poured on it so that the solids are coagulated and sour milk (yoğurt) is made *Kaş. 1 kur 'belt, girdle'; originally only that worn by a man, later more generally for 'the girth round a yurt' and the like. S.i.s.m.l. Cf. kur-şa:ğ. Uyğ. VIII ff. Civ. (altın): Kıp. XIII al-ḥiyāṣa (ku:şak,) kur (,bé:l ba:ğı:) Hou. 19, 3: XIV kur ditto Id. 70: Osm. XIV and XV kur, esp. in the phr. kur kuşak, occurs in several texts TTS I 497; II 666; III 488.

2 kur meaning rather indefinite, basically perhaps 'rank' (as in 'high rank') and 'stage' (one of a number), hence 'a line, a course of brick-work', and the like. In texts like KB it is easily confused with 1 kur, and some of the medieval translations are hard to fit into this framework though they seem to belong here. Survives at any rate in SE, SW. Cf. kurdaş-. Uyğ. VIII ff. Bud. (faith is the primary requirement) kut bulmış tüzünler kurınta kezigінte barmaknıŋ 'of the progress of good men who have found divine favour through the various stages (of existence)' TT V 20, 6; (if they intend to embark) burxan kutılığ (sic) kurka kezigke 'on the stages (leading) to the blessed state of Buddha' do. 22, 25: Xak. XI kur al-martaba 'rank'; hence one says meniŋ kurım uluğ 'I have a high ('aẓīma) rank' *Kaş. (5) ḥalqa ḥalqa nişastan 'to sit in circles' (at a feast); (6) maṯl wa kafū 'an equal' as in téŋ kur aqrān wa amṯāl San. 285v. 21 ((1) is 1 kur; (2) 'weapon' is a misunderstanding of Mong. kor 'quiver'; (4) is kor 'hot embers', a word now widely distributed but not noted before the medieval period): Kıp. XIV kur ('belt', and also) al-waqt Id. 70; kur al-waqt wa'l-sinn ya'nī al-'umr; one says bu kurda:ş dur hādā lida do. 71 ('time, age, life' are all remote from the true meaning and seem to be an inference from the translation of kurda:ş as 'contemporary' when in fact it means 'of the same rank or social class'): Osm. XIV ff. kur 'rank', and perhaps 'equal in rank' occurs in several XIV and XV texts TTS I 497; II 667; meaning 'course (of masonry, etc.)' it is common fr. XVI onwards I 485; II 651; III 447; IV 541 (transcribed kor).

?S 3 ku:r this might be an unusual abbreviation of kuruğ as Kaş. suggests; but it is more prob. that it was inferred to provide a (false?) etymology for ku:rbaka:, q.v. Oğuz XI ku:r al-yābis 'dry'; an abbreviation of kuruğ; prov. kula:n kuğuğka: tüşse ku:rbaka: ayğır bolur 'if a wild ass falls into a well, the land frog (al-ḍifda'u'l-barrī, i.e. toad?) becomes a stallion' Kaş. III 122: XIII(?) Tef. (wherever that fish went) kuruğ yol 'the dry road' (behind him disclosed him . . . they went after him) kur yérde 'on dry land' 217 (perhaps a simple graphic error).

L.-w. in Pe., etc., Doerfer III 1454. Xak. XI karta:l et al-laḥmu'l-mucazza 'sliced meat' (?this is the normal meaning, but Steingass gives the alternative meaning 'spotted'): karta:l ko:y al-arqaṭ mina'l-ğanam 'a black and white spotted sheep' *Kaş.
